WESTERLY VETERAN ORGANIZATIONS IN DISPUTE OVER FLAG RAISING

(Special to The Bulletin)

WESTERLY, Nov. 11.—"Under Two Flags" might have been the caption of the Armistice day description of the parklet located west of the waiting station of the New Haven railroad. On this embankment are located two brass field pieces mounted on gun carriages and there is also located a flagpole. While the gun carriages have been an object of much controversy during the past week as to whether they should be repainted by representatives of the Budlong post, G. A. R., Commander Samuel Tefft and Adjutant Richard Joseph Rooney, or by representatives of Amos P. Chapman camp, No. 6, Sons of Union Veterans of the Civil War, Robert H. Knight, commander, the real question developed on Armistice day. It was, which of the parties involved should fly the flag from the staff on Tuesday? Early in the morning representatives of Chapman camp raised their American flag to the mast head. Some time later Adjutant Rooney, who has on many previous holidays, looked out for the raising and lowering of the flag, hauled down the camp's flag and ran up his own. The Chapman flag was neatly folded by Mr. Rooney and left on a gun carriage. This flag did not remain there long, for representatives of the Chapman camp returning, lowered the flag sent up by Mr. Rooney and again raised their own. This was not done until Chapman camp members consulted, Westerly police authorities, who maintained a strict hands-off policy. Chapman camp members were reported to have called up their Providence headquarters and also consulted a local attorney. At sundown the flag was lowered and the contest closed for the day.

VETERAN RAILROAD MAN DIES SUDDENLY IN WESTERLY

(Special to The Bulletin)

WESTERLY, Nov. 11.—The death of James M. Sisson, cashier at the Westerly freight office of the New Haven railroad, occurred suddenly Tuesday at 2 a. m., at his home, 37 Oak street. He was aged 52 years and had lived all his life in Westerly. While suffering with a severe cold he had worked at the office on Saturday and even walked out Sunday. Monday he was confined to his home by illness which threatened to develop into pneumonia, and death resulted from a heart attack.

He was born in Westerly, March 20, 1879, the son of the late James Madison and Lydia E. (Weston) Sisson. Attending Westerly public schools, he entered the employ of the Western Union Telegraph company, then located at the Westerly railroad station, as a messenger boy. In 1897 he left the employ of the telegraph company to enter the employ of the railroad company, in which he continued for 34 years, beginning as a checker, then clerk and finally the cashier. Following the retirement of Westerly Station Agent Earl S. Bayler, he became the acting agent and continued in that capacity until the present station agent, John J. Flaherty, came to Westerly from Pawtucket, R. I.

From his long railroad employment, Mr. Sisson became well and favorably known to business and manufacturing men of Westerly and vicinity, many of whom stood ready to use their influence to have him named the agent, a responsibility which Mr. Sisson did not at first care to assume. He was very well liked by all railroad employes with whom he came in contact and established a reputation for strict and careful attention to his railroad duties, completing them with accuracy and dispatch.

He was united in marriage on June 25, 1907, with Miss Ruth Steadman, by whom he is survived. They had two children, Mary, aged 12, and James, Jr.

Recount Shows Slight Errors

Recount of the votes cast in Westerly on the last Tuesday election day, completed the past week-end by the Rhode Island state returning board in the capitol in Providence, made some changes in the figures announced by the warden's count.

Senator-elect Howard E. Thorp, republican, lost five votes and his democratic opponent, Mrs. Margaret W. Perry, sustained a net loss of 70 votes. The final vote showed Senator Thorp elected by 327 votes.

In the first Westerly voting district there was a slight change made in the warden's count. Democratic Representative-elect Dr. John M. O'Connell made a net gain of six votes and was declared elected over his republican opponent, Edward J. Butler, by a total of 70 votes, the warden's return having shown 64.

Mr. and Mrs. Granville G. Graves and sister, Miss Mary E. Binns, leave today for their home in Florida, after spending the summer with their sister and husband, Mr. and Mrs. John S. Lewis, of Westerly, R. I.

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Tavernese, 46 Pierce street, was the scene of a surprise miscellaneous shower last Sunday evening in honor of their daughter, Theresa.

Thirty of her girl friends attended and gave the bride-to-be many useful gifts. The hostess of the evening was Miss Felice Quaratella. Miss Theresa Tavernese will be married on Nov. 27 to Salvatore Sanquadolce, of Downer street.

The adjourned meeting of the Westerly Red Cross chapter was held in the council chamber of the town hall Monday afternoon at 4:30, when the roll call chairman, Frank G. Ahearn, outlined the work of the campaign. Henry L. Burdick, chairman of the Westerly chapter, presided at the meeting and instructed the workers. Lewis Stanton, treasurer of the chapter, assisted.

At the election of officers, Henry L. Burdick was again chosen chairman of the local chapter. Other officers elected were the following: Harry R. Milner, vice-chairman; Mrs. Florence Trainer, secretary; Lewis A. Stanton, treasurer.

Executive committee: Mrs. C. B. Cottrell, Arthur M. Cottrell, Samuel H. Davis, Mrs. Samuel H. Davis, Mrs. Frank Sherman, Thomas Perry, Mrs. Harry R. Milner, Karl G. Stillman, Willard H. Bacon, Albert R. Stillman, Robert Burnett, Miss Bessie Taylor, Dr. M. H. Scanlon, Mrs. Charles Schlesinger, Mrs. William D. Hoxie, Clarence Vars, James M. Pendleton, Dr. Frances Kenyon, Miss Pauline Stahle, John B. Taillon, James McCormick, George Harris, Mrs. Charles Hickox, Mrs. Harry Pendleton, Dr. John Champlin, Frank G. Ahern.

Armistice Day Celebration

Armistice day observance in Westerly was favored by excellent weather for those who marched in the street parade, first to the Pawcatuck World war memorial on Moss hill and returning to the Hiker memorial of the Spanish-American war veterans in Wilcox park. The line of march was headed by Westerly Motorcycle Policemen Robert M. Kessel and Charles E. Button. At the Pawcatuck memorial, Rev. Harold R. Crandall, pastor of the Pawcatuck Seventh-day Baptist church, made the address.

In Wilcox park, Rev. Harvey H. Conklin, pastor of the Grace Methodist Episcopal church, was the speaker.

Capt. Shelby Nicholas was marshal of the parade, and his aides were Capt. Robert N. Freestone, John J. Donahue and John Howard.

The order of march was as follows: Marshal and aides, Sea Scout band, Battery E, R. I. N. G.; Veterans of Foreign Wars, V. F. W. auxiliary, Spanish War Veterans, Spanish War auxiliary, American Legion and Drum corps, American Legion auxiliary, British Colonials, British Colonials auxiliary, Westerly Boy Scouts, Westerly Girl Scouts, Westerly Sea Scouts, Sons of Veterans, Grand Army of the Republic in automobiles, Budlong and Hancock Relief corps in automobiles.

A float with large Red Cross attended by young girls and followed by boys with banners, was symbolic of the opening of the annual Red Cross roll call to be held in Westerly beginning this week.

Westerly motorists generally made two pilgrimages to Stonington on Armistice day. In the forenoon the dedication of the World war memorial in front of the Stonington town hall was the objective. In the afternoon the annual football game between Westerly High school and Stonington High school, resulting in a 12 to 6 victory for the blue and white W. H. S. players, attracted visitors to the Stonington athletic field.

Miss M. E. Binns left Westerly Monday night on the Federal express for Orlando, Fla., where she will pass the winter season.

Miss Louise Blackler, of New York city, was the Armistice day guest of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. James H. Blackler, in Westerly.

Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Greaves were Westerly passengers on the Federal express Monday night for Orlando, Fla., near where they will pass the winter months.

Miss Esther Schofield has been confined to her home by illness.

MYSTIC

There was a very good attendance at an entertainment in West Mystic grammar school Monday afternoon, commemorating Armistice day. The program opened with the pupils of the two rooms marching in to music by the orchestra. The school sang America, the Beautiful; there were recitations by several of the children; Mrs. Wilfred Lamb, in behalf of Phoebe Packer Rathbun tent, No. 3, Daughters of Union Veterans of the Civil war, presented the school a flag. Monday was the 20th anniversary of the organization of the Daughters of Veterans. Mrs. Edith Bacon, principal of the school, accepted the flag in a short speech of appreciation. Mrs. Carl C. Cutler, chairman of the school board, gave a very interesting talk. The Star Spangled Banner was sung and the orchestra closed the program by playing America. The orchestra is composed of Arlene Leonard, pianist; Marian Miner, Charles Gildersleeve and Charles Stribl, violinists; Arthur Griswold, cornet.

At the close of classes at Mystic academy, Monday afternoon, all students went to the Assembly hall where they listened to an interesting talk on Armistice Day by the principal, Miss Joanna Burnet. Following this there was a program of music.

Local radio owners listened in Tuesday morning to an address by President Hoover, opening the Red Cross drive.

Day Of Vital Interest

Flags were out along the streets from the station to the top of Baptist hill and at many private residences Tuesday. Some places of business did not honor Armistice day by closing; the post office had regular hours. Many residents considered that this day meant as much to the nation as July 4th. It certainly meant a great deal to local people who had loved ones come back from the war, and a great deal to the Gold Star mothers whose loved ones will never return.

A large number of residents and members of the American Legion and auxiliary were in Stonington Tuesday and took part in or witnessed the dedication of the war memorial, made possible by the efforts of J. F. Trumbull post, Woman's Relief corps, and James W. Harvey post, American Legion and auxiliary.

Mr. Lewis will have sole supervision of the following sanctorums: Asmie, of New Haven; Korom, of Hartford; Yembo, of Willimantic, and Ahab, of Mystic.

Wm. H. Corbit's Death

BARTLETT HIGH BEATS PUTMAN IN QUEST OF QUINEBAUG TITLE

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, Nov. 11—A late season attempt by the Putnam high school gridsters to shake off the losing jinx, which has been trailing them since September, failed this afternoon when the Noyesmen succumbed to an 8-0 defeat inflicted by their ancient rivals, Bartlett high school of Webster, Mass. As the green and white aggregation pushed the Noyesmen further down the ladder of defeat, they marched one step nearer to the mythical Quinebaug valley championship honors and also succeeded in keeping their slate unmarred.

The Finnegan men from the southern Massachusetts town appeared to be the more superior team. Their line and back field combination functioned more smoothly than did the Noyesmen, although the Websterites lacked the punch usually becoming a squad of this calibre. From the outset Webster played more aggressive football. Play after play they drove the Blue and White back to positions within inches of their own goal line, but only on one occasion were they successful in penetrating the Putnam frontier and rushing the ball over the scoring stripe. Late in the second quarter Deary, Webster quarterback, after receiving a lateral pass took his stand behind a wall of interference and heaved a long pass that glided gracefully into the outstretched arms of Cragen, who made the only touchdown after a run of 15 yards. Shortly after Webster gained an additional two points when a safety was scored.

The final Bartlett scoring threat was made in the fourth period when Dearly skirted right end and brought the ball up to Putnam's 12 yard line. With renewed vigor, Captain Anderson and his battered players checked two Webster line rushes and batted down a pair of passes, to gain possession of the ball. To get through the Bartlett wall was impossible, so Ryan, was called upon to punt. Getting off a 35 yard kick, Ryan moved the line of scrimmage to the 50 yard line. Again Bartlett was unable to make a first down and lost possession of the ball. The next plays were passes from Perry, to both ends and a series of short aerials to Rose, Putnam guard. Franklin, agile left wingman, received the first successful pass to gain about 15 yards. The second was completed by Rose on short range. An exchange of intercepted passes gained Putnam possession of the oval for a third time during the hectic period and in a succeeding play, a long pass from Perry to Franklin brought the Noyesmen into scoring territory for the first time during the encounter. As Anderson's men were driving for an opportunity to even up matters the referee's whistle brought the game to a close and also established Bartlett's superiority over the Noyes coached eleven for the second time in as many seasons.

Cartier, who is subbing at quarterback for the disabled veteran Reynolds, is doing well but the absence of the seasoned and experienced regular is having its affects on the morale of the team. Reynolds who was injured early in the season, is an excellent ball carrier and has added ability in being fleet of foot. Reynolds has been excused from training for the past few weeks in anticipation of his hurts departing in time to enable him to carry the colors against Killingly in the Thanksgiving day clash. This game will be the outstanding dish on the county schoolboy menu on November 27th.

STRIBLING BEATS DEKUH IN INTERESTING BOUT

ATLANTA, Ga., Nov. 11.—(AP)—Arthur Dekuh, the six foot four inch Italian, held W. L. "Young" Stribling so well that the best the Georgia heavyweight could do here today was win a comfortable decision on points in ten rounds.

The tigerish attack which had flattened Otto Von Porat, Phil Scott and K. O. Christner was missing, and the slow fight and frequent clinching by both men was booed on several occasions by the fans.

Dekuh outweighed Stribling more than 30 pounds and this advantage served him well. Dekuh scaled 226, Stribling 191.

For seven rounds Dekuh was the aggressor, with most of the fighting in the clinches. The last three rounds found Stribling forcing the fight, striving to add Dekuh to his long list of knockout victims. The big Italian took most of Stribling's blows on his shoulders and elbows.

In the last round Stribling landed a series of lefts to the head and rushed Dekuh to the ropes but the New Yorker held on, kept his chin well protected and made Stribling shoot most of his punches to the body.

Despite a cold drizzling rain, some 6,000 spectators watched Stribling in his first match in the south since his triumph over Scott. It was held in an outdoor arena in Spiller park, home of the Atlanta Crackers of the Southern Association.

Although neither fighter landed a real damaging blow during the entire fight, Dekuh pounded Stribling hard about the body, while the Georgian also got in a series of body blows mixed with his shots for the chin.

The first three rounds were fairly even, but Stribling gave Dekuh a shellacking in the fourth, although none of the thrusts were powerful enough to rock the Italian.

Stribling got his left to going consistently for a few moments in the sixth and peppered Dekuh about the head but all the blows were quick, short thrusts and carried little weight.

Again in the ninth and tenth Stribling rushed Dekuh to the ropes swinging both hands, but the Italian always managed to clinch and hold Stribling until he was out of danger.

HOPPE AND COCHRAN TO DEFY BILLIARD TRUST

NEW YORK, Nov. 11.—(AP)—Willie Hoppe, for years king of the professional billiard players and still holder of the 18.1 balkline championship, announced today that he will challenge the control of the National Billiard association by defending this title in a special match with Welker Cochran in New York next week.

Hoppe asserted the match was designed to complete a break with the association, which has claimed complete control of professional billiards under the sponsorship of equipment manufacturers. The veteran said that in addition to Cochran he expected to have the support of Jake Schaefer, the present world's 18.2 balkline champion, in the move for an independent organization.

Hoppe, Cochran and Schaefer, at various times, all have been salaried performers, playing under the direction of the so-called "trust" otherwise the National Billiard association. Recently the policy of retaining the stars on salaries was abandoned, as a result of which, Hoppe declared, the players have decided to break off relations entirely and operate independently.

They have gone to the extent of buying their own equipment, Hoppe announced, for next week's title match, to be played in twelve 300-point blocks at the Strand Academy.

Hoppe brought the 18.1 title back from France 24 years ago after defeating the great Maurice Vignaux. Interest in this style of billiard, regarded as the most difficult of them all, lapsed and most of the competition among the outstanding players was at the 18.2 style. Hoppe dropped a decision to Schaefer five years ago at 18.1 but the National Billiard association refused to recognize it as a championship match and Willie kept the diamond emblematic of the title.

LYMAN HARRIERS OUTRUN WINDHAM TEAM, 19 TO 36

The Lyman Memorial high school cross country team defeated the team of the Windham high school over the course in Willimantic yesterday. The score was 19 to 36 in favor of the Lebanon team. Howard, the Lyman ace, who has been having hard luck in his recent races, led the pack home in the fast time of 12.40 for the 2¼ mile course. The first four men to finish were Lebanon men, following each other across the line at intervals of a few feet, Spellacy had a commanding lead at the half-way mark, but was overtaken and passed in the last 50 yards in a sprint by Howard. The order of finish was—Howard, Spellacy, Greenberg and N. Manning, with four Windham men following closely. Goldstein finished ninth to complete the scoring.

Next Wednesday the Lebanon team will run the Aggie Frosh at Storrs.

Time 12.40. Score: Callahan, Timer, Meloon.

BATES WINS MAINE TITLE BEATING COLBY

LEWISTON, Me., Nov. 11.—(AP)—Bates' fighting Bobcats today put the second Maine state college football championship in as many years under their belts in winning from Colby, 14 to 0.

Last season Dave Morey, in his first year as coach at Bates whipped an eleven into shape which trampled over Colby, Bowdoin and University of Maine, to annex its first championship in more than 20 years. By defeating Colby today, the Bobcats added another Maine state college record with six consecutive state conference victories.

Colby battled the Bates eleven hard throughout the game but two runs of 76 and 27 yards by Sid Farrell, fullback, in the third period went for touchdowns.

THREE TEAMS TIE IN S. N. E. LEAGUE

(Special to The Bulletin)

PLAINFIELD, Nov. 11—Danielson, Plainfield and Willimantic won their games in the Southern New England Basketball league here this evening and thereby kept their slates clean with two wins apiece. This was done at the expense of Jewett City, Stafford Springs and the New London Boys club, tailenders. Tonight's games made up the second round of contests that have been played at the community house.

The Jewett City team, which had previously lost and failed to show any large amount of strength or playing ability, showed great improvement against the strong Willimantic team, but lost 59 to 23. After a poor start in the first half the Jewett City boys flashed an offense in the second half to hold Willimantic to a score of 25 to 17. In the first half the losers were only able to score six points against the Thread City team's 34. N. Mandell and Nichols were high scorers for Willimantic.

The Plainfield-Stafford Springs setto was the feature game of the evening, the locals squeezing out a 35 to 21 win, after a strong comeback. Plainfield was trailing at the half, 11 to 8, but in the second half the team opened up with some long spectacular shots to pull ahead and win by a fair margin. Peterson led the winners in the scoring column, getting a total of 13 points.

In the final game Danielson clashed with the New London Boys club to win out 24 to 9 in a hard fought game. The Danielson quintet was too strong for the Whaling City team, leading the latter by a 9 to 1 count at the half. The winners struck their stride in the second half and piled up an additional 15 points, while New London had to be satisfied with eight more points.

Due to unfortunate circumstances Putnam had to cancel its game with the Westerly team. A number of its players were injured playing football during the day.

Williams and Bitgood handled the game nicely to the satisfaction of a large crowd.

In the games next Tuesday evening the schedule calls for play as follows: At 7:30, Plainfield vs. Putnam; 8, Jewett City vs. Stafford Springs; 9:30 New London Independents vs Willimantic; 10, New London Boys club vs. Westerly.

GERMAN HORSEMEN WIN INTERNATIONAL TROPHY AGAIN

NEW YORK, Nov. 11.—(AP)—Losing none of its daring horsemanship and brilliant jumping ability in two years away from the National Horse show an bark, a trio of German army officers rode into the Madison Square Garden arena tonight, sweeping the best of five nations before them to win the international team trophy for the second time in three years.

New York society looked on from the boxes; the lower East Side and Yorkville viewed the proceedings from the more distant seats—all hoping for the United States' first victory. But once again, as in the past five years, fortune favored an invading team and the American trio left the arena with second place as its share of the honors.

AMATEUR ATHLETES BETTER 172 RECORDS DURING THE PAST YEAR

NEW YORK, Nov. 11—(AP)—In a concerted attack upon time and distance by masculine and feminine athletes alike, America's star performers in swimming, track and field bettered 172 existing marks during the last year, it was revealed today by the Amateur Athletic union.

Applications for recognition of these performances as records have been filed in behalf of the athletes who made them and will be passed upon at the 42nd annual convention of the A. A. U. in Washington, Nov. 16, 17 and 18.

Largely because of the remarkable achievements of Helene Madison of Seattle in swimming and of Stella Walsh of Cleveland in running, the feminine athletes out-did the supposedly stronger sex in the number of records set in these sports.

The girl swimmers broke 46 records as against 28 for the men and the women track stars accounted for 24 while the men collected 17.

Miss Madison, sensation of the swimming world at 17 years of age, led all the other record-breakers, having bettered 12 world's and 27 American marks in the last eight months. Acceptance of her records is regarded as certain, giving her a clean sweep of all American marks from 100 yards to a mile and wiping out all except five of the existing world's free-style standards.

Miss Walsh's name appears 11 times. One of the best of her performances is a 10 8-10 seconds 100 yard dash made at Philadelphia last May 30.

Heading the list of men's performances are Frank Wykoff's 9 2-5 seconds for the century and a discus throw of 169 feet, 8 7-8 inches by Paul Jessup of Seattle, both of which exceed the present world records.

Wykoff was clocked in the magic 9 2-5 at Los Angeles on May 10, 1930. He did not use starting blocks, the mechanical device that deprived George Simpson of recognition of his 9 2-5 performance the previous year. The present world's and American record is 9.5, held by Eddie Tolan of the University of Michigan.

Jessup's mighty discus throw was made at the National A. A. U. championships at Pittsburgh, the scene also of a 222 foot 6 3-4 inch javelin throw by Jimmy Demers of the Los Angeles A. C. and a shot put of 52 feet, 5 3-4 inches by Herman Brix of the same club. Recognition for all of the record-beating deeds recorded there is sought.

Among the notable achievements which will become official American records if approved are a one mile run in 4:12 2-5 by Ralph A. Hill, University of Oregon, at Eugene, Ore., May 17; one-mile relay, 3:25 2-5 by a Stanford university team at Los Angeles, April 12; and a discus throw of 167 feet, 5 3-8 inches, by Eric Krenz, Stanford university, at Palo Alto, Calif., May 17.

The list also includes George Simpson's 220 yards around a turn in 21 3-10; Steve Anderson's 120-yard high hurdles in 14.4; and Phil Edwards' half mile in 1:52 1-5.

Those marks which are accepted as American records and which exceed present world standards will be passed on to the International Amateur Athletic federation with recommendations for world record recognition.

MACFARLANE AND COX WINNERS IN FOUR-BALL PLAY

PINEHURST, N. C., Nov. 11.—(AP)—Willie MacFarlane of Tuckahoe, N. Y., winner of the 1929 United States open golf championship, and Wilfred "Wiffy" Cox, of Brooklyn N. Y., today won the 11th annual Mid-South best ball match for professionals with a score of 132.

Second prize money of $400 went to Jim Dante, of Madison, N. J., and Dan Williams, of Westfield, N. J., with rounds of 67 and 66 for a total of 133.

George Heron, of Westbury, N. Y., and Willie Klein, of Williston, N. Y., took third prize money of $300 with their score of 135, made up of a morning round of 68 and afternoon score of 67.

In a tie for fourth and fifth places with the aggregate of 136 and dividing the $200 and $150 awarded for those positions, came Roland Hancock, Lynchburg, Va., and Palmer Maples, of Rocky Mount, N. C.; Herman Barron and Tom Greavy, a Port Chester, N. Y., team, and Tom Boyd, of Stapleton, N. Y., and Cyril Walker, of Ridgewood, N. J., a former national open champion.

STEVENS SENDS TEAM THROUGH SECRET SESSION

NEW HAVEN, Nov. 11.—(AP)—Coach Mal Stevens sent Yale's varsity football squad through a long and varied workout today in another secret session at the bowl.

New plays in preparation for Princeton and Harvard which took up the Elis' entire time yesterday were again given some attention today. In addition, the squad devoted considerable time to a signal drill, and fundamentals.

From today's practice and with the return of McLennan, it appears that Coach Stevens plans to revert to his early season tactics of reserving Albie Booth for some time after the start of Saturday's game with Princeton. McLennan, who started as quarterback in all the early season games until he was injured, took Booth's place in the first backfield today, while Dunn was replaced by Taylor at right halfback. Parker and Crowley were the other members of the first backfield in today's signal drill.

Coach Stevens today said he would order no scrimmages for the squad during the remainder of the season.

RICHARDS RETURNS TO PLACE ON HARVARD TEAM

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Nov. 11—(AP)—The Harvard varsity football squad, strengthened a bit by the return of Richards, regular left tackle, today spent most of its practice session at the movies. After the coaches put the players through their usual fundamental and signal drills, all adjourned to the Dillon Field house where the Michigan-Harvard game films were exhibited.

Head Coach Arnold Horween and his aides pointed out all of the mistakes made by the luckless Crimson gridsters in the clash with the Wolverines and several of the scenes, especially the fourth period incompleted forward to Barry Wood, indicated just how narrowly Harvard missed the victory, which Michigan clinched by the close margin of 6 to 3.

Captain Ben Ticknor and Vic Harding were in uniform but did nothing more strenuous than a light jogging. They and all of the other Harvard regulars will probably be put through a stiff scrimmage tomorrow when Horween starts work in earnest for Holy Cross, which pays its annual visit to the stadium on Saturday, the week before the Crimson's objective game with Yale.

N. Y. U. HARRIERS RETAIN CROSS-COUNTRY TITLE

NEW YORK, Nov. 11.—(AP)—New York university cross-country team successfully defended the metropolitan championship today with Nat Lerner and George Barker sharing individual honors. The two Violet stars finished the six-mile course in Van Courtland park in 30 minutes, tied for first place, after Lerner lost his shoe and trailed in fourth place at the three-mile mark.

New York university took first, second, third, fifth and sixth places for a total of 17 points. Manhattan, in second place, finished five men fourth, eighth, eleventh, 13th and 15th for a total of 51 points. Columbia was third with 52 points through finishing men 7th, 9th, 10th, 12th and 14th. City college of New York was last with 87. Fordham did not enter a team.

FOUR VETERANS RETURN TO DARTMOUTH QUINTET

HANOVER, N. H., Nov. 11.—(AP)—Four lettermen were among the 20 candidates who answered the call Coach Dolly Stark sounded today to open the Dartmouth basketball season. They were Captain Gray Magee, Laurie Myllykangas, Ed Picken and Ben Bruce. The Green will open its court season here on December 10 against Providence college. Stark, however, will not have his entire squad in action until after the close of the football season.

COAST GUARDS TO PLAY FIRST UNEMPLOYMENT BENEFIT

NEW YORK, Nov. 11.—(AP)—Apparently a tiny college with a football squad of 23 men is going to steal the limelight from the big fellows and play the first game for the benefit of the unemployed. Long Island university announced today that 50 per cent of the proceeds of a match with the Coast Guard academy of New London, Conn., in Brooklyn, Saturday night, would be turned over to Mayor James J. Walker's committee on unemployment.

HACK WILSON GIVEN WELCOME BY TOWNFOLK

MARTINSBURG, W. Va., Nov. 11.—(AP)—The folks in Martinsburg went down to the depot this afternoon and welcomed this town's best known citizen home for the winter.

Mr Louis R. Wilson, Chicago Cubs' outfielder and leading home run hitter of the National league last season, was met at the train by his wife and young son and by a crowd of baseball fans.

"Hack" put on his best smile and granted his full approval when approached by a committee seeking his consent for a "real public welcome." It will be given in the Martinsburg public square Thursday night as a testimonial of the community.

Wilson did not discuss his plans for the coming winter, but he will probably spend it hunting. He was delayed in his return home by a vaudeville engagement in Chicago.

BRUINS TAKE OPENER BY SMALL MARGIN

BOSTON, Nov. 11.—(AP)—The Boston Bruins opened the National Hockey league season tonight by edging the greatly improved New York Americans out of an exceptionally fast game by the slim margin of 1 to 0.

The Bruins' single tally came late in the opener when the "dynamite trio," Cooney Welland, Dit Clapper and Dutch Gainor, were bearing the brunt of the Boston attack. Eddie Shores, scrappy Boston defense man, staged a rush with Clapper and shot over a nicely timed pass just as the forward swept inside of the star spangled secondaries.

Billy Burch led the American drives and several of his shots required marvelous saves by "Tiny" Thompson, the Boston goalie.

FRIGARD INJURED IN DARTMOUTH PRACTICE SESSION

HANOVER, N. H., Nov. 11.—(AP)—Aarnie Frigard, Dartmouth varsity halfback, today suffered an injury that may keep him out of Saturday's game with Cornell at Ithaca. This speedy ball carrier, one of the big guns in the Green's aerial attack, was chasing a long pass and he split his left hand between the middle fingers when he failed to make a clean catch.

He was taken to the college infirmary and two stitches were required to close the cut. Head Coach Jackson Cannell thought the injury would keep his star out of action until the final game with Stanford at Palo Alto.

The Green squad spent most of the afternoon working on passes.

RANGERS TAKE MEASURE OF LEONARD'S QUAKERS

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 11.—(AP)—Benny Leonard's Quakers and Lester Patrick's New York Rangers introduced National league hockey to Philadelphia at the arena tonight, the New Yorkers winning 3 to 0. Approximately 5,000 persons saw the contest.

Patrick's blue shirts completely outplayed the home team, scoring in each of the three periods. The New Yorkers threatened several other times, but the fine work on the part of Miller, Quaker goal, prevented further scoring. Miller was credited with 34 saves. John Roach also played a sensational game at goal for the Rangers, having 31 saves.

RECREATION FIVE PLAYS AT JEWETT CITY TONIGHT

This (Wednesday) evening, at the Lachapelle billiard room, the newly organized Recreation Five from Norwich will play the Jewett City Jolly Five.

The Norwich team plan to play a fast bunch of cue artists and expect to give the Jolly Five a busy evening.

The Jolly Five would like to hear from the Bohemian club of Danielson, Wauregan, Dayville or any other team. Answer through this paper.

Fisk All Stars Win

In one of the greatest games played at Fisk's park, the Fisk All Stars, showing greater strategy, defeated the undefeated Graceful Elephants by a 19 to 0 score. Although this was their first game played they completely outclassed the Elephants in all stages of the game. The Four Horsemen of the Graceful Elephants could do nothing against the line of their opponents. Although outweighed, the All Stars showed better leadership with the straight running plays, easily scored at each opportunity offered. The running of Mondor, Juba, Lefty and Ambot each of whom ran between 10 and 40 yards at least three times during the play, was the feature of the game. Using nothing but passes and rushing, they did not have to resort to deception, although they were a good deal lighter; they seemed possessed with uncanny speed and power.

The barge race, also over the Henley distance, went to the freshman A heavy crew, which led the freshman A 150-pound crew by two lengths.

The final tournament of the season was held at the Norwich Golf club on Tuesday. It was the first annual Armistice day tournament and had a field of seven, who braved the chilly winds to get in a last round of golf before putting away the clubs for the winter. John Fontaine and Bob Patrick tied for low net honors, Fontaine having a gross score of 83 with a ten handicap and Patrick having an 89 gross and 16 handicap. Ernest Bean won the consolation with a gross score of 109. Others entered in the tourney were W. B. Mitchell, Dave Morton, E. W. Perkins and T. McDermott.

It seems that Young Stribling, who is knocking at the portals of the heavyweight citadel defended by one, Max Schmeling, will have to show better than he did against DeKuh yesterday before he gains recognition as a challenger. The bout did not go over big even with the home folks, who were not averse to expressing their feelings in loud and boisterous boos. It was one of those slow, uninteresting bouts that are a cross between a boxing tete-tete and a wrestling bout.

Hockey got underway last night in the big loop and another big year is expected. This game of hockey has swept the country by storm and people are traveling anywhere from 50 to 100 miles to attend the games. Right here in Norwich there are hockey fans who regularly attend games in Boston, Providence, New Haven and Springfield. It is one of the fastest sports known and there is a thrill every minute of play.

PATRIOTIC PROGRAM GIVEN WHEN HOME CHAPTER MEETS

There was a good attendance Monday afternoon at the Johnson Home, when the November meeting of Home chapter of the King's Daughters was held, with Mrs. William E. Manning leader. After the opening exercises of Scripture reading, prayer and singing of hymns, those present were privileged to listen to a most interesting report of the recent King's Daughters' convention held in New London two days last week. The report was submitted by Mrs. Aubrey W. Jarvis, first delegate from Home chapter, and was greatly enjoyed, especially by those members of the chapter who did not attend the convention.

The meeting Monday was devoted to patriotic songs, etc., in commemoration of Armistice day. During the business period, announcement was made that the next meeting of the sewing society would be Friday, Nov. 21, at the home of Mrs. Edward Briggs. A nominating committee, Mrs. Arthur Fulton, Mrs. Homer D. Gager and Mrs. Robert Hull, was appointed to nominate officers for the ensuing year.

The company present sang America and The Red, White and Blue. Mrs. Charles Burke sang the solo, "Till We Meet Again." A sketch on Armistice day, from Mary Dillon's book, The American, was read by Mrs. Manning. Other numbers on the program were the pledge to the flag, singing of The Star Spangled Banner, a patriotic medley on the piano by Mrs. John Olsen, and repeating the chapter motto. The meeting closed with a social hour, when the entertainment committee served sandwiches and coffee. The fourth chapter of Hebrews will be the study lesson for the December meeting.

OBITUARY

Miss Elizabeth Coffey

Monday evening the earthly life of Miss Elizabeth Coffey came to an end at her home at Norwich Town. When she was a child she became a member of the family of Lewis A. Hyde and became a much loved daughter and sister. For a number of years she had made her home with the eldest daughter, Mrs. Herbert L. Yerrington.

She was the oldest member in point of membership of the First Congregational church, Norwich Town, and taught Sunday school classes of both boys and girls, on whom she has left her impress.

Though quiet and unassuming, she was loved by everyone who knew her. She was an understanding friend, a wise counselor and one whose very presence was a benediction. She kept her young point of view through all the years, so was a favorite with the young people. Her many friends in Norwich Town and elsewhere will miss her presence among them.

She leaves relatives in Brooklyn, N. Y., Mrs. Luke O'Reilly, and other grand-nieces and nephews.

WEDDINGS

Paradis-Shelley

At St. Patrick's church, Tuesday morning at 8 o'clock, occurred the wedding of Miss Frances Theresa Shelley of No. 21 Oak street and Leo Paradis, son of Mrs. Anne Paradis of No. 25 Pratt street, Taftville. Rt Rev. Msgr. Michael H. May, rector of the church, performed the ceremony. Miss Sadie Brogro was the bridesmaid and Frank Shelley, cousin of the bride, was the best man.

The bride's gown was of brown satin and she carried yellow chrysanthemums. The bridesmaid wore a gown of brown satin and carried pink carnations. After the ceremony there was a wedding breakfast at Thames Tavern, Gales Ferry, and later in the day the couple left for a wedding trip to Providence and New Bedford. On their return they will reside at the home of the groom's mother. Both bride and groom are well known and popular with their many friends who extend them best wishes for a happy married life.

TAFTVILLE

Armistice day was observed quietly in the village. Many of the stores closed for the day, and the postoffice and schools were also closed. Some of the villagers went to Norwich to take part in, or watch, the parade there. Flags flew from many residences.

One of the town's youngsters surprised some of the residents Sunday by showing a whole handful of native chestnuts, refusing at the same time to divulge the location of the tree.

The members of the Ladies' Rifle team of the German Shooting club of Lisbon held their regular monthly meeting Friday evening.

The Germania Schutzen Verein of Blissville has sent out invitations to all members and their wives for a turkey supper to be held Nov. 26 at their clubhouse.

The committee in charge of the ninth annual meeting of the Eastern Connecticut Mills association, which is to be held at Ponemah hall on Nov. 19, has arranged for a high class entertainment, following an oyster stew supper.

Mr. and Mrs. George H. Young, former Taftville residents, who moved to Pittsfield, Mass., are now making their home in Newton, Mass.

At the annual fair of the Taftville Congregational church, the members of the Ladies' Benevolent society are to have charge of the home-cooking and fancy work booths.

NEW AMERICAN FLAG AND POLE DEDICATED AT MASONIC TEMPLE

In the presence of a large audience the Masonic bodies of the city dedicated a flag and flag pole at the new Masonic temple on Washington street, with appropriate exercises at 8:30 o'clock Tuesday morning. The Masonic bodies were present as were delegations of patriotic organizations and a large number of spectators.

The Norwich Rotary band opened the programme after which Howard L. Stanton, president of the Masonic Temple Corporation, welcomed the gathering. While the band played The Star Spangled Banner Harold T. Robinson and Clifford E. Wilson, World war veterans, raised the new flag.

Address Upon "The Flag"

Rev. Joseph Cooper, pastor of Trinity M. E. church, gave the dedicatory address, saying:

Masonry and patriotism are synonymous. The flag and the Masonic symbol are joined together by a covenant that cannot be broken. Three million Masons in this country are among the staunchest defenders. The flag flies for us an emblem of its ideals. It evokes the finest emotions. It incites to loftiest endeavor. It points to truest brotherhood. To claim its protection is our right wherever we go. To defend its honor is one of our greatest responsibilities. To keep its beauty unstained is our most bounded duty. We should face that duty with courage.

The flag is a precious inheritance. It speaks to us of the hallowed past. It is bloodred with sacrifice. It has borne aloft in scores of terrible moments when destiny was at stake, and any faltering would have meant disaster. You may inscribe upon its folds the names of Bunker Hill, York Town, Buena Vista, Gettysburgh, San Juan, Manilla Bay, Belleau Woods and you have only begun to mention some of the moments when the honor of the flag was at stake. But through storm tempest it has been handed down to us riddled and scarred torn and tattered, yet never dishonored in the ultimate issue of the fight. Again it flies over the cherished institutions that have made us what we are. Over the schoolhouse where groups from every land are welded into great democracy. Over the courts of justice where the ermine of the judge speaks of equal rights between a man and his neighbor. Over the halls of legislature where men make the laws by which we are governed. This flag is the visible personification of our national ideals and spreads its protecting folds over everything that makes life worth while.

This flag shall carry us forward into a larger life of social and economic opportunity where every man shall find the largest place he can fill with credit to himself and to the community in which he lives. This flag must not be made to cover a narrow selfish falsely so-called patriotism which forgets the rights of all men while pretending to guard them. This flag shall be a progressive symbol ever forging ahead into new paths of finer living. As a nation our place is not in the rear but in the van and far ahead leading the onward march shall be the flag we love and behind that flag a united people seeking to live in peace with all mankind.

PINES REPLACE CHESTNUT FOR TELEPHONE POLES

When the chestnut blight swept through the northeastern states a few years ago and destroyed all chestnut trees, the electric light and power companies and the telephone companies faced a serious problem in trying to obtain suitable poles for replacements and new construction.

After considerable study the telephone company is now using slender but sturdy pine poles from the south, to replace old poles in the rural districts. The first shipment was received in September, and within a few years these strong, trim poles will be seen in place of the chestnut poles along the by-roads and highways of Connecticut.

Looking for poles to replace the chestnuts, pole-using companies saw in the tall, smooth, slender pines a satisfactory source of supply for many years.

Pine poles are treated by a special process which makes them durable. The process consists of impregnating them with creosote which preserves them for many years. After treatment, pine poles are better than chestnut, for they are not only neater in appearance but have longer life and greater strength. In addition, they are straighter than chestnut, are more easily transported, and are readily available. Those arriving here come from the South Atlantic and East Gulf states.

RULES AGAINST CLAIM BY OYSTER GROWERS

Cities along the Connecticut coast line are not liable for damage to oyster beds by sewage polluted waters so long as the sewage does not constitute a public nuisance, according to a decision handed down by the supreme court of errors last week.

The opinion upholds the decision dismissing the $100,000 damage action filed against the city of Norwalk by Frederick F. Lovejoy for injuries to his oyster beds alleged to have been caused by the discharge of sewage in tidal waters. It also upheld the dismissal of his petition for an injunction restraining the city from emptying its sewage into the river near his beds on the ground that the riparian rights of the public to drain their lands into the sea were not to be precluded by the interests of private individuals.

The supreme court decision written by Justice George E. Hinman, holds that Lovejoy purchased his oyster beds, two miles distant from the river outlet, with a knowledge of the risks of pollution from sewage. The decision further recognized the fact that the city had undertaken the erection of a suitable sewage disposal when conditions warranted it in 1927.

"If the situation of the plaintiff was such as to entitle him to relief from injury to his oyster beds from pollution by sewage, the inquiry is pertinent, when would the defendant city become liable to him?" the decision says, "No duty to change the method of sewage disposal arose until the refusal of the government to issue certificates for the harvesting of his oysters in 1927.

"In September of that year, the city employed engineers to make a survey of the problem of sewage disposal; an exhaustive report was rendered and a proposal to procure funds by the issuance of bonds and to proceed to build was approved by the voters.

"At the time of the superior court trial," in November, 1928, "it was the plan of the city to proceed without delay to construct a disposal plant. We think that this situation affords no indication that the defendant city acted unreasonably, or negligently to take steps toward the correction of the conditions of which the plaintiff complains."

MRS. MITCHELL TO BE CONVENTION SPEAKER

How Connecticut's penal and reform institutions are managed and supervised will be considered by the delegates to the tenth annual convention of the Connecticut League of Women Voters at Bridgeport, November 19 and 20. Mrs. Frank A. Mitchell, a member of the state department of public welfare, Roy L. McLaughlin, superintendent of the Connecticut School for Boys, and Miss Elsie Roberts of the Connecticut Child Welfare association will speak.

Mrs. Mitchell of Norwich, who has been a member of the public welfare department for 25 years, will discuss the duties of the department in supervising the state's penal and correctional institutions.

Mr. McLaughlin recently came to this state from Cranston, R. I., where he was superintendent of the Sockanosset school for Boys. He is regarded as one of the foremost leaders in juvenile correction work in the country, being president of the national conference of juvenile agents. Mr. McLaughlin has started notable changes in the treatment of boys at the Meriden school since he became superintendent there. He will present his ideas of effective correctional methods and his plans for the school.

Miss Elsie Roberts of New Haven has recently returned from England where she made a study of the Borstal system of handling delinquents. Miss Roberts will describe her observations. There will be opportunity for the delegates to question the speakers.

This part of the convention program is scheduled for 3:15 on the afternoon of November 19. Mrs. Edith Valet Cook of New Haven will preside.

WITHOUT DRIVING LICENSE IN BROADWAY ACCIDENT

Anthony Duke of this city was arrested Tuesday shortly before noon on a charge of driving a machine without having his license with him. He was arrested by Officer Howard Coburn following an accident on Broadway, near Otis street. A Ford he was operating was involved in a crash with another machine. The Ford was badly damaged. The reason Duke didn't have his driver's license with him was because it was dropped on the floor at the Castle Garden golf course where it was found during the morning by an attendant.

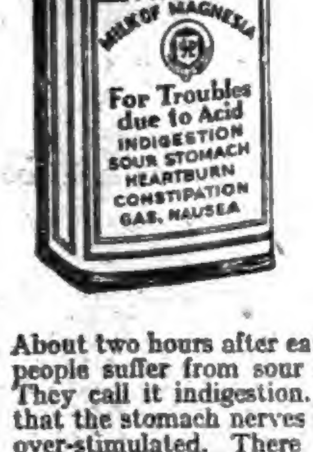
ROVER SCOUTS PICK SITE FOR ADIRONDACKS LEAN-TO

Accompanied by Scout Executive John Sellman several Rover Scouts spent Tuesday afternoon in clearing the road into the new Boy Scout camp and in cutting a trail. The scouts explored the far end of the camp and chose a spot for the building of one or more Adirondack lean-tos. According to the scout executive at an early date about a dozen or more of the older scouts will go out to the new camp site and have a bean supper and start work on the lean-to. As soon as a suitable shack can be built, the two large boats now at Camp Wakenah will be removed to the new site and the motor will be brought into use and the Rover Scouts or Sea Scouts will motor down to the tunnel plant dam on an exploration trip.

All the scouts who have seen the camp are enthusiastic about it. Among some of the many projects that only money and hard work can put through are a dam for swimming, shelters, mess hall and other buildings.

Older scouts who were present on the trip Tuesday were: Bill and Bob Agnew, Stewart Hynd, Bill Finlayson, Harry Payson and John Sellman.



WHEN FOOD SOURS . . .
Sweeten the Stomach instantly

About two hours after eating many people suffer from sour stomachs. They call it indigestion. It means that the stomach nerves have been over-stimulated. There is excess acid. The way to correct it is with an alkali, which neutralizes many times its volume in acid.

The right way is Phillips' Milk of Magnesia—just a tasteless liquid; pleasant, efficient and harmless. But it kills excess acids. It has remained the standard with physicians for more than 50 years.

It is the quick method. Results come almost instantly. It is the approved method. You will never use another when you know.

Be sure to get genuine Phillips' Milk of Magnesia prescribed by physicians for over fifty years in correcting excess acids. 25c and 50c bottles—any drugstore. The genuine is always a liquid—never made in tablet form. Look for the name Phillips' on wrapper and bottle.

GLASS DENOUNCES ACTION OF DEM. PARTY SPOKESMEN

The Senator Rebukes Seven Party Leaders For Their "Apology for a Democratic Victory at Election"—Declares That It is Beyond His Comprehension "Why Anybody Should Assume That a Democratic Administration of Public Affairs at Washington Could Constitute a Menace to the Business of the Nation"

WASHINGTON, Nov. 12.—(AP)— Denouncing the recent cooperation pronouncement issued by seven democratic party leaders, Senator Glass, democrat, Virginia, today took these party spokesmen to task for their "apology for a democratic victory at the election."

"It is beyond my comprehension," Senator Glass told newspapermen, "why anybody should assume that a democratic administration of public affairs at Washington could constitute a menace to the business of the nation, not even if one should define 'business' to mean only the stock market."

He cited the records of the Cleveland and Wilson democratic administration and compared the with republican rule of the last eight years and concluded:

"Of course no sensible democrat could desire or intend to obstruct any sound governmental proposal merely for the satisfaction of embarrassing a political adversary; at the same time no democrat should be willing to engage in any apologetics or to bridle his traditional faith merely to avert the fear of persons who think their illicit sanctions and special privileges may be taken away.

FUTURE OF INDIA TOPIC AT ROUND TABLE CONFERENCE

LONDON, Nov. 12—(AP)—The future of India's millions was cast today into the caldron of the momentous round table conference which King George himself in a hopeful speech opened in the great gallery of the house of lords.

A scene splashed with oriental splendor such as rarely has been viewed before in the western world was the setting for the ceremonial inauguration of the important negotiations the gravity of which was stressed in the royal address and those which followed by Prime Minister MacDonald, the Indian princes and the delegates from British India.

East met west around two large oval tables, one set within the other, in the great red and gold hall where Americans participated at the opening of the five power naval conference last winter.

The king spoke but a few minutes, his words being carried on an international radio hook-up. He shook hands with his laborite prime minister, Ramsay MacDonald, bowed left and right to the delegates, and left the hall escorted by the Lord Chamberlain. The Indian conference was inaugurated.

MILITARY FUNERAL FOR GEN. TASKER H. BLISS

WASHINGTON, Nov. 12. — (AP) — General Tasker H. Bliss was buried today on the hilltop overlooking the Potomac where lie the nation's military heroes.

The wartime chief of staff of the army found his last resting place between the graves of President Taft and Robert Todd Lincoln.

His body was lowered into the grave by six enlisted men from Walter Reed hospital in accord with one of his last requests. During his long illness at the hospital, they had attended him.

All of the military honors commensurate with his high rank were bestowed by the troops of soldiers and marines, the high officials and his former colleagues who gathered for the ceremony. Among those who served as honorary pallbearers was Colonel Edward M. House of Texas, the last surviving member of the group that comprised the supreme war council.

DEFRAUDED 18,000 TO 20,000 BALD-HEADED AMERICANS

PEORIA, Ill., Nov. 12.—(AP)—Frederick P. Goodwin of Strawn, Ill., was fined $3,000 today in federal court for selling by mail a "hair growing electric skull cap" purchased, the testimony showed, by 18,000 to 20,000 bald-headed Americans.

The cap, its advertising asserted, "projects electricity below the surface of the scalp, awakening and rejuvenating the stunted roots" of the hair.

In a newspaper and magazine and direct-by-mail advertising campaign, Goodwin had given a Chicago address for orders, the government showed, but when several dissatisfied customers sought refunds by returning the caps, they failed to collect. Postal investigators, acting on complaints found that the address was of a man who forwarded orders to Goodwin at Strawn.

PROMINENT DETROIT MAN COMMITS SUICIDE

DETROIT, Mich., Nov. 12. — (AP)— Bart H. Manning, prominent Detroit clubman and financier who shot himself early today, died tonight at Cottage hospital, Grosse Pointe.

Financial reverses including a $2,000,000 loss in the stock market were said to account for the act.

Manning posted a special delivery letter last night to Edgar C. Marshall, a close friend, who is an undertaker. In that letter Manning announced his intention of taking his life and told where his body might be found.

Immediately, Marshall called the police, and led them to the spot designated by Manning. He was found there, a bullet wound near his heart.

DEADLOCK ON LIMITING LAND AND AIR ARMAMENTS

GENEVA, November 12—(AP)—Delegates to the league of nation's preparatory disarmament commission continued deadlocked today on a plan of limiting land and air armaments.

Hugh S. Gibbons, American representative, in reiterating the opposition of the United States to limitation by fixing a budget of expenditures, suggested if the other powers wished to draw up a treaty based on budgetary limitation while leaving the United States free to use her own method of direct limitation with full publicity, the plan would be acceptable to the United States.

Spokesmen for several nations made friendly references to the American compromise plan today, although the French delegate, Massigli, was very critical of it, contending budgetary limitation, while not perfect, was the best available method of achieving limitation.

REACTION IN INDIA TO CONFERENCE IN LONDON

BOMBAY, Nov. 12—(AP)—The convening in London of the Indian round table conference resulted in repercussions throughout India today, culminating in a riot in this city in which 25 demonstrators were injured and the entire local "war council" arrested.

Hartals, or cessations of work, were observed in various degrees in Bombay, Calcutta and Karachi.

In Calcutta, the city corporation adopted a resolution recording its "emphatic condemnation of the round-table conference having regard to the circumstances in which it was constituted and its entirely unrepresentative character." Five European members, three Hindu liberals and one Mahomedan walked out of the council chamber before a vote on the resolution was taken.

SENATOR FESS MAKES EXPLANATORY STATEMENT

WASHINGTON, Nov. 12.— (AP) — Senator Fess of Ohio tonight denied published reports that he would resign as chairman of the republican national committee.

"That is a fabrication made out of whole cloth," he asserted. "They don't know what they are talking about."

The republican chairman was criticized in statements last night by Representative Britton, republican, Illinois, and former Senator Wadsworth, a New York republican, for his recent warning against measures to repeal the prohibition amendment.

The two anti-prohibitionists advocated that another chairman of the national committee be selected. Fess, an advocate of prohibition, said today he spoke for himself only and not as chairman of the national committee.

BERLIN, Nov. 12.—, (AP) —Another great European war in 1932, resulting in the annihilation of Germany, is predicted by General Erich Ludendorff in a pamphlet published today.

In the 93-page pamphlet, the one-time World war military giant expresses the belief that the war, beginning May 1, 1932, will find Germany, Austria, Hungary, England and soviet Russia opposed to France, Poland, Czechoslovakia and Rumania.

He visualizes Germany as the battleground of the nations, with her cities razed by air attacks, her civilian population left to their fate and the nation's youth perishing in masses on the battlefront.

CUBAN AUTHORITIES PEEVE AIMEE SEMPLE McPHERSON

HAVANA, Nov. 12— (AP) —Aimee Semple McPherson, incensed over the refusal of Cuban immigration authorities to permit her to land unless she admitted she had come from Panama under the fictitious name of "Betty Adams," remained aboard the S. S. Toloa tonight.

Immigration officials declared that "Betty Adams" was registered aboard the ship as an Englishwoman.

The evangelist was indignant with newspapermen who revealed her identity to the purser of the ship.

Mrs McPherson insisted that her name was Adams but did not furnish immigration officials with anything to identify her under that name.

HOOVER CONFERS WITH CONGRESSIONAL LEADERS

Movement For Six Hour Working Day

Subject of Conclave of the Rulers of the American Railway Brotherhoods

CHICAGO, Nov. 12—(AP)—The rulers of the American Railway Brotherhood who won the eight hour day for railroad labor in 1916, began a secret conclave today whose anticipated issue is a demand for a six-hour working day.

The session opened ostensibly without a program. That a reduction of working hours and the relief of unemployment in their membership was their purpose was tacticly understood.

The five principal brotherhoods were represented by 800 general chairmen at the conference, expected to last a week or more. A temporary organization was perfected at the morning session with V. L. Schauberger of Oil City, Pa., chairman. Schauberger is head of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers of the Pennsylvania lines.

After a brief organization meeting the conference adjourned to another meeting place and committees, working always behind closed doors, started drafting their program.

If a formal petition for a six hour day emerges as the result of the conference it is certain to meet opposition from the railroads. When the meeting was called three weeks ago head of several western lines said a movement for shorter hours would be untimely. The carriers, they said, are in no position now to put in operation such a scheme, with income reduced by light freight tonnage this year. Furthermore, it was pointed out that the American railroads are laid out in divisions based upon an eight hour day and a revision would require a change in the entire divisional system.

The five brotherhoods of the United States and Canada represented at the sessions are the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen, the Order of Railroad Conductors, the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, and the Switchmen's Union of North America.

Six Suggestions By Nat[illegible]range Master

[illegible] Marketing and a More Justly Distributed System of Taxation Included

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Nov. 12.—(AP) —With the key note "equality for agriculture," the 64th annual convention of the National grange opened here today. Delegates from more than thirty states heard National Master Louis J. Taber in his annual address urge a program which included better marketing reclamation and irrigation restriction and a more justly distributed system of taxation.

Mr. Taber's address sounded the keynote of the ten-day meeting, which will bring more than 2,000 delegates and unofficial visitors to Rochester.

The grange master offered six suggestions to accomplish the readjustment which he said was needed to help agriculture establish itself on a firm economic basis. They were, briefly:

1—Stabilization of values.

2—A higher price level for farm commodities.

3—More justly distributed system of taxation.

4—Extension of the federal farm loan system.

5—Readjustment of the nation's freight rate structure.

6—Restriction of immigration and conservation of natural resources.

Criticizing the speculation in grain on the Chicago board of trade, Mr. Taber said:

"As long as this present system remains with its violent price manipulations, it is obvious that there must be a method of protection by hedging for the safeguarding of the buyer and processor, but when hedging and short selling take the form of speculation and gambling in the necessities of life, the public is injured.

"Unfortunately for the American farmer, our present marketing structure operates with no concern as to the price he receives. It is a sad commentary on our present boasted wheat marketing program, that during the recent period of agricultural's greatest depression, and the grain grower's consequent distress, the Chicago board of trade erected a $12,000,000 building, while the producer suffers near annihilation."

GRANDSON OF FORMER KAISER LOOKING FOR JOB

NEW YORK, Nov. 12—(AP)—A grandson of the former German kaiser arrived in the United States today to look for a job.

Prince Louis, a dark-haired youth more than six feet tall, left for Detroit immediately to see Mr. Ford. He expects to sail for home on the Bremen this week. He said he has admired the United States greatly since he visited here two years ago, and hoped to return in a short time, although that would depend on his interview with Mr. Ford.

SEARCHERS DISCOVER FOOTPRINTS OF KAUFMAN

JACKMAN, Me., Nov. 12—(AP)—Renewed hope that Mitchell B. Kaufman, missing Boston rubber manufacturer, had outlived eight days and nights of wandering in the big woods of Jackman imbued searchers tonight with the discovery of evidence that Kaufman still might be on his feet.

Prints of Kaufman's mismated rubber shoes and the ashes of a camp fire, were located late today eight miles northeast of Crocker Camps from which the millionaire had set out last Wednesday on a hunting expedition.

Three airplanes, a pack of hounds and a posse of veteran woodsmen have conducted a fruitless search of the vast region for Kaufman and brought open expression from Sheriff Elton L. Markham earlier today that the manufacturer had perished.

When he came out he refused to answer any questions about his testimony.

SEES ELECTION RESULTS AS HANDWRITING ON THE WALL

Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler Predicts Downfall of the G. O. P. if the Party's Platform in 1932 Does Not Call For Repeal of the 18th Amendment—Asserts That the Citizens Are Determined to Bring to a Quick End the Shocking Conditions Which Cowardice and Hypocrsy Have Brought Upon the Nation

NEW YORK, Nov. 12.— (AP)— Dr Nicholas Murray Butler, president of Columbia university, predicted tonight that if the republican party's platform in 1932 does not call for repeal of the eighteenth amendment "there will come in the following November the biggest political smashup that has taken place in the history of any American now living." Dr. Butler, a prominent republican, has long been known for his opposition to prohibition.

In a formal statement, he said, "The intelligence and the moral purpose of the American people are unflinchingly determined to repair the dreadful damage done to our government and to our public life by the ratification of the eighteenth amendment, as well as to bring to a quick end the shocking conditions which cowardice and hypocrisy on the part of the office-holding and office-seeking class, together with an uncontrolled and untaxed nation-wide liquor traffic, have brought upon the nation."

Dr. Butler said that those delegates from 22 states who came to him after the 1928 national convention and told him they had voted for his repeal plank when it was tabled in the Kansas City convention would be "offered the opportunity" to vote for it again two years hence.

He indicated his statement was an answer to that of Senator Simeon D. Fess, national republican chairman. He quoted that part of Senator Fess' statement which read: "If the republican party stands for repeal, it might as well say good-day."

"To that sentence," Dr. Butler continued, "my reply is that if the republican party does not stand for repeal, it might as well say good-night. x x x

"The elections of November, 1930, are the handwriting on the walls."

WETS AND DRYS CALL FOR SHOWDOWN ON PROHIBITION

WASHINGTON, Nov. 12—(AP)—Wets and drys joined today in a call for a showdown on prohibition in the 1932 presidential campaign as the anxious leaders of the divided parties looked hopefully to the busy law enforcement commission for a solution.

Representative Beedy, republican, Maine, a prohibition advocate, accepted the demand of James W. Wadsworth, former republican senator from New York and a campaign for repeal, that the prohibition issue be thrashed out in 1932.

As the wet and dry enthusiasts warmed up to the prohibition issue which already has become a threat to the unity of the republican party and is regarded as a menace of the same king to the democrats, the leaders themselves took to silence.

Senator Fess, of Ohio, the chairman of the republican national committee and an avowed prohibition advocate, observed that he had spoken in an individual capacity rather than as party chairman when he recently espoused a mobilization of the drys.

In the face of the demands of Wadsworth and Representative Britten, republican, Illinois, that he resign as party chairman, Senator Fess stood his ground but there is a belief among his intimates that Fess would quit the party post rather than be silent in any wet and dry battle of national scope.

Meanwhile, the law enforcement commission upon whose report the Hoover administration is expected to take its stand on the prohibition question, resumed its conferences today in an effort to reach an agreement acceptable to the eleven members.

The word has come from some of the dry members on the commission that "astounding" things have been discovered and there is a promise from these same members that "there will be no pussyfooting" in the forthcoming report; but the commission is still far from agreement.

Coincident with the proposals for a showdown on prohibition in 1932, it was learned today that some of the prohibitionists on the law enforcement commission would like to see an expression of sentiment on the dry law after a ten year's trial.

This could only be brought about by a national referendum and it is the opinion of many that a national referendum could be obtained only by submitting a constitutional amendment for repeal of the eighteenth amendment to the states. The drys however are not willing to go that far.

TO STUDY PROPOSAL BUDGET WITH ALDERMEN

(Special to The Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, Nov. 12. — The Windham Taxpayers' Protective association is expected to take an important part in the preparation and adoption of the city budget for the fiscal year. The advisory committee of the association is to meet with the appropriations committee of the board of aldermen to study the proposed budget before the figures are released for publication. Should the results of this conference prove satisfactory to the association's committee, it is then expected that the taxpayers will be advised to vote for approval of the budget when it is presented at a city meeting. The afternoon was taken up with business and reports of the different societies. Mr. Kenyon, of Southbridge, led the afternoon devotions and was elected pastoral counsellor in place of Rev. E. S. Lyon, who resigned. Rev. Mr. Nightingale, of Charlton, was leader in the evening and Mr. Swan, of Worcester Tech spoke to an interesting audience in the evening. The Brandy Hill society presented a little play before supper and the songs and cheering during supper were hearty. Thompson Hill C. E. was represented by all but one member and brought home the banner.

DANIELSON

FINDING EXPECTED SOON IN BOUCHARD CASE

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, Nov. 12.—Among the witnesses that testified today in the inquest Coroner Arthur G. Bill conducted relative to the death of Joseph Bouchard was William M. Vincent, a constable of the town of Plainfield. Bouchard was killed last Saturday night, near Hopkins hill in Plainfield, when he was struck by an automobile truck operated by A. Steinman of Moosup. Some time prior to his being struck by the truck, Bouchard was about Plainfield village in an intoxicated condition. Coroner Bill said this afternoon that Vincent admitted during the course of his testimony today that he had placed Bouchard in a public service car and had him driven out of the village. Bouchard was taken out of the car and allowed to go on for himself near Hopkins hill, where, a short time afterwards, the truck ran him down and fatally injured him. Coroner Bill said that he will complete his finding in the case at once.

Trappers working in this region face a discouraging season. As in the case of a great many other communities, prices on the pelts of valued fur-bearing animals have shrunken in discouraging manner from the prices that were being offered for them a year and two years ago. Each late fall and winter season the countryside for miles about yields thousands of dollars worth of pelts. There is nothing to indicate that the number of animals trapped this season will be materially smaller in number than they have been for several years past, but it is a sure shot that the trappers will get far less money for their catch than they did a year ago, and their efforts will be not a bit less arduous. The area yields red and gray foxes, muskrat, raccoon, mink, an occasional otter and some other pelts that have a money value, including the prolific skunk. The price on this last mentioned fur has dropped greatly from what it was commanding two years ago.

Though Christmas is more than six weeks ahead, orders already are being taken here for holiday greens. Those who make a specialty of creating wreaths and roping of green materials have earned considerable money in this manner in the past, even though their products are sold at very reasonable prices.

Fined $5 and Costs

Stanley Zadora, 17-year-old Goodyear youth, was before Judge W. Fenner Woodward in the town court today and was fined $5 and costs for failure to grant the right of way when the car he was operating was in collision with another machine at Dayville Four Corners on the evening of Nov. 1. Trooper Joseph T. Stanley of the Massachusetts state police, a resident of Framingham, was operator of the other car. Alice Washburn and Helen Sneider, both of Marlboro, Mass., were injured in sufficient degree to warrant their removal to the Day Kimball hospital at Putnam.

The Zadora Ford, a practically new machine, caught fire after the crash and was practically destroyed. The case against the youth had been continued from Nov. 1 until today.

Bessette Case Nolled

The case of Ernest A. Bessette of this town was nolled this morning in the town court. Mr. Bessette was ordered into court Armistice day after the light truck he was operating was in a collision with another machine operated by Joseph Duquette. The accident happened at the intersection of Lewis boulevard and Connecticut Mills avenue.

County Jail Newly Filled

With the county jail at Brooklyn filled practically to capacity, speculation grows as to what is to be done as prisoners are likely to come in faster than they are discharged from custody. It is not yet mid-November, yet the jail is practically filled. Numbers of those there are locked up because they wanted to be and because they went out of their way to do things that would win them a jail sentence. Similar cases are likely to develop all through the coming winter season. A suggestion heard today that might in some degree help lessen the pressure on the jail was that courts impose unusually short sentences where sentences appear necessary in minor cases. Talk is heard of five and ten-day sentences, instead of the usual 30 or 60 days. One court official pointed out that there are cases where longer sentences are necessary, but some could be disposed of by giving men deliberately trying to get into jail for the entire winter sentences of only a few days. In this latter class, it may be mentioned, are almost exclusively men who do not live in Killingly, and the majority of them are professional founders, non-residents of the state.

At the present time the indications are that the American Legion will provide the same sort of gala Christmas eve party on Davis park as for several years past. This will be for the children of the community. There will be the brilliantly lighted tree, the music and the pretty gifts that the little people receive. Leo J. L'Homme post has already started arrangements, to be worked out through a committee, for this worthy effort.

A number of the members of the Danielson Rotary club left here early this evening to join with fellow Rotarians from various communities of eastern Connecticut at a banquet and fellowship meeting at the Norwich Inn.

MANY MEMBERS SECURED IN FIRST DAY OF ANNUAL RED CROSS DRIVE

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, Nov. 12.—The annual roll call of the Danielson chapter of the American Red Cross got away to an encouraging start today. A Red Cross flag flew outside Woodward's store, where headquarters have been established.

Workers with streets to canvass were calling at homes during the forenoon, and had signed up many members by mid-day. Many more memberships were received during the course of this afternoon. The roll call will be continued daily up to and including next Wednesday.

Mrs. Marjorie Waller, director of the roll call here, announced an additional list of workers today. A. P. Woodward heads a group that will work in the Main street district of the business section. The group includes Miss Miriam Boomhower, John M. Dowe, Harry E. Magoon, Sidney P. Marland, J. Leo Bodo, Sidney H. Perry, A. A. Bonneville and Alfred L. Reed. School street: Mrs. Fred Worch, Mrs. Tucke; Connecticut Mills district: Mrs. Bernard Healey; Goodyear: Miss Agnes Jacobs, Miss Ella Day, Miss Olive Boulais, Miss Alice Farron, Miss Linia Wylack, Miss Ruby Hickey; Ballouville, Attawaugan, Pineville: Timothy Harrington in charge; Ballouville: Mr. and Mrs. John Waldron, Stanley Nowak, William Lewis; Attawaugan: Ledger J. Desilets, George Thomas, Edwin Eastwood, Louis Phelan, Harry Greenhalghe; Pineville: Frank Harrington; Quinebaug Mills: Miss Marshall.

Mrs. Waller has built up a very promising organization of workers, numbers of them having assisted at other roll calls. These workers are from about every walk of life in this town and are representative of every cross-section of the community.

The goal in Killingly is for 1,000, but it is hoped that this number may be exceeded.

MISS PRIOR ON DEAN'S LIST AT PEMBROKE COLLEGE

Miss Ellen R. Prior has been placed on the dean's list at Pembroke college, Brown university. HOW BELIEF IN SIGNS FOOLED ONE TRAMP

Just at this time, when the papers are telling of the passing of the one-time hobo, the gent with the incandescent nose and scrubby beard, the species that used to "jump the rattlers," one of the same has showed up, and earlier in the week put in an hour's work at a local farmer's wood pile to pay for his breakfast. Some have recalled the elaborate system of marks and characters which these knights of the road used to chalk on the fences and gate posts. A story by the late Charles H. Ray, tells of the undoing of one of these gentry, which was caused by Halloween gate changing pranks. The late Rev. Thomas L. Shipman was good to tramps and he said it was a pleasure to him to be so, and of this facts the fraternity was aware. Marked on his gate were the signs in red chalk. A cross mark "X" within a circle "O", also I. L. Later the Weary Willie that became mixed on his signs when he found this gate across the road in front of Charles Hillman's house, told Constable H. M. Miner what they meant. The cross in the circle indicated "no dog," and the other three marks were the plumb, square and level, which were explained to read that a man would be found in the house indicated, but that he was on the level and would invite any hungry visitor inside to sit down at the table. During Halloween, the good man's gate was changed around, thus presenting to the nomad craft an entirely wrong lead. The late Mr. Hillman owned a large and fierce bull dog which used to be his companion as he traveled through the country, selling tinware from a big red cart. Moreover, he possessed a pronounced dislike for tramps. When the visitor called, out rushed the dog followed by the man of the house, which resulted in serious consequences for Mr. Hobo, who was all set to step inside and enjoy a quiet feed.

Christians Rebuked

As a part of the attractive calendar of the First Congregational church for this week there appears the following item of interest, with a note by the pastor which reads: "Let us ask ourselves in all seriousness if this can apply to us."

Most Christian people are greatly shocked when told that the bolshevists have painted on the walls of the Kremlin in Moscow. "Religion is the opiate of the people." We would scarcely expect to hear a similar sentiment from a Christian missionary. One of the most devoted and efficient of the workers under the American board says: "Christians in this land have a faith which is timid and afraid in the din of industrial conflict. We have emasculated the Gospel of Jesus Christ, reduced it to the status of an insurance policy. Of course, our religion is a comfort to us, but it is as an opiate rather than a tonic, a slumber song instead of a bugle call. The Gospel we profess has nothing to say about a fair wage for those who are grossly underpaid, nor about the filthy slums where these people are forced to live. It shies at condemning land robberies which have made thousands of God's children homeless.

Pachaug grange held a whist party at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Chesboro Tuesday evening. The prizes went to Everett Whipple, Herbert Salisbury, Thomas Brown, Miss Julia Sayles, Mrs. George Briggs and Mrs. Winnifred Salisbury. The door award was given Jesse R. Davis. The next meeting will be at the home of Mr. and Mrs. LeRoy Holmes.

Planned Christmas Party

The World Wide guild girls met at Mrs. Helen Babcock's Tuesday evening, the vice president, Ruby Gray, presiding at the business session. It was voted to hold the annual candlelight service the first Sunday in December. A Christmas party is to be held at the close of the next meeting. Mrs. Verna Cregan was in charge of the program which concerned native Indian converts who have become teachers. Mrs. Babcock served a supper of fruit cup, potato salad, rolls, cake, wafers, ice cream and coffee. The table centerpiece was a cannon guarded by a solider, and at each place were small American flags with a gumdrop base.

PUTNAM

RECKLESS DRIVERS HEED WARNING ISSUED BY POLICE

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, Nov. 12—The old adage that a word to the wise is sufficient, seems to be holding good in the case of the projected drive to be made against perpetrators of automobile recklessness on the various streets of the city. Since Captain of Police A. J. Dubreuil issued a warning to speeders last Thursday, that unless the careless driving practice stopped, arrests would be made, incidents of this nature have ceased almost entirely.

Today Capt. Dubreuil with the assistance of State Officer H. Theodore Strand of Danielson barracks posted various municipal thoroughfares in quest of reckless drivers, but no violators of the motor vehicle laws in this respect appeared during their vigilance. Before a conviction can be had in cases of this nature, police must prove conclusively that drivers were travelling at excessive rates of speed. For this part, the local police have called upon the assistance of the state officers in order to trap flagrant violators.

On Grove and Providence streets, where the greatest number of complaints emanated from, the number of speeding autoists scurrying carelessly over these drives has subsided appreciably since omment on the intended police action was made in the newspapers.

Captain Dubreuil has prepared his proposed campaign systematically. Every patrolman has been instructed to be on the alert for negligent operators and to issue court summons if the offender fails to take cognizance of a warning.

START RED CROSS DRIVE FOR MEMBERS WEDNESDAY

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, Nov. 12—At dusk tonight Red Cross workers in charge of the roll call for the Putnam chapter had covered a considerable portion of their alloted territories and were amazed at the enthusiastic response to the call. The enrollment drive is under the general chairmanship of Arthur F. Hughes, treasurer of the Putnam Savings bank. Sub-committees have been appointed to carry on the work in the various wards of the city. The established goal of the chapter is 800 members, but Mr. Hughes said this afternoon that judging from early returns the committee expects that the enrollment when complete will have netted about $1,200, one half of which amount will remain in the chapter's treasury for local relief, while the remaining portion will be forwarded to the national chapter of the organization at Washington.

Attend Rotary Meeting

Local Rotarians were in attendance at the regional Rotary meeting of the Norwich, New London, Danielson Willimantic and Putnam clubs, held tonight at the Norwich Inn in Norwich. In view of the regional meeting, the weekly meeting and luncheon of the club was waived today in favor of round table discussion held at the Putnam Inn.

Called for Brush Fire

A four call received at the Central fire station Tuesday afternoon at 12, 10 o'clock, was for a brush fire on Seward street. The blaze had been brought under control and extinguished by neighbors when the firemen arrived. Acting Chief Alphonse Dumas responded to the alarm with the two south end companies.

Found guilty on a charge of intoxication when arraigned in city court this morning, a local man was assessed $1; the cost of taxi hire paid out by police to take him to the lockup. He was allowed to go. Disposition of the case was made by Judge M. H. Geissler.

A certain amount of interest in the establishment of additional courses at the Putnam Evening school is looming up at the present time. If present plans mature a petition is to be filed with the superintendent of schools requesting that he survey the possible benefits that would be derived from additional courses at night school and subsequently take the matter up with the town school committee.

The available training at the night school consists of bookkeeping, typewriting and shorthand. A large course is enrolled in these classes, but a number of the pupils attending the sessions and others not enrolled, but nevertheless interested in outside training, are desirous of joining in part time study should the educational department see fit to augment the scope of the evening school.

Miss Lena Giraca and Miss Jennie Lombardo of Lee street were visitors in Providence on Armistice day.

Schools resumed sessions this morning after the suspension of classes Tuesday for the observance of Armistice day.

White flags with the flaming red cross, emblem of the American Red Cross society, surmounted upon them, were flying on the standards of flags of the Shenandoah system in the business section today. The Red Cross chapter is employing this means of decoration to stimulate support of the roll call which is being made this week.

Officials of the S. N. E. Telephone company and the state police department are working to further plans for the cutting of a Putnam wire into the telephone switch board at the state police barracks in Danielson. The extension of the local service to Danielson for the use of the police to expedite communication has been under consideration since summer. Execution of plans involves considerable work on the part of the telephone company and for this reason the cutover has been delayed. At the present time a system similar to the proposed one soon to be in this city is in use between the police barracks and the Willimantic exchange.

PUTNAM MAN'S COW STEPS IN TRAP SET FOR RATS

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, Nov. 12—Deputy Game Warden George H. Liard of Danielson, while in Putnam today related an interesting and amusing incident brought to his attention while in the course of his duties in this section Tuesday. According to Warden Liard, a Putnam part time farmer in an effort to rid his farm of rats, and other destructive rodents, set a trap to bring about the undoing of some of the more bolder ravagers. Yesterday, the experimenter, going to his barn to milk his cow, found the animal suffering from a laceration of the leg and a portion of its hoof torn away. Investigating, the farmer learned that the cow had fallen a victim of the trap set and baited for the smaller pests infesting his property. He reported the matter to the game official aiming to obtain the department's cooperation in putting down the rats and their cohorts, which he believed had conspired to victimize his cow. Warden Liard did not comment on the action of the county game commission in disposing of the case, but said it had been referred to the proper channels.

POLICE SEARCHING FOR SHORT CHANGE SLICKER

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, Nov. 12.—Police tonight were searching for a short change slicker who early this evening, during the course of a change making act, fleeced Eli Peters, proprietor of the Putnam restaurant on Front street of $5. Peters described the embezzler as being a man of average height and wearing a tan camel hair coat and a gray felt hat. He said that he wore horn rimmed glasses. At a late hour tonight police had found no trace of the man, but had issued warnings to other business houses advising merchants to be on the lookout for him. They also sent out alarms to nearby police departments giving similar instructions.

"The development of real estate values in America is always furthered by modern improvements. Only in that way has real estate become one of the premiere factors in America's economic growth.

"It is interesting to me to note that the same principle which dominates the development of real estate holds good in other fields, the principle which you have demonstrated by your use of the Ultra Violet Ray in the toasting process."

INTERSTATE BUSSES

Announcement to the effect that the motor vehicle and state police departments are going to conduct an investigation for the purpose of finding out whether interstate busses are complying with the requirements imposed upon busses which operate entirely within the state must be looked upon with approval. While Commissioner Stoeckel points out that "the question is primarily one of safety for the passengers of busses and other users of the highways," he is entirely correct in the view that "interstate busses should not be allowed to commit offenses for which our own people are disciplined."

If there are good and sufficient reasons for regulating the operation of busses at all, such regulation should be applied to all. It is ridiculous to think that local busses or those entirely under the jurisdiction of the public utilities commission should be required to submit to requirements and restrictions which can be totally ignored by those which happen to cross the border and go into other states.

When it comes to speed and when it comes to equipment and when it comes to obeying the rules of the road, there is no reason why there should be any discrimination. All should be treated alike. There are times when state-owned transportation lines might expect to get more consideration than those which operate in other states, but one fails to see why the interstate bus should be able to do as it pleases while state busses are under regulation.

Under the plan announced, the aim is to do away with this unjust situation. It is in fairness to all bus lines and it is only proper that the users of the highway should have assurance that regulations should apply to all busses and not simply to part of them. The situation that has developed whereby interstate busses are beyond control or under different control than state busses has not proved a satisfactory arrangement. The benefits of needed regulation are lost, the requirements for safety may or may not be respected and a decided advantage is given to the busses which can ignore regulations which are necessary for public protection. It is only reasonable to expect that drivers of busses from other states should do what is required of Connecticut bus drivers while they are in this state.

CONNECTICUT APPLES

According to the report of the department of agriculture, the sale of apples in this country has nearly doubled in the last dozen years. This is attributed to grading standards, better displaying of the fruit and attention to quality.

There has been a marked change in the method of marketing apples. Where it used to be the plan to handle them chiefly by the barrel, it is the box that is in prominence today. And, while there has been a change in the container, there has also been a decided trend to the grading of apples so that now the fruit that is put into boxes is all of the same grade instead of being of mixed grades under the old barreling method. This applies to appearance as well as to size and quality.

There were the days when the top layer of a barrel of apples contained the cream of the orchard and it was a case of take your chances with what was below. Now there is reason to expect a box of apples to be the same throughout. Advice has gone out to the apple raisers that the facing of barrels can be overdone and it is certain that the trade is bound to feel that way about it after some of the experiences they have had.

But has the sale of Connecticut apples nearly doubled in 12 years? When it comes to the raising of apples, producers in this part of the country are favored with nearness to the market and it has been well demonstrated that there are quite as favorable conditions and as good a knowledge of apple culture in this part of the United States as elsewhere. It is a case of studying and catering to the market. If it is red apples that are wanted, and there are certain centers which demand nothing else, red apples should be provided. If it is the yellow or green apples that are favored, such trade should be accommodated. When it is apparent that eastern apples are available and are distributed in a manner that meets trade requirements, there is a decided advantage which the eastern grower has over his western competitor if he is willing to take advantage of it. He must raise fruit of high grade, good appearance and real quality and get it to market, if he expects to have it displayed and handled as freely as fruit from a more distant state. Connecticut apples have an appeal to apple eaters of this section and it is unfortunate that a supply adequate to the demand isn't available. Insistence upon Connecticut apples does no good if they cannot be obtained throughout the season.

NOT ALL FAVORABLE

That the pledge of democratic leaders to give their support to the administration during the coming session of congress isn't going to be unanimously accepted by the entire democratic membership is evidenced in certain quarters. There are those who are not disposed to have a committee of seven speak for them, either in this or the succeeding congress. The successor to Senator Heflin makes it evident that when he takes his seat he will be a democrat at all times, which means that he frowns upon the idea of backing worthy measures. Senator-elect Bankhead promises to have nothing to do with any such coalition, but he will probably not object if the insurgents want to form a coalition with the democrats.

Senator Brookhart was out waving his hands in a trouble-making attitude even before the democratic promise was made. He was trying to enlist the democrats in an agreement to join hands with him in the support of such policies as he favors. He wanted to be the senator to insure a continuance of the embarrassing tactics that have been maintained through the life of the present congress. He wanted to keep the country in an uncertain state of mind because of the unwise legislation which he seeks and hasn't been able to get. He hoped to get the democrats to fall in with his ideas and schemes.

That these two views will be endorsed by others is to be expected. There will be certain of the insurgents who will continue the practices of the past and will claim that the election gave them the right to do so.

Whether this is going to produce an insurgent democratic group, with the result that there will be an insurgent bloc represented by both democrats and republicans, is for the future to develop. Should such be formed it seems improbable that it will be sufficient in size or influence to overcome any sincere effort on the part of the democrats to join hands with the regular republicans in support of the administration.

The early display of opposition to the democratic promise indicates that all may not be as rosy as predicted, even though it is the present congress, rather than the one affected by the recent election, which is concerned.

SENATOR FESS' VIEWS

When Senator Simeon D. Fess of Ohio, as chairman of the republican national committee, gave expression to post-election views and pointed out that a split in the party would be caused by a party demand for the repeal of the 18th amendment, he brought forth a storm of objection. Perhaps he expected that he would and yet there is a report from Washington that his attitude in regard to the wet question in the party platform may be finally determined by the report of the Wickersham committee. If that is so, he might have waited, or he might even now let that be understood.

Senator Fess has maintained that the dry question was not an issue in the campaign just ended. In view of the defeat of the junior senator from his own state on a decidedly wet and dry fight, there ought to be no lingering belief that there wasn't such an issue. The same thing might be said of the contests in Massachusetts, New York, Illinois and even Connecticut, for it is certain that prohibition played its part here.

If Senator Fess believes that the demand for repeal by the republican party would split the vote, he cannot be unmindful of the fact that Ohio's senator up for election and a dry was defeated in a strong republican state and that the dry candidate for senator in Massachusetts was likewise beaten.

More than Senator Fess are much interested in the report which the president's commission will make. Speculation is rife as to what it will be. It is not probable that there will be any definite advance information concerning it, but it should present facts of much value, in addition to referendums in several states, for the guidance of action concerning prohibition in the future.

AUSTRIA BALKS ON FASCISM

Political conditions are getting close attention in Europe these days, particularly in central Europe.

The latest opportunity for getting the expression of the people was furnished by the election in Austria. Conditions there were such as to indicate the possibilities of an overturn similar in character to that which was recently displayed in Germany. If it wasn't an upset there was a feeling that it might display evidence of a growth of the organization of unrest. The proximity of the countries and the influence of the one over the other lent color to the view that fascism might show increased strength in sympathy with the movement in the neighboring country.

Considerable influence was being exerted by the head of the fascist movement, Prince Starhemburg. He was out for the overthrow of the republic and had managed to get into favor in various circles where support might be expected. Having gained the backing of certain elements, he was in a position to strike heavily in behalf of his favorite cause, provided he could get popular support.

That was where the influence of the people came in and where it was evident that he had failed to make a good impression. They had been aroused to support the socialists because of the manner in which they had been suppressed by the Starhemburg efforts and the result was that socialist candidates were put in control of the Austrian parliament and those parties with which the fascist leader had been playing were placed in a decided minority. It was, altogether, an election in which Austria declared itself against fascism, and such as thought that it would be guided by the Hitler success in Germany must have been sadly disappointed.

WANTED—A SOPRANO

Marion hummed "la! la! la!" as she hurried along; plainly she was nervous, for the "la's" were unsteady. This would never do! Suppose she should fail? The thought was too terrible to contemplate! There were still fifteen minutes to "kill" before the agency man could be seen, so Marion decided to go up to the waiting room of a department store, sit down and endeavor to quiet tingling nerves.

It was early and few people were in the store: she went through an exercise, tried a song, even recited poetry, but in vain. Finally opening her purse she took therefrom a slip of paper and read: "Wanted—A soprano for small part in 'The Princess.' Must be trained singer with pleasing appearance. Call Monday morning after 10.30 at suite 618 the Utilities building."

Glancing at the clock she discovered it was 10.25; jumping up, she ran to the elevator, was downstairs in the Utilities building and being whisked to the sixth floor in a jiffy. Entering the office of Rubens' Theatrical agency, she found it already crowded and her nervousness increased.

Now followed an agony of suspense while one after another went through the ordeal and was peremptorily dismissed.

When the attendant signified that it was her turn Marion walked into the studio with quaking knees. A single glance at Mr. Rubens and the final remnant of courage fled!

Marion realized that she was not "in voice"; beginning poorly, she went on worse. At the end of the first verse Mr Rubens thumped a chord and exclaimed laconically, "Won't do," and she, too, joined the procession of failures.

Mechanically she went back to the department store; she sat staring straight ahead with mind completely blank. How long she remained thus she could not have told when an odd sound caused her to glance aside. In the next chair was a young girl trying to choke back sobs while tears were running down her cheeks. Forgotten were her own sufferings as she gently laid a hand on the girl's arm and inquired: "Is there anything I can do for you?"

The girl shook her head.

"But you are in trouble," persisted Marion. "Perhaps I can be of help."

Attempting to reply, her voice was lost in faint whispers.

"Don't be afraid to confide in me," Marion went on "I have just suffered a great disappointment and can at least offer sympathy."

At that the girl blurted out: "I'm hungry!"

"Hungry?" repeated Marion.

"Yes, I haven't had a thing to eat since yesterday!"

"Hungry!" Alas, Marion herself was in the same condition! However, there was 30 cents in her purse carefully hoarded to furnish a dinner tonight and one tomorrow—after that?—— But without an instant's hesitation she said: "I'm going to a cafeteria and you must come with me."

Oh, glorious feast! Each had a cup of hot coffee and two well-buttered rolls! And under the influence of this nourishment they quickly brightened. Later when they parted the young girl declared she was going right over to the wholesale district and look for a job.

Marion sauntered along the street uncertain what course to pursue. Happening to pass a theater where a movie called "The Chimes" was being given, some bells began to ring and she exclaimed, "Turn again, Rich—" Suddenly stopping short she ejaculated, "I'll do it!" and before she could change her mind was hurrying back toward the Utilities building.

The singing in 618 was still going on; evidently the position wasn't filled. After a confidential talk with the attendant that hyperbolical female observed: "He's tried about a thousand, so I don't believe he'll remember. Wait a few minutes and I'll send you in."

Marion, entering the studio again, found Mr. Rubens scowling harder than before. However, the coffee and rolls had stiffened her knees and quieted her nerves; for all she cared he might scowl till he was black in the face! She placed "The Lass with the Delicate Air" on the rack and automatically he went through the prelude. Marion assumed the proper position, breathed deeply, opened her mouth and the melody poured forth.

Soon as the song was finished her accompanist, springing from the piano stool like a jack from a box, pressed the buzzer.

"Call a cab!" ordered as the office girl entered. "The rehearsal of 'The Princess' is due to start in ten minutes and this young lady must be on time!"—Chicago News.

How Mothers Can Help Prevent Spread Of Contagion In School

By A. Wilmot Jacobsen, M. D., Buffalo
(From Gorgas Memorial Institute)

American Education Week, which begins today, is a fitting time in which for parents, mothers particularly, to decide to cooperate more earnestly in the prevention of spread of contagion in schools. How may this be done? The problem is not always easy of solution, but when the question arises there are certain readily observable signs and symptoms in children which, if they are borne in mind and looked for, are of great assistance.

It is certainly true that children often contract contagious diseases at school. But the danger of contracting the more severe diseases, namely diphtheria, smallpox and scarlet fever, is not now very great at any time. This is due largely to the activities of health legislation and of school authorities. Adequate medical inspection by a school physician, daily observation by the school nurse or the teachers; enforcement of quarantine in all cases of these diseases, and immunization of children who are susceptible, have gone a long way toward controlling these diseases and rendering our children relatively safe from them while in school. Other diseases such as mumps, whooping cough, measles and colds are more frequently contracted at school. These also might be nearly eliminated if parents, family doctors, school and health authorities would all do their part in combatting them. But until this cooperation exists these diseases will continue to spread in our schools.

The question arises—is it worth while to take all these precautions to prevent our children from contracting contagious diseases? Is it not merely postponing the evil hour, for does not every individual acquire these diseases sooner or later? Then why not have them over with, the sooner the better? Even if we were to grant that children are likely to acquire these diseases sooner or later, there would still be an excellent reason for postponing the attacks as long as possible, for generally speaking the younger the child, the harder the disease. For example, last year over 1,000 cases of measles were cared for in one of the New York hospitals, which is especially equipped for the care of children with this disease, and one out of every ten was fatal. But 9 per cent. of those who died were under five years of age, while none over ten years of age died. And so it may be seen that the longer measles can be postponed the less serious it is. The same statement may be made in regard to whooping cough occur under five years of age.

The reason that measles and whooping cough are so likely to spread in school is that they are difficult to detect in the early stages. What may seem to be an ordinary cold in the head may several days later turn out to be measles; what seems to be an ordinary cold in the chest with a cough may a week or ten days later be recognized by the whoop as whooping cough. Meanwhile the child has been infectious and may have transmitted to disease to his classmates.

The signs which should indicate to the mother that her child on some particular day should remain from school are: Fever; sore throat; discharging ears; sore eyes; vomiting, abdominal pain or diarrhea; paroxysmal cough; any eruption which cannot be accounted for by some simple explanation; severe colds, even when no fever is present.

It seems unnecessary to explain why a child who manifests any of the above symptoms should remain home from school. Quite aside from the fact that they may indicate the onset of contagious disease which may be transmitted to others, it is obvious that a child with any of these symptoms cannot derive much benefit from his studies. Never conceal the presence of a contagious disease in your children. To do so may lead to the unnecessary exposure of another child and may cost his life. On the other hand, if mothers everywhere will cooperate in restricting the spread of these diseases, the day will come when they are brought under control and are no longer the menace which they are today.

BURGESS BEDTIME STORY

Peter Is Teased

If in your heart you seek to please
You cannot if you try to tease.
—Peter Rabbit.

Teasing is a bad habit. Yes, sir, it is so. It never makes friends and it does make enemies. Besides, it hurts the feelings of others. It destroys friendships, and friendships are very precious. He is rich indeed who is rich in many true friends.

Peter Rabbit was being teased. At first he didn't mind it, but after awhile it got so that he avoided his old friends and neighbors whenever he could. You see they had all heard about how he said that he had heard a strange song in the night in the Green Forest, and how he had vainly hunted for the singer. No one had seen or heard a feathered stranger in the Green Forest so, like Jumper the Hare, they all thought that Peter must have dreamed it.

"Had any more dreams," Sammy Jay would ask whenever he found Peter in the dear old briar-patch, and he took pains to visit it every day. Then he would fly away chuckling.

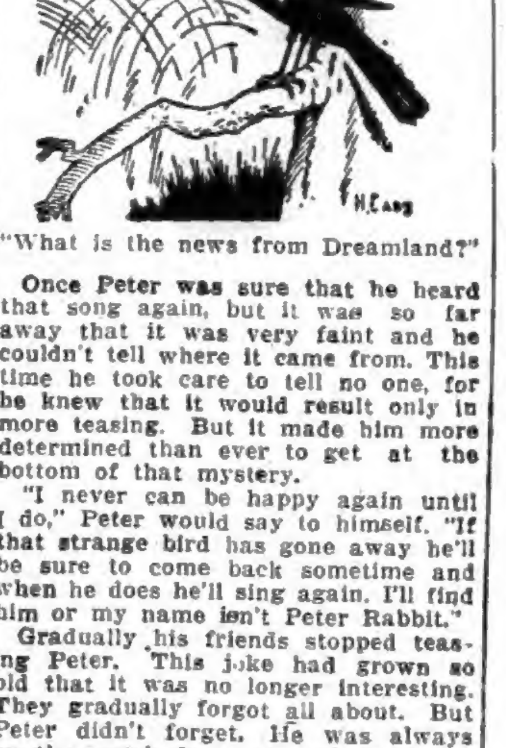
Reddy Fox would come around and gravely invite Peter to go with him over to the Green Forest to look for that unknown singer, and grin in the most provoking manner.

Blacky the Crow would go out of his way to visit the dear old briar-patch almost every day. "Hello, Peter," Blacky would say. "What is the news from dreamland? You should be more careful what you eat, Peter. Never go to sleep on a full stomach if you don't want to dream."

"I didn't dream," Peter would retort. "There was a strange song over in the green forest. I heard it and I wasn't asleep. That singer may not be there now, but he was there that night and some day I'll find out who it was and then it will be my turn to laugh."

Even little Tommy Tit the chickadee couldn't resist the temptation to tease Peter a little and Drummer the woodpecker and Yank Yank the nuthatch would ask Peter if he had found that strange singer yet. Do you wonder that Peter grew cross and avoided his old friends whenever he could?

But all this teasing made Peter more determined than ever to find out who that mysterious singer was. He spent most of his time over in the Green Forest hoping to hear that song again. He grew careless and several times had the narrowest of escapes. Once Reddy Fox surprised him there and Peter had a hard run for his life. Once Peter dodged just in the nick of time to escape the great claws of Hooty the Owl, and it was wholly because he was so intent on finding that unknown singer that he forgot to be on the watch for enemies, a thing that none of the little people of the green forest and the green meadows ever can afford to do.



"What is the news from Dreamland?"

Once Peter was sure that he heard that song again, but it was so far away that it was very faint and he couldn't tell where it came from. This time he took care to tell no one, for he knew that it would result only in more teasing. But it made him more determined than ever to get at the bottom of that mystery.

"I never can be happy again until I do," Peter would say to himself. "If that strange bird has gone away he'll be sure to come back sometime and when he does he'll sing again. I'll find him or my name isn't Peter Rabbit."

Gradually his friends stopped teasing Peter. This joke had grown so old that it was no longer interesting. They gradually forgot all about. But Peter didn't forget. He was always on the watch for a strange feathered singer, and never went into the green forest without hoping that this time he would solve the mystery. You see his curiosity hadn't been satisfied; it was as great as ever. So he was always looking and listening and he never left the green forest for the dear old briar-patch without a feeling of disappointment. At the same time he never lost faith that somehow someday he would find out all about it.

A Washington Bystander

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, Nov. 12—Election day was just another day to almost a fifth of the folks who make up the house roll of the 72nd congress. They faced no contests.

That is to be expected in the solid south, where a democratic nomination usually is equivalent to election. Take Mississippi, for instance. With one senator and eight representatives to be elected, the Mississippians solved the problem by sending back the whole lot who sat in the 71st congress, from Pat Harrison in the senate to Jim Collier in the 8th house district. No republican thought it worth while to challenge any of 'em.

Now, by contrast, take New York with 43 house jobs to fill. Nobody escaped without facing at least two opponents on election day. Some faced three. New York doesn't run much to default elections.

Uncontested

But here's another oddity. California, with 11 seats to fill (and there will be almost twice that number of Californians in the house if and when reapportionment takes effect), had eight seats uncontested.

The situation was quite different from that down south. All of those eight folks held both republican and democratic endorsements. It would have been nine but for the death of Representative Charles Curry of California after he had been approved for re-election by both parties. Voters of his district had to write in the name of their candidates at election.

And, looking over the pre-election lists, the Bystander could find only four cases elsewhere in the country than California where that combination of republican and democratic endorsement for house seats appeared.

These four were all in Pennsylvania, where anything could have happened this year.

Helps To Be 'In'

A noteworthy fact is that the men and women who had this dual party endorsement, whether in California or Pennsylvania, were all sitting members of the 71st congress. Most of them are veterans of several congresses.

That being the case, it is easy to conclude that being in the house is about the greatest help there is toward staying in. Obviously voters refuse in many districts to regard house membership as an essentially partisan affair. They seem to vote for the chap who gets results for them locally, regardless of his party affiliations, remarkably often.

Senators are quite a different matter. There has never been one in the Bystander's time with both republican and democratic endorsements.

He Is the Man

It would be a generous act and one that would be approved by the people of the state if Dean Cross when he becomes governor of Connecticut should appoint Ernest E. Rogers, who alone was defeated for the position to which Mr. Cross was chosen, to one of the important commissionerships that are to be filled at the designation of the incoming governor. Mr. Rogers is well qualified to fill any commissionership to be filled. His services to the state have been such as the incoming governor might well recognize. His ability is unquestioned, and he is too worthy to be allowed to abandon the interest he has manifested in all the state's affairs.—New London Globe.

A HISTORY OF CONNECTICUT INDUSTRY

Released by Manufacturers Association of Connecticut

The Blakesley Novelty Company, Bristol.

This business was established in 1872 by the late Gilbert H. Blakesley, a man of considerable inventive talent who manufactured and marketed a number of ingenious devices; among them being artificial fish lures, a hair crimper, and other devices. His principal business, however, was the manufacture of elastic braids and arm bands.

In 1887 the company was incorporated with the late F. G. Hayward as president. The following year Mr. Hayward resigned and Mr. Blakesley was elected president, holding the office until his death in 1911. The business was continued with Mrs. Blakesley as president until 1925, when the company was re-organized with the following officers: M. D. Edgerton, president; W. H. Bacon, treasurer and general manager; W. L. Crouch, secretary. Mr. Bacon came to the company in 1917 as manager and has continued in that capacity up to the present time. Under his administration the factory has been enlarged and additions made to the braiding equipment.

Some years ago machines for knitting small cotton tubing were installed. This tubing is used by silver manufacturers and others for the protection of their goods and is also made into finger cots for buffers' use. From it is also made the "Yankee" knitted mop, a product of the company which has been developed in its present form within recent years, and has been very favorably received by janitors and housekeepers.

The policy of the company has always been to use the best materials available and its products—elastic braids and arm bands—are well and favorable known throughout the country.

The company has recently suffered a severe loss in the death of its president, Marvin D. Edgerton, and his successor has not yet been chosen. The present officers are W. H. Bacon, treasurer and general manager and W. L. Crouch, secretary.

EARLY RIVER TRANSPORTATION

One of the first means of river transportation was carried on in flat-bottomed barges, propelled by hand. Later the idea of using horses to tow them along was brought into effect. The need of river transportation was so great that steam craft were absolutely essential. It was then that Robert Fulton built the first boat to be propelled by steam—"The Clermont."

The guiding thought of this institution is an honest desire to serve, and aid those upon whom responsibility falls.

DECLARES ROTARY FORCE FOR BETTER WORLD CONDITIONS

"I am proud to call myself a Rotarian in spite of what the cynics may say about Rotary," said Arthur M. Brown, speaking on "This Institution Called Rotary" at the intercity meeting of the five Rotary clubs in New London and Windham counties held at Norwich Inn Wednesday night. There was an 80 per cent attendance of the Rotarians in the two counties, there being 205 present as well as 43 members of the Norwich Rotary Boys' band.

In his address Mr. Brown, whose eloquence held his audience in rapt attention, said in part:

In spite of the Sinclair Lewises, the cynics and the supercilious souls in the universe who sneer at Rotary and infer that Rotarians are loud-mouthed, back-slapping individuals who use Rotary to serve their own ends, I am proud to call myself a Rotarian. We may well be proud of any organization that can bring together men of all nations and all creeds into a bond, fellowship and understanding such as has never been known before. We may well be proud of an institution that has proved that it is founded on truth, justice and honesty. For if it had not been founded on these principles, it could never have grown as it has. Rotary has brought about a better feeling between the peoples of the world.

Yesterday we renewed our pledge that insofar as we are able to bring it about that those boys who fought and died in the last great war shall not have fought and died in vain. They will have died in vain if nations allow another holocaust of war to sweep the earth again. War never settles anything but leaves only a waste of misery and ruin in its wake. Keep the faith with those who have died and see that war shall cease. We should bring about a better understanding between the representatives of nations who, because of distrust of each other, resort to war to settle their differences. There is no reason why international questions should not be settled around the council table if this feeling of mistrust can be overcome. And this is what Rotary, through its international contacts, is trying to do and I say, on with Rotary.

The cynic says we sing, slap each other on the back and call each other by the first name. We do. But hasn't an institution that can break down the wall of reserve that usually exists between men a right to exist? Many a man has been saved in body and soul just by the breaking down of those barriers that have held them aloof from their fellowmen. Isn't an institution that can do this worthwhile? Two features endear Rotary to me; the better understanding between nations and the outlet and relaxation for the men who are burdened with the cares of the business world. Of course there are many who forget what is expected of them in Rotary but this is not the fault of the institution. The cynic never finds an honest motive in anything. The cynics are the lice upon the body politic. The cynic has no place in Rotary.

Rotary teaches the man to magnify the importance of his own job. Labor is the most dignified thing in the world if it is honest labor. Rotarians are real Rotarians when they can look out over the hills and see the beauty. If they can meet their fellowman, love him despite his shortcomings, sympathize with him in his sorrow and sin and still keep faith with themselves. They are Rotarians when they can look into the mud puddle and see something besides the mud. Then we can march on as an unconquerable body with influence as yet unknown.

Mr. Brown was given an ovation as he concluded his talk.

The meeting was in charge of Harold D. Larrabee, president of the Norwich club, although Danielson was supposed to be the host club. William G. Park was the song leader and invocation was by Rev. U. O. Bellerose of the Putnam club. President Larrabee introduced the presidents of the various clubs, who were Morris Lubchansky of New London, Al Reed of Danielson, Louis A. Kingsbury of Willimantic, and Alexander Gilman of Putnam. During the dinner at the inn each club was called upon to put on a stunt.

Stunts By Rotary Clubs

In the stunting the Danielson club was the first to present their novelty. In a very novel way each member of the Danielson club was introduced in song, after which there was a group song followed by three selections by the Danielson Rotary quartet. The Danielson novelty was well received and the quartet numbers were exceptionally pleasing.

Putnam's stunt was a very clever musical burlesque by Ken Sharpe of the Putnam club. Mr. Sharpe, a talented musician, took the simple little nursery rhyme of Jack and Jill and developed it as would the noted masters of music from Mozart and Mendelssohn down to the present-day jazz. This was exceptionally pleasing and well carried out.

Willimantic's time was taken by group singing of a number of the popular airs, according to the Willimantic version. Norwich produced Frank R. Murdy and Henry J. LaFontaine as their feature with these songsters rendering a duet and each a solo.

Took the Prize

To Jim Sullivan and Connie Costello of New London went the cake, which was the prize for the best novelty. Jim and Connie told some humorous stories, some new and others not so new, but with a charm that made even the old ones seem different. For a full 15 minutes this team kept the Rotarians in a gale of laughter and the decision of District Governor Dodge that Jim and Connie took the cake was met with unanimous approval. Jim responded with that well known, yet ever new, song, "Patrick J. O'Hare."

Other speakers on the program besides Mr. Brown were Past District Governor Alvin C. Colvin of New London, who in a very neat talk told of his pleasure at being present and the reason for his delay in not arriving on time.

In his talk to the meeting District Governor Richard E. Dodge complimented the Rotarians on their splendid turnout. He brought a number of messages from Rotary International and spoke briefly on the proposed amendment by the four New England district governors that the method of electing International officers be changed so that politics would be kept out of Rotary even as Rotary keeps out of politics. He urged that although this is a year of depression that there be an effort made to increase the membership in the 30th district. His talk dealt largely with Rotary matters and was interesting to the members of the various clubs.

Boys' Band Gave Concert

Before the meeting the Boys' band of the Norwich Rotary club gave a delightful concert in the lounge of the inn. The members of the band were the guests of the club at dinner.

The intercity committee comprised: E. L. Duff, Norwich; Sabin Russell, Danielson; Arthur F. Hughes, Putnam; Nelson A. Daniels, Willimantic; J. William Clark, New London; C. C. Costello, New London.

COLLISION WITH AMBULANCE, AT HOSPITAL ENTRANCE

While the ambulance was leaving the Backus hospital grounds about 5:45 Wednesday evening in response to a call from Fitchville it was struck at the rear end by an automobile driven by Thomas J. Driscoll of 45 Uncas street. The Driscoll machine was disabled so much that it had to be towed away. The ambulance apparently was damaged only slightly but by the time it had been driven some ways towards Norwich Town the wheels locked and the machine could not be driven. The driver returned to the hospital to get the other ambulance and started out with that but by that time the patient from a motorcycle accident in Fitchville had been brought in by a private automobile. His injuries were not serious.

According to the report of the crash between the Driscoll machine and the ambulance, the latter came down the hospital driveway with its siren sounding as two other machines from the north approached the hospital driveway with the Driscoll car behind them. These slowed down to let the ambulance out but Driscoll, who claimed he did not hear the siren, pulled out to pass and was just in time to hit the ambulance as it came out into the highway.

WEDDING

Smith-Good

Norwich relatives and friends were interested in the wedding Wednesday, in Brooklyn, N. Y., of Gerard Stafford Smith, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward J. Smith (Winifred F. Murtagh), of 76 Carroll street and Miss Alice Campbell Good, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Howard Good, of 580 St. Mark's avenue, Brooklyn, and "Goodwood," New Canaan, Conn. The ceremony was performed by Rt. Rev. John L. Belford, of the Church of the Nativity, assisted by Rt. Rev. Maurice P. Fitzgerald, of St. Gregory's church. A largely attended reception at Sherry's, Park Avenue, New York followed.

Mrs. David Sheridan Rumbough (Miriam Smith) and Mrs. Philip Hevener of Indianapolis were matrons of honor, and the bridesmaids were Miss Winifred Stafford Smith, sister of the bridegroom; Miss Anne Linn of Overbrook, Pa.; Miss Veirdre O'Shea of Manhattan and Miss Nancy Mitchell of Baltimore.

Mr. Smith had his brother, Herbert J. Smith, as best man, and as ushers George J. Atwell, Jr., F. Campbell Good, brother of the bride; George Piperno, Richard Reeves, Arthur F. Greer and John Masury Sturges.

The bride, who is an accomplished equestrienne and has exhibited her horses at many shows, was graduated from Brooklyn Heights Seminary and Bryn Mawr College. Mr. Smith was educated at the Brooklyn Preparatory School and Loyola college, Montreal.

Picturing the young bridegroom as "the best pony polo player potentially this borough has ever possessed," a Brooklyn paper said regarding the young man of Norwich ancestry and his bride:

Alice Good is, of course, the daughter of that Alice Campbell of a generation ago, one of the leading girls in the founding of the Civitas, who has been of great prominence in society, philanthropy, religious activities and politics through the years since, who married William Howard Good and lives in the wonderful old Wood house far up on St. Mark's avenue, and more than all else was daughter of Felix Campbell, distinguished banker and statesman of Brooklyn's eighties. The younger Alice has been abroad many times and both "shown" and hunted in England and in Ireland, also in the Virginia hunting country. She was graduated from Bryn Mawr.

"Gerry" has been one of the central figures of the Brooklyn Riding and Driving club for some years, but he is not a rich man's son and has to spend his days in the Wall Street market instead of daily practicing on the field at Westbury.

ACADEMY BEATEN BY BULKELEY IN CROSS COUNTRY, WOOD LED FIELD

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Nov. 12—The first of the Academy-Bulkeley upsets was unfolded here this afternoon when the prestige of Norwich Free Academy cross-country team was lowered by an underdog Bulkeley team, 23 to 36, for the third time in as many years. The Wildcats were highly favored, partly because they had practiced for a whole week on the Tigers' course, but the little Bulkeley team showed a sudden burst of power and set them back without difficulty, finishing eight men before their fourth runner.

The Academy harriers were consoled by the fact that their team mate, Johnny Wood, led the pack home in fast time, 12 min. 41 seconds. Gagnon and Alm of Bulkeley kept him stepping most of the way, but in the last half mile he stretched out and finished with a 30-yard lead over the two Orange and Black runners, who tied for second place.

At the start of the season, the Tigers' chances for the conference title seemed slim because of the decisive victory that Chapman Tech scored over them. They have been improving by leaps and bounds, however, and this victory over the Wildcats puts them up with the first-rank contenders.

The final score would have been 23 to 33, but by an agreement of the coaches, concerning seven-man team regulations, Zito, Bulkeley's seventh man, who finished tenth in the race, was disqualified.

The summary:

Wood, N. F. A.—First.
Gagnon and Alm, Bulkeley—Tied for second.
Mahoney, N. F. A.—Fourth.
Tubbs, Bulkeley—Fifth.
Olofson, Bulkeley—Sixth.
Liljenstein, Bulkeley—Seventh.
Lyons, N. F. A.—Eighth.
Davidson, Bulkeley—Ninth.
Zito, Bulkeley—Tenth.
Brennan, Bulkeley—Eleventh.
Wlodarczyk, N. F. A.—Twelfth.
Richardson, N. F. A.—Thirteenth.

SOUTHERN COLLEGES FIRST IN INTERSECTIONAL PLAY

NEW YORK, Nov. 12—(AP)—With 14 victories and 11 defeats for an average of .560, the south is leading all rivals in the success of its college football teams in intersectional conflict, a tabulation of results so far indicated today.

The east is second with .543, the far west third with .500 and the middle west fourth with .462. The southwest trails with .200 as a result of having tackled some of the middle west's strongest teams.

In actual number of intersectional victories won, the east leads with 25, only one game ahead of the middle west, which gained appreciably in the last week's play.

The private argument between the east and middle west found the latter section forging ahead by winning five of its last nine games with eastern rivals for a total of 17 victories to 16. Most of the more important games have gone to the mid-west forces. The south, on the other hand, has proved a persistent jinx for the middle west, winning nine games and losing only two.

The far west tangles with the east for the first time this season Saturday when St. Mary's of California plays Fordham here. The southwest will have a chance to fatten its average at the east's expense the same day as Southern Methodist encounters the Navy. Other intersectional conflicts this week are Ohio State-Pittsburgh, Iowa-Penn State, Pennsylvania-Georgia Tech, Loyola, of Chicago, vs. Boston college, Army-Kentucky Wesleyan and Villanova-Oglethorpe. THE RED KNIGHT WINNER OF CANTONSVILLE STEEPLECHASE

NEW YORK, Nov. 12—(AP)—A series of three Pimlico "grade handicaps" and the $2,000 Contonsville steeplechase, furnished a good afternoon's entertainment and a few surprises for the patrons of the Maryland Hilltop course today.

The graded handicaps, which are divided into three classes designed to bring about close matches, all are run over the mile and 70 yards distance. Class A, the highest rated group, brought a big surprise when Escutcheon won over Raccoon in a gruelling finish. Grey Coat took third. Escutcheon, ridden by J. Long was held at $31.60 to win in the mutuels. The class B event went to Hat Broom and class C to Ariz.

The Cantonsville steeplechase saw The Red Knight of the Queen City stable carrying 141 pounds over the two mile route and beat out rivals with lesser imposts. Banner Day finished second and Tony the Clown third. The Red Knight paid $7.70.

A muddy track at Latonia failed to retard Black Comet and the two-year-old colt from the C. C. Van Meter stable scored a handy victory in the Winter Quarters handicap. Black Comet, won by a length and a half from J. Lowenstein's Doris Jean. Back Log, owned by Gallagher and Combs, finished third, four lengths ahead of the heavily played favorite, Martha Jones. Black Comet paid $16.20 for a $2 mutuel ticket.

HARVARD AND SECONDS IN DUMMY SCRIMMAGE

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Nov. 12—(AP)—The Harvard varsity football team had its first taste of Holy Cross' new Warner attack today, when it went through a dummy scrimmage with the seconds. Fordyce Blake, former Harvard lineman, who has been scouting the Purple all season guided the scrubs in the demonstration of the plays that the Crimson will face on Saturday. Bernie White, recently deposed varsity fullback, was returned to that line bucking berth and will probably start in that position on Saturday.

Jack Crickard, the Crimson's best ground gaining back, again spent the session jogging about Soldiers' field. It is doubtful that he will play against Holy Cross and Horween will probably give him plenty of rest to get him in perfect shape with the objective game with Yale, a week hence.

PICK COLGATE TO MEET N. Y. U. IN BENEFIT GAME

NEW YORK, Nov. 12—(AP)—Making the first official move to arrange a post-season football game for the benefit of the unemployed Mayor James J. Walker and the committee he had appointed to consider the possibilities of benefit football, met today and issued an invitation to Colgate to meet New York university here on December 6.

The violent Violets already had offered their services for such a game if it could be arranged and the committee selected Colgate as the best prospective opponent. Andy Kerr's powerful Maroon eleven is the high scoring team of the east and has lost only one game so far. Colgate still must meet Syracuse and Brown, but its regular season ends Thanksgiving day, November 27, while New York university winds its schedule the preceding Saturday. This would leave both teams plenty of time to prepare for the proposed benefit game.

The committee also accepted two offers already made and tentatively brought them together. The plan is to match the team of former Notre Dame players, which Knute Rockne has offered to collect and coach against the New York Giants of the National league. The date tentatively set for this game is Sunday, December 14.

Nine big high school games, involving the leading New York city teams also are on the committee's programme.

INDIANS EXHIBIT RAGGED FORM IN FINAL PRACTICE

HANOVER, N. H., Nov. 12—(AP)—The "ghost ball" made its appearance on Memorial field again today, when Head Coach Jackson Cannell's Dartmouth varsity players exhibited very ragged form in the last practice session before Saturday's objective game with Cornell at Ithaca.

Cannell kept his players working until long after dark in his attempt to get the Indians out of their sudden slump and most of the time was spent on fundamental drills.

Aarne Frigard, varsity halfback, who split his finger yesterday returned to the squad and worked out, despite his heavily bandaged left hand. He will probably be one of the starters against the Ithacans.

Most of the uncertain work was traced to the shifts that Cannell has been making in his varsity backfield. Bill Morton has been changed from a quarterback to a right halfback and Ward Donner has been shifted from right to left halfback. Neither has had opportunity to learn the individual assignments of their next stations and their uncertain performances have ruined the timing of the plays Cannell intends to use against Cornell.

McLENNAN MAY START IN PLACE OF BOOTH

NEW HAVEN, Nov. -2—(AP)—Coach Mal Stevens has Yale football followers guessing as to just what he plans to do with Albie Booth in Saturday's game with Princeton.

McLennan took Booth's place in the first backfield yesterday, giving rise to belief that Stevens planned to start McLennan and hold his half pint back in reserve. Today, however, Booth returned to the first backfield and with him came Dunn, who gave way to Taylor yesterday. Parker and Crowley retained their backfield berths.

The Elis in another secret session continued to work on new plays, holding a signal drill in addition. Because of the no-scouting agreement between Princeton and Yale, Stevens has stressed offensive rather than defensive tactics during the week.

Yale will hold a final practice in the bowl tomorrow before leaving for Princeton Friday morning. The squad expects to hold a workout following its arival in New Jersey.

CAGLE DECIDES TO PLAY PROFESSIONAL FOOTBALL

NEW YORK, Nov. 12—(AP)—Chris Cagle, former star of the Army football team, has decided that he likes playing better than coaching and has decided to take up professional football for the rest of the season.

Cagle has signed to play with the New York Giants of the National league, Tom Mara, owner of the Giants announced today. In a letter which accompanied Cagle's signed contract the former Army ace said that he was satisfied he was not much of a success as a coach and wanted to get back into the game as a player.

After eight years of college football at Southwestern Louisiana institute and Army, Cagle signed this year to coach Mississippi A. and M. His team has lost five of its six games. Cagle is to leave Starkville, Miss., by airplane tomorrow and will arrive here in time for Sunday's game between the Giants and the Chicago Bears but he is not expected to play until the following week against the Green Bay Packers.

Murphy Elected Captain

At a meeting held after the Wildcats-Trojan game, Murphy was elected captain, Jack Kivlin, manager, and John Fields, assistant manager, of the Wildcats. Murphy, who plays left halfback, is a star performer and will make a suitable leader. The team wishes to challenge the Jewish House of David, Fells All Stars, Laurel Hill Athletics, the Graceful Elephants or any other team averaging 140 pounds. The Wildcats, although outweighed by 20 pounds per man, held the strong Trojan array to a 6 to 6 tie Sunday.

The Norwich Town team is composed of such players as J. Casey, W. Durr, J. Kivlin (mgr.), K. Kivlin, J. Mara, B. Mara, D. Mara, J. Lash, B. Lash, Jim Lash, E. Pike, Aubrey, Hunter, Wheeler, Majecski, Ryan, Fields, McGill, Wheeler, B. Miller, W. Miller, La Varge, Matthews, Mullins, Captain Murphy, Cummings, E. Nilon, R. Nilon, E. Nylen, J. Nylen, Fritz, Gallagher, Machie, Spicer, Jarvis, Beany Beanys, Adams, Janette, Meehan, Punch, Tamais, Shorty.

Catcher Released by Pirates

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Nov. 12.—(AP)—Al Bool, catcher secured by the Pittsburgh Pirates from Baltimore of the International league in 1929 for the 1930 season, today was released outright to the Boston Braves. The price involved was not divulged.

Bool, who batted .345 during his last season in the International and accounted for 31 home runs, hit .260 in 77 games for the Pirates last season while serving as second string catcher. Bool lives on a farm near Lincoln, Nebr.

In Boston Tigers Lineup

BOSTON, Nov. 12—(AP)—Ronald "Peaches" Lyons and Paul Runge who broke into the Boston Bruins lineup last night against the Americans today were turned over to the Boston Tigers of the Canadian-American Hockey league for the remainder of the season. Both are forwards.

HIGH SCHOOL SPORTS

The Academy, at the present outlook, will enter its annual battle with Bulkeley a week from Saturday at the campus considerably of a short-ender. As Bulkeley has not beaten the Wildcats since 1926, this is something more than interesting.

Bulkeley's season record of three victories, two ties and two defeats is nothing to write home about, but the Academy's of two victories and five defeats is worse still. And when it is found that four of these five defeats have been by not less than three touchdowns; 25 to 6 to Westerly, 31 to 0 to Windham, 19 to 0 to Weaver and 28 to 0 to Harding, the situation is just that much worse.

Unless the entire football universe at the school takes a complete about-face within the next few days, the Red and Whitesters are going to be beaten by Bulkeley—and beaten bad.

Crosby high of Waterbury, Bill Schofield's aggregation of pigskin chasers, are just about ready to receive the palm as Connecticut's best but they still have a couple of tough games to dispose of. One is with Wilby, its inter-city rival, which will be staged on Thanksgiving day, and, although Wilby has not been so hot this campaign, you know how these objective games sometimes end up.

Earle E. Brigham, former Academy baseball coach, was in town over the week-end on a short vacation. In his capacity as athletic director of Worcester high schools, he has been studying the football systems of Greater Boston high schools and claims that some of these schools have teams superior to many small college elevens. Many of their games draw crowds of between 10,000 and 15,000 to their stadiums. While here Mr. Brigham attempted to arrange a game with Weaver high for one of the Worcester schools.

It is possible that in the not distant future, the Academy will take on Worcester schools. This should make for interesting engagements.

Traditional rivalries are having their annual airings all over the high school world the next two weeks. A few of them are the Academy-Bulkeley, the 22nd; Stonington-Westerly, the 11th and 27th; New Britain-Hartford, the 15th; Weaver-Bulkeley (Hartford), the 15th; Wilby-Crosby, the 27th.

The Connecticut Interscholastic Athletic conference has named March 14 and 15 for the State Class A-B High School basketball tournament. For the first time, tournament officials will be from outside Connecticut in an effort to prevent any possibility of dissatisfaction among competing schools.

In announcing the decision to use officials from outside the state, President Walter B. Spencer, speaking for the representatives, declared that no reflection was intended against the officials who have handled tournament games in the past. The decision was a precautionary one, he said, prompted in an effort to forestall any future possibility of a school raising the question of favoritism by an official toward a school for which he has worked regularly during the season. While it was not anticipated that the contingency might arise, the "ounce of prevention" was considered the better course.

The conference ruled Richtel, 21-year-old Bridgeport Central star, ineligible under the 12-week rule. It was reported that he has already left school.

Principal C. L. Kirschner of Hillhouse high school, for nearly 11 years an indefatigable worker and Class A school representative in the Connecticut Interscholastic Athletic conference, has retired from that office and has been succeeded by James C. Moore of Central high school, Bridgeport.

Other representatives named to the conference for the year are: Class B, Harold Swaffield, Roger Ludlowe high; Class C, E. I. Robinson, Putnam high; Class D, E. E. Trask, Old Saybrook.

Overwhelming high school scores are rare in this section, and 30 or 35 points is considered quite a margin, but gaze at the record of the Hugo (Col.) high school eleven. In three games Hugo has scored 386 points to six for the opposition. The scores of the games read: Hugo 176, Vono 6; Hugo 104, Burlington 0, and Hugo 106, Flagler 0.

TO REPLACE FOOTBALL COACH AT U. OF CALIF.

BERKELEY, Calif., Nov. 12—(AP)—Unconfirmed but persistent reports today said two coaches of the Big Ten conference—Dick Hanley of Northwestern and Bob Zuppke of Illinois—had been approached or would be approached to take over the berth as head football coach of the University of California.

Campus gossip said Coach C. M. "Nibs" Price would be replaced at the end of this season. Consensus was the executive committee of the associated students would discuss hiring a new coach.

The impending action was prompted by an editorial written and published in the Daily California, student publication, by Arthur Arlett, editor, demanding an investigation of athletic situation at California. California was defeated 74-0 last Saturday by Southern California.

Y GIRLS BASKETBALL TEAM HOLDS PRACTICE

The Y. M. C. A. Girls basketbal. team held its first practice session of the season Wednesday evening at the Y gym when about 20 girls turned out. Mrs. Streeter is again coaching the team this year and prospects are bright as practically all of the 1929-30 team are still available and there are several promising newcomers.

WILL DONATE $100,000 IF GAME IS TRANSFERRED TO SOLDIERS FIELD

EVANSTON, Ill., Nov. 12.—(AP)—The executive committee of Northwestern's board of trustees today offered to make an immediate donation of $100,000 to th eIllinois state unemployment commission providing certain conditions pertaining to the 1931 Notre Dame-Northwestern football game are allowed.

The offer, made in the face of requests that the November 22 game between Notre Dame and Northwestern be transferred to Soldier field, Chicago, and the proceeds given to charity carries these provisions:

1—That Notre Dame and the western conference agree to permit the transfer of the 1931 Notre Dame-Northwestern football game from South Bend, Ind., to Soldier field.

2—That Notre Dame consent that all funds, in excess of the amount to be shared between the two universities on the basis of a full attendance at Notre Dame stadium, be turned over to Northwestern as a refund for the $100,000 to be donated at the present time.

3—That the South Park board of Chicago again offer free use of Soldier field for the 1931 game at a suitable date to both Notre Dame and Northwestern.

If all conditions are met, Northwestern will take a chance of regaining its $100,000 advance on the extra receipts made at Soldier field, a stadium which can accommodate 55,000 to 65,000 more fans than Notre Dame's stadium.

ITALIAN TEAM LEADING IN SIX-DAY BIKE RACE

CHICAGO, Nov. 12—(AP)—The crack Italian team of Franco Georgetti and Paul Brocardo, took a one-lap lead in Chicago's international six-day bike race tonight with a record of 1,173 miles, nine laps and 72 points after 72 hours of racing.

Three teams were deadlocked for second place in the furious riding. They were Alfred Letourner and Marcel Guimbretiere, the french "Red Devil" team which held a tie with the new leaders all day for first place; Gaetana Belloni and Gerard Debates, the Italian-Belgian team, and Adolf Charlier and Roger Denef, the Belgian team.

Guimbretiere, Letourner, Debaetes, Deulberg and Peden were involved in another spill tonight but none was seriously injured.

BURKE WITH 145 WINS MID-SOUTH GOLF TOURNAMENT IN HEAVY RAIN

PINEHURST, N. C., Nov. 12—(AP)—Billy Burke, of Roundhill Country club, Greenwich, Conn., stroked his way through the rain today to win the 11th annual mid-south golf tournament and $400 prize money.

Showers that fell almost all day slowed up the field and ran the scores high but Burke's 74 in the morning and par 71 in the afternoon gave him a total of 145 that was two strokes better than his nearest competitors.

Gene Sarazen, former national open champion, quit in disgust on the ninth hole when his clubs played him false in the wet weather.

Emmet French, of Youngstown, Ohio, Tommy Armour, of Detroit, and Mike Turnesa, of Elmsford N. Y., divided second, third and fourth prize money of $200, $150 and $100. Each turned in a 73 and a 74 for a total of 147.

The winner was in doubt until the last player was in and that player was Armour, who battled his way homeward through a steady rain, across heavy greens and in the fading light of the evening.

Armour had a 73 for the morning round and went out in the afternoon in 37. Burke was already in and Armour needed a par 35 on the home nine to tie him. He had too much to contend with in the semi-darkness, however, and took three putts on the 12th to go one over par after a birdie 3 on the 11th. The same thing happened on the 14th and 18th to blast the championship hopes of the former national open and Canadian open title holder.

Burke won the mid south open three years ago. He had a chance to better par and his winning margin on th last round but three putts on the short fourth and the ninth, and two on the 11th spoiled his hopes.

"THREE MUSKETEERS" AGREE TO DISAGREE

MONTREAL, Nov. 12—(AP)—The "Three Musketeers" of Canadian sports promoting, Joe Cattarinich, Louis Letourneau and Leo Dandurand, owners of the Montreal Canadians, world's hockey champions, and of numerous race track interests in Canada and the United States, have agreed to disagree they announced today.

Cattarinich and Dandurand will carry on alone after having bought out the Letourneau interests. No reason was given for the split in the statement made by Dandurand today. It merely said:

"Mr. Letourneau, Mr. Cattarinich and myself have come to a parting of the ways as partners and we have bought out Mr. Letourneau's interest in all our joint enterprises."

N. F. A. GRIDSTERS PREPARING FOR REMAINING TWO GAMES

Battered and beaten in their last five starts, four of which were lost by overwhelming margins, the Academy football team is now preparing to make a last-ditch fight to salvage something from the remaining two games of the campaign. They are with Stonington and Bulkeley on successive Saturdays at the campus.

Wednesday afternoon Coach Whitney had the assistance of Paul Bitgood, the physical director of the school, in the drill. Mr. Bitgood has coached at Connecticut Aggies and Springfield college and is rated as one of the best line coaches in New England.

MAKES CLEAN SWEEP OF INT. MILITARY AWARDS

NEW YORK, Nov. 12.—(AP)—The stirring strains of Deutschland Uber Alles, the German national anthem, reverberated through huge Madison Square Garden tonight as the German army team completed a clean sweep of the international military awards in winning the coveted individual trophy at the National Horse show.

With a brilliant exhibition of horsemanship, Lieut. Baron Herrmann Von Nagel sent the "flea-beaten" grey, Dedo, over the bars the first time to tie with Captain W. B. Bradford up on Suzanne of the United States and then won the jump-off. Only one-half a fault was charged against the two horses on their first trip around the course but four and one-half errors was good enough to win the jump-off when Suzanne, in an in-and-outer, bowled over the first bar, tipped off a slip on the second and then refused the stone wall for a total five and one-half faults.

A crowd of 10,000 only slightly below the metropolitan gathering that saw the Germans defeat the United States and four other nations for the team trophy last night, watched the battle from every nook and corner of the Garden. Only 16 officers and horses competed, the Germans choosing to rely on the great Dedo and Kampfgerell while Sweden also entered only two of their three jumpers.

Apparently not desiring to gamble with Joe Aleshire, which ruined the night, they sent out Suzanne and it proved a goodchoice as the erratic fencer outclassed either of the other two United States horses, Dick Waring and Geraldyn, ridden by Major Harry D. Chamberlain and Lieut. J. W. Wofford, respectively.

There was a tie for third place but the crowd cared little for that. Glueing its eyes on Lieut. Von Nagel and Capt. Bradford as they brought out their mounts for the jump-off, a great sigh went up from the German section of the audience when Dedo, the first out, smashed the first fence and then tipped off a twig but that was all for he covered the remainder of the course without an error. Suzanne followed in the footsteps of her rival, bowling over the first fence and touching a slip on the second. She cleared the third of the bars successfully but hesitated momentarily on the fourth, which was the stone wall, and after a short deliberation was ruled out of the tanbark, the short halt being ruled a refusal.

One point behind the leaders trailed representatives from Canada, Sweden and the United States for the triple tie for third, fourth and fifth. One and one half faults each were charged against Captain L. D. Hammond, of the Canadian army; Astride Sergeant Murphy, Capt. Rolf Oern, of Sweden, up on Vidar and Lieut. J. W. Wofford, who rode Geraldyn in the American team.

Rocco Wins Decision

TORONTO, Nov. 12—(AP)—Steve Rocco, Toronto flyweight, returned to the ring after a long absence tonight and decisively outpointed Marty Gold, veteran Philadelphia boxer, in a ten round bout.

Gold, who recently defeated Frenchy Belanger, Canadian flyweight champion, was unable to cope with Rocco's speed and crowding tactics. The winner weighed 113 pounds, and Gold 113 1-4.

Attention Mohegans

To the Captain-Manager of Mohegans:—The game between your Mohegans and the Laurel Hill Wildcats was won by Laurel Hill by forfeit when you deliberately left the field in the first minute of the final quarter. Your claim of roughing was not called to our attention, nor did you state you were leaving to the referee. Any team which first leaves the field forfeits the game by the score of 1 to 0.

You stated that it was the L. H. A. C. that you played which was impossible as the game had been cancelled and seven of the L. H. A. regulars were out of town. The manager of the Wildcats desires to state that the work of the referee was satisfactory while the Mohegans so-called proved to be poor sports. The Mohegans had the idea that football was a ladies' game. The Wildcats think that an exciting game of tiddledy-winks would prove too strenuous fo rthe Mohegans. Also let it be stated that the ball was on the Mohegan one-yard line with the second down coming in the last quarter when the Mohegans fearing defeat left the field.

This game would have passed unprotested had the Mohegans played fair, but they put the game in the paper as a game won against the L. H. A. C. which has never been beaten. If the Mohegans desire to play the L. H. A. C. Sunday, Nov. 23rd., phone 1481 between 5:30-6 any week night except Saturday and ask for Nicky.

Only three of the L. H. A. C. players appeared in Tuesday's game while the remainder of the team was composed of the L. H. A. C. junior team, called the Laurel Hill Wildcats.

Signed BRADLEY FOWLER,
Manager of L. H. A. C.

Eastern Football Briefs

WEST POINT, N. Y., Nov. 12—(AP)—With the entire squad in uniform for the first time since the Illinois game, Army's varsity had a light workout today, made up of calisthenics, a discussion of last Saturday's game and a bit of passing. The scrubs had a full session working with Kentucky Wesleyan, Ursinus and Notre Dame plays.

NEW YORK—Coach Lou Little of Columbia put much emphasis on speed today as the Lions prepared for the Brown game. An hour of defensive dummy scrimmage and an equal time of offensive work in real scrimmage made up the workout.

Ralph Hewitt [illegible] in uniform but did not get into action. It still is doubtful whether he will be able to play Saturday.

MINIMUM FINES GIVEN ACCUSED AT STONINGTON COURT SESSION

(Special to The Bulletin)

WESTERLY, Nov. 12.—Postponed session of Stonington town court was held Wednesday by Judge William A. Wilcox, the regular Tuesday sitting falling on the Armistice day holiday. Court business was disposed of as follows, with Prosecutor Henry P. Hammacher, of Mystic, in charge of the state's cases:

Alger A. Davis, 39, charged with reckless auto driving, on which count he had been arrested and held pending an investigation, was recommended for an absolute nolle. Mr. Hammacher said that the state's only witness was a small boy, whose testimony would be erratic, and the case had shaped itself into one of civil action. Judge Wilcox granted an absolute nolle.

H. J. Messick, 24, of the submarine base, Groton, was before the court charged with driving an automobile on the Boston Post road on Sept. 26 at a rate of speed greater than reasonable and proper. He pleaded guilty. Prosecutor Hammacher told the court that the defendant was the only occupant of his practically new car, which was driven at such a rapid rate of speed that it was unable to negotiate the Vargas curve in the state road into Stonington borough and had hit a telegraph pole and was almost completely demolished. State police found that brake marks on the highway could be followed for some 200 feet. A minimum fine was recommended and the accused stated that he had nothing to say. Judge Wilcox found him guilty and imposed a $10 fine and costs, totaling $22.95.

Albert Gouvin, 36, was before the court for failure to have a Connecticut operator's license and he was driving a Cadillac sedan with plates for a Maxwell sedan when apprehended by Connecticut state police, although he had a Rhode Island operator's license and the auto was registered in Connecticut. The prosecutor represented to the court that the defendant had four minor children under 16 years to support and under the circumstances recommended a nolle. All costs down to $5 were ordered remitted by Judge Wilcox.

Manuel F. Silvia, 30, of Stonington, apprehended by Connecticut State Police Officer Swanson for reckless driving on the Boston Post road, pleaded guilty. His court appearance followed an automobile accident in which he had a scraped running board and dented fender. Prosecutor Hammacher stated to the court that the accused also had the odor of liquor on his breath, and under a new Connecticut state law the offense was more serious than a reckless driving charge. On the other hand, the accused had four children under 16 years and had only worked as a machinist helper for three days a week since last June. Judge Wilcox took all matters into consideration and imposed a fine of $50, remitting $25, and the additional costs taxed were $12.95.

John Smith, of Westerly, was before the court charged with the operation of an automobile of Connecticut registration with a Rhode Island operator's license. Prosecutor Hammacher stated that the accused had gone to Stonington in a Rhode Island car and then had been driving a Connecticut car back to Westerly to have it overhauled when apprehended by State Police Officer Swanson. He said the situation was a technical one and that the offense was not a wilful one. On the prosecutor's recommendation a nolle was granted on the payment of $5 costs.

Peter Sarreson, 31, of Mystic, pleaded guilty to a charge of reckless operation of an auto on the Boston Post road on Oct. 20 when, at Wilcox curve, he hit a telephone pole and broke it off near the top, and was also taken to Dr. Taylor in Stonington for treatment. The accident occurred late at night and there was no traffic and a minimum fine was recommended. The defendant had pleaded guilty and the minimum fine of $25 was imposed with costs taxed at $15.55 additional.

Continuance was made to Nov. 18 in the case against John A. Altimari, of Pierce street, Westerly, who was arrested by Stonington Police Officer William Ostman on Armistice day at Owen field during the football game between W. H. S. and S. H. S., as the result of a fist fight in which he became engaged with a Stonington resident when Westerly football players were reported to have been called "Wops."

Continuance to Nov. 18 was also made in the cases charging the operation of automobiles without licenses against Harold Chappell and Jacob O. Prescott, when State Police Officer Arthur Whitmarsh did not return in time from a Norwich court session to be in Stonington court before it adjourned.

WEDDING

Sposato—Pampel

On Wednesday morning at 9 o'clock a Westerly young man, Samuel James Sposato, took a Stonington bride, at St. Mary's church, Stonington, when he was united in marriage with Miss Henrietta Alvida Pampel, by Rev. E. A. Cotter, who performed the ceremony and celebrated the nuptial high mass. Miss Pampel is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alban Pampel, of 7 Elihu street, Stonington, and the groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. James Sposato, of 10 Pond street, Westerly. The bride wore a gown of white chiffon made in princess style and tulle veil caught with a band of orange blossoms. Her maid of honor, Miss Dorothy Shackley, wore orchid chiffon with hat to match and carried yellow chrysanthemums. The wedding march was played by Mrs. Catherine Murphy. Robert King rendered a solo. The bride's bouquet was of white roses and lilies of the valley. The bride's gift to the groom was a wrist watch and to her attendant a crystal necklace. The groom's gift to his bride was a sum of money and to the best man, Angelo Terranova, he gave a bill fold and key case. Following the ceremony, a reception was held at the Mohican hotel in New London. On their return from a wedding trip, Mr. and Mrs. Sposato will be at home after Nov. 17 at 136 Canal street, Westerly.

LEGION'S ANNUAL POPPY DAY DRIVE NETS GOOD SUM

(Special to The Bulletin)

WESTERLY, Nov. 12.—The annual poppy day drive, conducted by Harold W. Merrill post, No. 16, American Legion, and its auxiliary, according to announcement made Wednesday, netted between $350 and $400. The exact receipts turned in by the workers up until Wednesday morning were $344.33, but there are still two collectors to report and the total should at least equal the $350 mark. The members of the Legion post auxiliary had active charge of the sale of poppies and about 35 women and girls gave up the entire holiday to carry on the campaign. They were in the business section before the parade in the morning and continued at their task during the afternoon. After the cost of the poppies is deducted and sent to service men still in hospitals who make the poppies, the balance is divided between the Legion and the auxiliary, the former getting three-quarters, and the latter one-quarter. These funds will be used entirely for the relief of local ex-service men.

The Westerly chapter of the American Red Cross, of which Henry L. Burdick is the chairman, has proved the good Samaritan to the extent that 266 families in Westerly in which there were 936 children last year were piloted through sickness, unemployment, desertion and other misfortunes. Thanks to the aid of this worthy organization the families were able to weather the storm and to become community assets instead of liabilities. If the public of Westerly believes in the preservation of family life, believes that families should be aided through periods of difficulty by sympathetic and careful planning by such organizations as the American Red Cross, they are asked to do their part in making this work possible. The annual roll call of the Red Cross is being held throughout the country until Thanksgiving time. Frank Ahern, chairman of the roll call in Westerly, announced Wednesday the workers of the 18 teams who will canvass Westerly and the outlying sections of the town in a house-to-house visit to interest the members of the community in the work of the Red Cross. These teams, each under direction of a captain, started out on the work Wednesday morning and within the next few days every home in the community will have been visited. Every member of the town, regardless of his or her age, can become a member of the Red Cross, and every family is urged to see that the members are enrolled between now and Thanksgiving time.

Judge William A. Wilcox, of Pawcatuck, left Westerly Wednesday noon on a business trip to New York city.

Westerly Fire Chief Robert Bonner, wife and son, have returned to Westerly from a visit in Washington, D. C., where they were called by the serious illness of Chief Bonner's uncle.

Signs of the approaching winter are seen in the placing of the wooden temporary steps in front of the Westerly postoffice and the shutting off of the public drinking fountain on West Broad street.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas P. Nichols returned Tuesday night from a visit to Mount Holyoke college in Massachusetts with their daughter, Miss Lydia Nichols, a senior.

Raymond E. Mullaney returned to Providence Wednesday morning, after being the week-end guest of his parents in Pawcatuck.

Harold Reardon has returned to Norwich, after being the guest of relatives in Westerly.

Miss Jeanie Smith has returned to Westerly from a visit with friends in Newport, R. I.

A. C. LATHAM CAMP, S. OF V. ORGANIZED 44 YEARS

A. C. Latham camp, Sons of Union Veterans of the Civil war met in G. A. R. hall, Tuesday evening, officers were installed by Officer Arthur Rathbun, and an interesting program given. The officers are: Commander, C. F. Lawton; senior vice commander, Arthur S. Rathbun; junior vice commander, Edward Marsden; camp council, C. O. Reynolds, Albert Neff and A. W. Butler; secretary and treasurer, Fred M. Williams; patriotic instructor, Clifford E. Holmes; guide and color bearer, Royce Wolfe; inside guard, Charles Reynolds; outside guard, Judson Turney. Clifford E. Holmes was presented a past commander's badge. Following this, there was a song by Willard W. Keigwin; talk by Rev. Byron U. Hatfield; history of the Camp, by C. O. Reynolds. This history, prepared by Edward Marsden, read as follows: "Forty-four years ago May 19, 1886, the first camp of Sons of Veterans was organized in Mystic, Connecticut. This camp is referred to as the Old Camp because it preceded the present A. C. Latham camp. The first call of officers of the old A. C. Latham camp elected May 19, 1886, consisted of eleven men. As the Old Camp was a semi-military organization, the officers were given military titles such as, captain, first lieutenant, second lieutenant, chaplain, orderly sergeant, quartermaster sergeant, sergeant of the guard, color sergeant, corporal of the camp, camp guard and the picket guard. The old A. C. Latham camp died a natural death January 23, 1903. Six years after the ending of the Old Camp, November 9, 1909, the present A. C. Latham camp was organized by Charles R. Hale, then divisioner organizer, with twenty-five charter members, adopting the same name of the Old Camp, and by courtesy of the department, retaining the same number, 19. This camp was instituted by Commander William F. Alcorn of Camp No. 17, New Haven, Conn., assisted by the brothers of Jard R. Avery camp, No. 20, of New London, Conn., when the following officers were elected and installed: Commander, Charles H. Latham; senior vice-commander, E. R. Williams, Jr.; junior vice-commander, Dr. W. S. Smith; secretary, Ernest H. Saunders; treasurer, J. Alden Rathbun. The choice of the meeting nights fell on the second and fourth Tuesdays of each month. As these were also the meeting nights of the Grand Army, we held our meetings after theirs so they could remain with us, thus cementing the bonds of loyality between one parent organization and the Sons of Veterans. Of the twenty-five or thirty Grand Army men who were here at the organization of this camp, but one remains in the post, Comrade Amos S. Hancock. For the twenty-one years the camp has expended for flowers and fruit, $370., for the assistance of the Grand Army and its work, $50, and for general relief work, approximately $200. For its twenty-one years the camp has been harmonious and at present is in a comparatively healthy condition. It is hoped that during the next twenty-one years the camp will be in as healthy and prosperous condition as it has been in the past." Following the program, a mystery salad supper was served to members and guests. Out of town guests were Amos B. Chapman camp and auxiliary of Westerly, Jard R. Avery camp of New London and the past department president of the Daughters of Veterans of Rhode Island, Miss Ida M. Clark of Westerly. Phoebe Packer Rathbun tent of Mystic was also present. The Sons from Westerly presented cigars and the auxiliary presented a large birthday cake with candles on it.

FINAL QUOTATIONS 1 TO 5 POINTS HIGHER IN MARKET YESTERDAY

NEW YORK, Nov. 12.—(AP)—The speculative pendulum swung widely on the stock market today. Early declines of 2 to 5 points sent prices to new lows, but the reaction was equally vigorous and final quotations were 1 to 5 net higher on a turnover of 2,384,020 shares.

The rally, like yesterday's, came in the afternoon. Its basis was an oversold situation in the market which needed little stimulation to put the shorts to covering. That impetus was afforded by the half cent rise in copper prices, the first advance in red metal this year, and when it was announced the response was prompt.

Wheat dropped 1 to 2 cents a bushel on a bullish estimate of European requirements and reports of crop damage in Missouri. Corn was firm, fractionally higher at the close. Cotton rose $1.05 to $1.25 a bale net, reflecting in part the recovery in stocks. Bonds, however, were soft, with the exception of the Liberties.

The day's business news was mixed. Copper's return to 10 cents a pound offset the October increase in stocks of the metal, but with a production curtailment program believed to be virtually assured and a further stiffening of prices expected the outlook for the industry appeared better. Pennsylvania crude oil quotations were reduced, steel operations showed a drop of about 4 per cent for the past week, and loadings of freight declined, although the loss was less than seasonal.

The steel trade reviews, reconciled to an unimproved immediate outlook, are talking of an upturn in January. "Iron Age" recalled that precedent pointed to "some measure of recovery at that time, just as it offers little hope of a change in trend in the remaining weeks of 1930."

Shorts also had little faith in the rally, in view of the fact that scores of stocks had just touched new lows, and who continued to sell after the advance had started, found their immediate position uncomfortable, for the market closed at the top. The upward move began in the copper stocks. Kennecott and American Smelting rose 3 points, Andes 5, Anaconda, Cerro De Pasco, Calumet and Arizona and Phelps Dodge, 1 to 2, and the inactive Chile, 9.

When the covering became general, U. S. Steel, down 2 points to 139 1-4 in the early selling, rebounded to close at 144, up 3. American Telephone, whose weakness featured the morning session, turned a 4-point decline into a net advance of 4 1-2. National Biscuit closed 2 points higher, a recovery of 4 from its low. Amusement shares, which with the food and utilities had led the forenoon break, got back what they had lost. Loew's, down 3 points, finished only 1-4 off. Fox rallied 3 points.

Many rails, including Pennsylvania, Erie, Union Pacific, Pere Marquette, Chesapeake & Ohio, St Louis Southwestern and Missouri Pacific preferred touched new lows and made only irregular recovery, although Atchison gained 4 net, Norfolk & Western 3, and New Haven and New York Central about 2.

Two-point net advances were shown by American Can, Bethlehem Steel, Corn Products, Westinghouse, Coca Cola, Consolidated Gas and North American. Sears Roebuck, General Motors, Texas Corp., and Standard Oil of N. J., improved about a point, while Case and Eastman Kodak were up 5.

Foreign exchanges were firm, both the French franc and sterling cables ruled slightly higher.

THE CURB MARKET

NEW YORK, Nov. 12.—(AP)—Curb shares made further irregular recovery today, in sympathy with the flurry of short covering on the big board. The market was a little less active than yesterday, sales aggregating 731,800 shares.

The copper shares moved up a point or two, but as the copper group in this market is comparatively small, the increase in copper metal prices did not have as stimulating an influence on the general list as it did on the big board. Noranda and Newmont each gained 2, and Roan Antelope, South African producer, mounted 1. Bunker Hill and Sullivan, which produces other non-ferrous metals, also rose 2 points.

The recovery was again most conspicuous in the utilities, but it lacked yesterday's vigor. The market sold off during the early hours, and did not get far above yesterday's final prices in the late rally. Electric Bond & Shares and American Super Power were active features, and together with Middle West, American Gas and St. Regis they gained about a point. American Super Power declared an annual dividend of 40 cents, against $1 and 1-25 of a share of stock last year. Associated Gas A was a firm feature, recovering 2 points, more Northern States A rose 3.

Oils were somewhat irregular. Cities Service recovered 1-2, closing at 19, and Indiana and Gulf were about steady. Kentucky rose a point, but Humble sagged about 2 to a new low, and Vacuum lost 3-4. Some of the natural gas issues were firm. Lone Star gained a point.

In the industrials, U. S. Gypsum rose 2 points in response to an extra dividend of 50 cents. Fox Theatres A rose 1 1-2 in sympathy with strength in Fox Film. American Cyanamid which has been strongly supported around 10, rose 1-2 to 10 1-2. Anglo-Chilean Nitrate touched a new low at 13 1-2, and closed at 14, off 1. Several lightly traded issues were again heavy. Deere closed off 3 points. A. C. Gilbert and Art Metal Works dropped to new lows.

In the investment trusts, the Shenandoah, Blue Ridge and Selected Industries preferred issues sagged a point or two to new lows. Goldman Sachs trading, however, rallied 1-2 of a point. United Founders was heavily traded, dropping to 9, then rallying to close at 10, up 1-4.

BOND MARKET

NEW YORK, Nov. 12.—(AP)— Many new lows for the year were established in the bond market today as a heavy tone dominated trading in the investment division, despite the rally which developed in equity issues near the close.

Only a small section of the list presented a firm appearance consistent with the easy tone of the money market. United States governments were again strong and a few high grade rails and utilities advanced fractionally. Otherwise a lower trend was in evidence, being particularly marked in second and third grade rails and industrials. Many stock privilege issues failed to participate in the final hour rally of stocks.

A feature of the irregularly lower trend of foreign bonds was the outbreak of liquidation that sharply depressed German loans and was communicated to some other European obligations. German 5 1-2s, the International loan floated under the Young plan six months ago, dipped 1 1-4 points to a new low price at 73 1-2 and the 7s reacted to within 1-4 of the 1930 minimum.

The extent of the liquidation in domestic bonds was reflected in the average of 30 bonds which dipped 4-10ths of a point to a new 1930 low at 97.6. Railroads and industrials set new minimums for the year.

The selling affected all classes of railroad bonds. Lows were reached by Central of Georgia 5s, Chicago and Northwestern 4 1-2s C, and General 4 1-2s, Erie 5s, Soo 4s, and Seaboard All Florida 6s. The sharpest breaks occurred in International Great Northern first 6s, which yielded 10 1-8, and Denver Rio Grande and Western 5s, which reacted 4 7-8. Pressure was heavy against bonds of the St. Paul and St. Louis, San Francisco railroads.

The irregularly lower trend in the utility group was marked by sharp rises in several bonds, notably Interborough Rapid Transit 6s, which rallied nearly 5 points and International Telephone debenture 5s, which gained 1 7-8. American Telephone 5s yielded 7-8 and Consolidated Gas 5 1-2s declined 1-4.

In the stock privilege group, American International 5 1-2s, Anglo Chilean Nitrate 7s, Rock Island 4 1-2s, Colon Oil 6s, Lautauro Nitrate 6s, Shell Union 5s, and Warner Brothers 6s sagged 1 to 2 points. Schulco 6 1-2s dropped 4 and General Theatres 6s reacted 3 1-2.

Offering is being made of a $7,407,000 commonwealth of Kentucky bridge revenue 4 1-2 per cent bond issue. American Sugar Refining company announced today it had authorized redemption of $5,000,000 50-year six per cent gold bonds at 103 on January 1, 1931.

CHICAGO GRAIN MARKET

CHICAGO, Nov. 12.—(AP)—Brisk upturns in price took place in all the grain pits today, after all cereals had undergone a setback to fresh bottom records. Simultaneous with the late rise of grain values was much talk that the record of past cycles of low prices for commodities indicated that recoveries were now to be looked for. Significance also was attached to reports that farm board allies would require actual deliveries of about 10,000,000 bushels on December wheat contracts and the world's available surplus of wheat was 32,000,000 bushels less than recently had been estimated.

Closing quotations on wheat were nervous, 7-8a2 3-8c a bushel higher than Monday's finish. Corn closed at 1-8c net decline to 7-8c advance, oats 7-8c off to 7-8c up, and provisions unchanged to 32c down.

NORTH STERLING

Local people who have to travel the Margaret Henry road daily and weekly have looked forward all summer to the time when that mud-hole on the Killingly end of said road would be graveled for the coming winter; but no such good news! It seems that the road workers are done on that road for this year, for they went as far as that bad hole and stopped. Localities would be very grateful to First Selectman Charles Tillinghast if he would see to it that this bad place was fixed before it freezes up. They all do their trading in Danielson and feel sure the merchants will be benefitted by such a move to make traveling more convenient.

Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Hansen were in New London one day the past week.

Sunday afternoon Mr. and Mrs. Bert Benway and family of East Killingly visited Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Spooner.

Selectman G. F. Pierce is doing some fine work on the local roads with gravel which is purchased from the town of Killingly.

POETRY

Sunshine

Sing a song of sunshine;
Smile a bit, and see
How much less of sorrow
In the world there'll be.
Send the light of laughter
Tinkling through your tears—
Send a song of sunshine
Singing down the years.

Sing a song of sunshine;
You should never let Gloom enshroud your spirit;
You should never fret
Over trifling troubles
Here today and gone—
Sing a song of sunshine,
Then keep singing on.

Sing a song of sunshine;
Let sweet Nature teach
That, though days be many,
There's a joy for each.
When your own heart's aching
Dully through and through,
Cheer some soul who suffers
More by half than you.

Sing a song of sunshine;
Brother, do you hear?
Sunshine puts a rainbow
Into every tear.
Though the skies be cloudy
Play they're clear and blue—
Keep a song of sunshine
In the heart of you.

—Strickland W. Gillilan, in Baltimore American.

The Fisherman's Hymn

The osprey sails above the sound,
The geese are gone, the gulls are flying;
The herring shoals swarm thick around
The nets are launched, the boats are plying;
Yo ho, my hearts! let's seek the deep,
Raise high the song and cheerily wish her,
Still as the bending net we sweep.
"God bless the fish-hawk and the fisher!"

She brings us fish—she brings us spring
Good times, fair weather, warmth and plenty,
Fine stores of shad, trout, herring, [illegible]
Sheepshead and drum, and old-wives daily.
Yo ho, my hearts! let's seek the deep,
Ply every oar, and cheerily wish her,
Still as the bending net we sweep.
"God bless the fish-hawk and the fisher!"

She rears her young on yonder tree,
She leaves her faithful mate to mind 'em;
Like us, for fish, she sails to sea,
And, plunging, shows us where to find 'em;
Yo ho, my hearts! let's seek the deep,
Ply every oar, and cheerily wish her,
While the slow bending net we sweep.
"God bless the fish-hawk and the fisher!"

—Alexander Wilson.

JACOBSON'S BOAT DRAGGED FROM BOTTOM OF THE SEA

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Nov. 12.—With the recovery today of the fishing sloop of Anthony Jacobson, Fishers Island lobsterman, all hope has been abandoned that Jacobson is alive, for with the sinking of his boat off North Hills fishing grounds near Fishers Island, Saturday, it is evident that Jacobson drowned, as his craft settled in the sea and sank. The sloop was located several miles off the island, at the bottom of the sea, this morning by a group of searchers. The boat was floated and when a search of the cabin was made Jacobson's body was not there, as was expected it would be. Jacobson could not swim, but he always kept life preservers in the cabin and they were found there when the boat was floated. Jacobson went to the fishing grounds early Saturday forenoon. Later, other fishermen observed his boat in distress, for the bow was low in the water. They went to the island for assistance, but when a search for the sloop was made it could not be found for it had sunk. It is believed that the keel was punctured by the craft riding on a rock and before Jacobson had an opportunity to don a preserver the boat went to the bottom.

Jacobson had three brothers in Stafford Springs, Conn., one being postmaster of that borough.

SON'S YALE THEFTS DRIVE CHAS. REILLY TO SUICIDE

The general belief prevails that Charles Reilly, about 55, of 11 Perry street, assistant engineer of the steam yacht Narada, has committed suicide, carrying out a threat to do so. Reilly has been missing about 36 hours. Reilly had been in a despondent frame of mind for several days, apparently because of his son, William, having been arrested recently at New Haven, charged with theft in having stolen apparel and jewelry belonging to students at Yale. The case came up in the New Haven city court yesterday and was continued a week. On the very same day, Reilly declared that he would end his life by hanging and disappeared. Since then all trace of the man has been lost, although many searchers have sought to find Reilly's body, dead or alive.

Reilly was at his home yesterday forenoon and shortly after 12 o'clock, and while noticeably despondent, he took a rope, leaving his home and declaring that he intended to kill himself by hanging. His second child, a boy of about 14, followed the father to Montauk bridge and to the overhead bridge of the New Haven railroad. Reilly left the highway at this point and went to the tracks, but because of a freight train passing the youth lost sight of his father. When the boy returned home and related his experience the police were asked to give assistance in finding the missing man. Several automobile and motorcycle officers were sent to where Reilly had been seen last and then a search of the woods off Ocean avenue and leading to Waterford was made. The search continued until nightfall without any trace of Reilly having been obtained. This morning the police resumed their search and were assisted by state police, a half dozen members of the United States coast guard and practically the entire crew of the Narada, but in spite of a thorough scouring of the woods, Reilly was not found. The search will be continued tomorrow.

Free Bread For Needy

The city's charity department will supervise the distribution of 1,000 loaves of bread weekly to the deserving needy, beginning Thursday. The bread is donated by one of the local bakeries and will be delivered each Monday and Thursday at the B. P. Learned mission, corner of Main and Federal streets, where each afternoon from 3 until 5 o'clock the bread will be distributed to applicants. Tickets with which bread may be obtained are being distributed at the charity office in the city hall by the Associated Charities, under supervision of Mrs. Marion Phillips, by the Diocesan bureau, under direction of Miss Della Moroney, and by the Learned mission under Superintendent Mansfield. It was stated by Charity Commissioner I. S. Dorsey that tickets will not be necessary unless it appears that people are obtaining the free bread who have no need of charity.

HANCOCK'S LAWYER STALLS, QUIBBLING OVER IDENTITY

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Nov. 12.—Vincent Hancock, of Atlantic Highlands, N. J., arrested here several days ago at the request of the federal authorities at New Jersey, who hold an indictment charging Hancock with smuggling and conspiracy to defraud the government, was before United States Commissioner Russell H. Corcoran at the customs house, this afternoon at 2 o'clock. Hancock is fighting the charges and, through his attorney, Louis Halle, maritime lawyer of New York, an endeavor is being made to prove that Hancock is not the fugitive named in the indictment. After an hour and a half of discussion for the purpose of establishing Hancock's identity, the case was continued until the 28th inst., and the prisoner furnished a surety on his bond of $5,000.

Hancock was arrested in New London about a week ago, at which time it is claimed he was here accompanied by two companions for the purpose of superintending the transfer of a load of liquor from a boat to trucks, which it was intended should be delivered in New Jersey. The plan failed, so far as is known, and the men, all members of a rum-ring, left town. When Hancock returned a day or two later and was found on Broad street he was arrested. It is the claim of the federal authorities that Hancock and his gang have engineered the landing of immense cargoes of liquor into New Jersey ports and that they are not only the owners of contact boats, but also own several large boats that bring the supplies to points where the liquor is transferred to smaller boats and delivered ashore for ultimate delivery by truck at the destination of the cargo. It is further claimed that the gang was in New London for the sole purpose of receiving a load of liquor by water, paying for it, for they were possessed of $14,000, and then causing it to be continued to New Jersey, for disposal for the holiday trade.

Paul Kurlovich, of 137 North Bank street; Mrs. Clyde Manwaring and infant daughter, Niantic; Franklin Pretto, 62 Colt street, patients at Lawrence Memorial hospital, were discharged today.

Groton state police arrested two youthful automobile thieves last night and this morning and after they had given the police a brief, but lively chase. The youths are Henry Dufresne and Leo St. Pierre, both of Pawtucket, R. I. The former has a police record and a deferred sentence of three years in jail is hanging over him. The young men yesterday stole a Buick sedan owned by Samuel Rigelhaitt, in Pawtucket. They drove as far as Fort Hill, Groton, before their supply of gasoline became exhausted. Stopping at a filling station the car was supplied with 10 gallons of gasoline and a quart of oil. Instead of paying for their purchase, the youths entered the auto and speeded away. Complaint was made at the state police barracks and last evening Officer Arthur Kaith came upon the auto in Ledyard. The driver was signaled to stop, but attempted to make a getaway. He finally obeyed the command of Kaith, but as soon as the auto came to a standstill, Dufresne and St. Pierre leaped to the highway and fled into the woods. Kaith followed the fugitives and when they were outdistancing the officer, Kaith fired his revolver to intimidate the thieves. St. Pierre stopped, but Dufresne continued to run and escaped. St. Pierre was brought to New London and locked up. This morning Officer Eric Swanson found Dufresne walking along the highway in Poquonoc and arrested him. This noon both thieves were delivered into the custody of an officer from Pawtucket, who accompanied the youths back to Pawtucket in the stolen auto.

Found In Meriden

An automobile owned by Edison Davis, 14 Home street, stolen here last night, was recovered today at Meriden, where it had been abandoned. A Meriden owned auto was stolen a short time before the New London car was found and it is believed the thieves abandoned one car and then stole the other. Davis' auto, an Oakland convertible coupe, was parked in front of his home about 8 o'clock last night and was stolen during the brief absence of the owner. It is understood that the car was taken by two sailors.

Robbins Appeals From Fine

Wilder Robbins, 54 Cutler street, a machinist, was in the police court this morning, charged with driving while under the influence of liquor. He pleaded not guilty, but the testimony of the arresting officer, Sergeant William Babcock, and other officers who were at police headquarters when Robbins was locked up, left no doubt as to the driver's guilt. Robbins was fined $100 and costs. He filed notice of appeal and furnished a surety on his bond for his appearance at the next term of the court of common pleas. Robbins was arrested Oct. 25 on Howard street and two days later when arraigned in court pleaded guilty. The imposing of a fine was deferred to permit Robbins an opportunity to arrange for its payment. The case was continued until yesterday when Robbins appeared in court with an attorney and signified his intention of changing his plea to that of not guilty. For that reason the case was continued until today.

The continued case of Vitto De Nola, 17, of 73 Fourth street, charged with driving with defective tail-light and failing to have capacity inscription on the sides of the truck, was disposed of by the youthful driver being fined $10 and costs. De Nola was one of about 40 drivers arrested Saturday and Sunday by state police officers.

J. Ralph Overman, of Hartford, was charged with parking overtime on State street yesterday, but the driver failed to appear in court and forfeited his bond of $2.

A serious fire broke out this noon in the woods off Ocean avenue and Niles Hill road and a still alarm was sent to fire headquarters. Ockford Hose company responded and the blaze was subdued with brooms and chemicals. No damage was occasioned.

City Clerk Julian D. Moran is having his vacation of two weeks and during his absence from his office the duties are being fulfilled by Assistant City Clerk Miss Elizabeth T. Roath.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Broadway Theatre

Drama, that portrayal by action of the things that make up the struggle of life, is given its most vivid picturization in "The Silver Horde," Radio Pictures' red-blooded outdoor romance of the north, which opened yesterday at the Warner Bros. Broadway theatre.

Thousands read, enjoyed and thrilled to this romantic novel by Rex Beach. Millions will find new thrills, drama and action in the talking screen version.

From the opening scenes where Joel McCrea and Raymond Hatton fight their way through the frozen north, to the final sequences where Evelyn Brent and Jean Arthur fight for the love of their man, the story is complete in its pathos, romance, drama and comedy.

The manner in which the story moves from the frozen wastelands, to fishing villages into an American metropolis and back again with rapid entertaining progress, brands George Archainbaud, the director, as an artist in his line.

Three terrific fights are staged with telling effect. One of them involves many boats and scores of men. Another, between Joel McCrea and Ivan Linow, is one of the most spectacular exciting man-to-man encounters ever staged for a motion picture.

BINGHAM JOINS PREDICTION OF BETTER TIMES CLOSE AT HAND

(Special to The Bulletin)

STORRS, Nov. 12—More than 250 members of the Connecticut Manufacturers association assembled at Storrs today for the annual meeting, this being the first time that the association has met in this section of the state. Last year's meeting was held in Bridgeport.

On arriving at the campus of Connecticut Agricultural college, the industrialists registered in the community house, immediately after which a business meeting was held for the election of officers. E. Kent Hubbard of Middletown was reelected president of the association and John H. Goss of Waterbury was elected vice president. Other officers chosen were: R. C. Buell of Hartford, secretary-treasurer; W. R. Webster, director from Fairfield county; R. H. Whitehead, director from New Haven county; and C. R. Gardinor, president of the International Silver company of Meriden and A. E. Payson, president of the American Thermos Bottle company of Norwich, directors at large.

Following the business meeting a battalion parade was staged by the R. O. T. C. unit of the college. The splendid appearance made by the men drew words of praise from Senator Hiram Bingham, who had come from Washington to address the manufacturers.

Bingham Speaks on Unemployment

Choosing "Unemployment" as the topic of his address, Senator Bingham commended manufacturers on their efforts to keep as many as possible on their payrolls, whether or not they were able to supply full time work for all. The senator read a report showing that the falling off in the business of more than 40 of the important industries of the country had brought about the "most serious situation we have faced in many years."

In an effort to determine the causes of the present depression, federal employees at Washington have gone to an even deeper source than have most of the people who are making superficial investigations, the senator pointed out. The silver situation in India, which has resulted in putting India on a gold basis, has had much to do with the silver industry in America, he said. While Mexico and China have always been America's greatest customers in silver, the former is now bothered by a shrinkage in the purchasing power of silver in that country, and China is in the midst of a revolution. And history shows that when China has a revolution, it sometimes lasts for as long as 200 years. Therefore, we can not hope to find relief in that direction for many years to come, the speaker predicted.

Stating that the unemployment situation was world-wide and much worse in England than in America because of the former's dole system, Mr. Bingham urged greater cooperation between employers and employees in this country. Praising the increase of labor-saving machinery, yet deploring the resulting labor problem, Mr. Bingham warned the manufacturers that in spite of all the machinery for labor saving a market must be found for the increased production, and with many thousands of men out of work the market is considerably deflated. While the immediate past has been pretty dark, and while surveys show that the employment situation is at a standstill the senator urged the industrialists to take heart for "good times are just around the corner."

Entertainment Features

A tour of the buildings on the campus followed the luncheon and address. Later in the afternoon a slow-motion display of football plays was staged for the benefit of those who desired to understand the more intricate plays of the game. A livestock show and a radio entertainment put on by Seth Parker's Old-Fashioned Singing School concluded the programme for the day, bringing to an end one of the most successful meetings ever staged by the association.

SHOWED INDIAN DANCES TO VERA MIROVA

Vera Mirova, who gave the programme of Occidental and Oriental dances at the Masonic temple Monday evening, was the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Reginald Laubin, at their home, 145 Maple street, Tuesday morning before she left for New York.

The dancer was very much interested in the Indian costumes and ceremonial instruments in Mr. Laubin's collection and in the details of some of the Indian religious dance steps which he illustrated for her. She found much similarity in some of the American Indian ceremonial dances and a few of the dances she studied in the Orient. She was very much pleased to find that someone was trying to do for the native Indian that which she has been doing for the Oriental countries in representing to the public their various ceremonials in their original form.

After the visit at Mr. Laubin's home the party went to the cottage of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Weidman at Gardner lake, where Madame Mirova was shown many American Indian primitive weapons, totems and "medicine" implements. After luncheon, at which Madame Mirova entertained the company with vivid descriptions of her experiences in the Orient, especially in Sumatra, she motored to New London to take an afternoon train for New York.

TO CLOSE RECEIVERSHIP OF AGRICULTURAL SOCIETY

At a hearing scheduled for Friday in the superior court at New London, when the final account of the receiver of the New London County Agricultural society will be presented, the account will show the receipt of 67 per cent of their claims by creditors of the society.

In dividends to the 104 creditors whose claims amounted to $21,589.22, there was paid $14,464.85. Taxes paid to the town of Norwich were $342.56, the receiver, Gilbert S. Raymond, received $1,180.95 for services and expenses, the attorneys for the receiver, Perkins and McKay, received $1,517 for fees and court expenses and there were incidental expenses of $16.98. The total realized for liquidating purposes was $17,522.34.

TWO BOUND OVER ON MANSLAUGHTER CHARGES

Two men were bound over on manslaughter charges and four, charged with theft, were placed on probation for a year, in the city court Wednesday morning. Deputy Judge H. H. Pettis was on the bench.

Edward J. Cormier, 38, of Hartford, was bound over for trial in the criminal superior court, on a charge of manslaughter. Cormier was the driver of the machine which skidded, struck a pole, and turned over on Washington street, near Harland's corner, Oct. 21, fatally injuring Philip Cormier of Framingham, Mass. The men were on the way to attend the funeral of a relative in Norwich Town, who had been killed in an automobile accident at Northfield, Vt.

Cormier was arrested shortly after the accident by Constable Lucius A. Fenton on a charge of driving while under the influence of liquor. Following Philip Cormier's death at the W. W. Backus hospital he was charged with manslaughter. In default of $2,500 bonds he is being held at the county jail in this city pending trial. Coroner Edward J. McKay recently rendered a finding in which he stated that his investigation showed that Cormier, the driver, was intoxicated, and that he is criminally responsible for the death of Philip Cormier.

The other man bound over to the criminal court is also an automobile driver. He is Lucien A. Comtois of No. 33 1-2 Water street, Danielson, and is held on the charge of manslaughter. His bonds were set at $2,500 and were provided.

Comtois was the driver of a machine which was involved in an accident at Taftville, Sept. 16, in which two of his cousins, Lucien E. Comtois of No. 122 Main street, Danielson, and Leon Comtois of No. 45 Morin avenue, Danielson, were fatally injured. Lucien E. Comtois was almost instantly killed and Leon Comtois died at the W. W. Backus hospital the day after the crash. Coroner McKay, in his finding, stated that the machine was being driven by Comtois in a reckless manner at the time of the accident.

The four placed on probation for theft are Ernest Tanguay, 18, and Gerard Tanguay, 19, of Baltic, Rene Girard, 18, of No. 15 Pratt street, Taftville, and Robert Underwood, 21, of No. 5 South C street, Taftville. Ernest and Gerard Tanguay are ordered to report to Rev. William T. O'Brien of Baltic and the two Taftville youths re ordered to report to Rev. Frederick R. H. DesSureault of Taftville.

The four were arrested at Taftville, Nov. 1, on complaint of Gerard Morrisette of No. 12 Terrace avenue, who notified the police that someone was tampering with his machine. State Police Officer Arthur Whitmarsh and Sergeant Matthew Delaney of the local police arrested the quartette and after their arrest they confessed to the theft of gasoline from several machines and to the theft of automobile tires. Because of the fact that all of the youths come from good families and because the complainant did not wish to prosecute them, Judge Pettis put them on probation.

FRANKLIN MAN GUILTY OF BREACH OF PEACE

On a breach of peace charge for which he was on trial in the criminal common pleas court at New London before Judge C. B. Waller and a jury William Libiak of Franklin was found guilty late Wednesday afternoon.

Judge Waller made the sentence a fine of $10 and costs, with 15 days in jail, but execution of the jail sentence was suspended. Attorney C. V. James was counsel for the accused man. The case originated when Annie Monar, owner of a farm adjoining that of Libiak, complained that in a row over cows trespassing on her land, Libiak struck her on the arm with a heavy wrench.

WILL DEDICATE MONUMENT TO OLD SAYBROOK SETTLER

Next Wednesday, Nov. 19, has been set as the time for the dedication and unveiling of a monument at Old Saybrook for Lion Gardiner, one of the prominent men in the early history of this pioneer colony in Connecticut. The monument which is in the form of a statue of bronze eight feet high, will stand upon a granite base 30 inches square. Location will be the site of the Old Saybrook fort, which for many years past has been in possession of the railroad company but is not now used.

The statue will have the following inscription:

"In memory of Lion Gardiner builder and commander of Saybrook fort, 1635-1639. Erected by the Gardiner family.

The dedication exercises will be held at 11 a. m., at the monument unless the weather should be unsuitable, in which case they will be held at the town hall.

There is proposed a still further marking of this historic site by the erection of a museum building to east of the statue. A group of well known men has become interested in the matter and is reported as contemplating erection of a structure which will be an exact replica of the building which stood within the old fort enclosure.

SAYS FEAR AND WORRY ARE BUSINESS SNAKES

Fear and worry are two snakes in American business life which need to be killed declared Dr. Stanley L. Krebs of New York in an address given Wednesday evening at Trinity Methodist church under the auspices of Everyman's class, which had invited other mens' classes of the city and the public generally to hear the speaker.

Before the interesting address, which had many humorous touches, Mrs. Olive R. Roberts rendered the following selections on the organ:

La Cinquantine, (Gabriel-Marie); Sonata III—"Preludio", (Guilmant); Symphony in G—"Trio", (Mozart); Cantilene Pastorale, (Guilmant); and Mrs. Helena M. T. Church won the applause of her audience with two well rendered solos, "To a Hilltop" and "The Sweetest Story Ever Told."

Rev. Joseph Cooper, pastor of the church, offered prayer, and the speaker was introduced by J. B. Stanton.

Every one of us is seeking the same thing, said Dr. Krebs, and that is happiness. God made us for it and it stayed with us there in the garden of Eden until that memorable conversation with a serpent. Then human happiness surrendered, the snake took possession and has never been driven out. And not content with letting one snake into the Eden of our minds, the best of us are fools enough to let in two, fear and worry, on account of which human efficiency to only ten per cent., which means that there is 90 per cent of lost personality.

Fear and worry are mental states, declared Dr. Krebs, and a nation or an individual that adopts them gets the reward of the coward. These two snakes can be killed but we [illegible] play with them. Worry strangles the future, but anything that changes the mind of the buyers of America can cure the depression. Just as soon as men drive out these snakes of fear and worry, watch the new age come in.

PREMIER OF JAPAN SHOT AND SERIOUSLY WOUNDED AT TOKYO RAILROAD STATION

Bullet of Assailant Penetrated Premier Hamaguchi's Abdomen—Physicians Report Chances of Recovery Good—Assailant, Tomeo Sagoya, is a Member of a Reactionary Patriotic Organization—Motive For the Attack is Unknown

TOKYO, Nov. 14.—(AP)—(Friday)—Yuko Hamaguchi, premier of Japan, was shot and wounded at the Tokyo Central railroad station at 8:55 a. m., today. Physicians who examined the elderly premier at the station master's office said his chances of recovery were good. The bullet penetrated his abdomen.

The premier's assailant was captured and identified as Tomeo Sagoya, [illegible] a member of the Aikokusha, or "Love of Country association," a reactionary patriotic organization.

The motive for the attack was not clear to authorities.

Tokyo Central station was the scene likewise of the assassination Nov. 4, 1921, of Premier Kei Hara, who was stabbed at the main station lobby when he was about to entrain for Kyoto to attend a political rally. He died in a few minutes.

Hara's assassin, Konichi Nakaoka, a weak-minded youth, was sentenced to life imprisonment, which later was commuted to 11 years. He is still in Sendai penitentiary.

Premier Hamaguchi's assailant apparently is a similar type.

Premier Hara figured prominently in preparations for the Washington naval conference. Similarly, Premier Hamaguchi contributed largely to the success of the London naval conference.

At 11:30 a. m., the premier was still in the station master's office, his condition apparently much more serious than was first believed.

Physicians resorted to transfusions, the premier's second son, Iwane Hamaguchi, supplying the blood.

Hamaguchi was graduated with distinction from the Imperial university of Tokyo. He entered the government service immediately. His early progress was slow, but he rose through minor posts in the finance ministry until he became vice-minister of finance, his first strictly political position.

Under Premier Kato, Hamaguchi was made finance minister. Under Premier Wakatsuki he was home minister. When the Wakatsuki cabinet fell, Hamaguchi succeeded him as the leader of the party. He became premier Feb. 7, 1929.

DEPOSITS OF GANG LEADER ABOUT $1,000,000 IN THREE YEARS

CHICAGO, Nov. 13.—(AP)—A procession of bankers moved through a federal court room today adding up for the government the little deposit slips that recorded the wealth of Jack Guzik, Capone gang manager, on trial for income tax evasion.

They wrote a total of $853,338 at noon, and added bit by bit to the evidence through the afternoon until deposits of nearly a million dollars had been shown to the credit of Guzik in a three-year period. The government had promised to show the jury the gangster was in the millionaire class, despite his protestations that income tax schedules totaling $60,240 for 1927, 1928 and 1929 represented his true earnings.

Gambling houses run by Guzik, and profits of the Hawthorne and Laramie Kennel clubs—now closed by injunction—were the source of most of the indicated wealth, the prosecution contends.

Although the trial may bring to light some of the operations of the underworld syndicates the jury was warned by Judge Charles E. Woodward that Guzik is on trial only for alleged evasion of the federal income tax, and no extraneous matter may be considered in determining the issue.

COMMISSION HEARS FACTS OF DRY LAW ENFORCEMENT

WASHINGTON, Nov. 13.—(AP)—President Hoover's law enforcement commission delved deep today into the actual enforcement of prohibition in the United States and then recessed for ten days to permit individual work on its dry law report.

Prohibition Director Amos W. W. Woodcock, appearing before the commission for the first time since its prohibition deliberations began, laid before the members the enforcement facts demonstrated by his organization system, which he believes is the best that can be devised.

Earlier, Henry S. Dennison, a prominent Boston manufacturer who has been engaged for more than a year in studying for the commission the existing enforcement organization and its personnel, delivered his report.

FAMILY TRAGEDY RESULTS FROM FEAR OF POVERTY

UNIONTOWN, Pa., Nov. 13.—(AP)—A father apparently crazed by the spectre of poverty shot and killed his three small daughters and critically wounded his wife among the luxuries of their fashionable home here today. He then shot and killed himself.

The man, R. W. Playford, 65, was a prominent lawyer and banker of the city. His widow formerly was Nancy Stirling, member of a prominent Baltimore, Md., family, from which has come three admirals of the United States navy. She is 45.

Mrs. Playford late today was given a slight chance to recover from a bullet wound in her head. She still was unconscious at her home, too critically wounded for removal to a hospital.

The mother and the three children were shot in their beds. The oldest child, Nancy, 13, was lying under a bed light studying her school lessons for the day. The younger children, Margaret, 10, and Pauline, 9, and their mother apparently were sleeping when Playford shot them.

HARTFORD, Nov. 13.—(AP)—Suit for strict foreclosure of the Garde hotel at Asylum and High streets, one of Connecticut's best known hostelries, has been brought by the Travelers Insurance company against the Hartford Investment corporation, headed by Thomas C. Hardie, who has directed the hotel since its purchase from Walter S. Garde and his mother, the late Mrs. P. Davis Oakey, on December 16, 1919, it was learned today.

In confirming the suit, which follows the filing of a lis pendens by the Travelers against the hotel corporation on Wednesday, James E. Rhodes 2nd, of West Hartford, of the Travelers legal staff, said the debt on the property is approximately $460,000. The hotel property is valued between $600,000 and $750,000.

The arrested man was variously described as "Hal Gibson," "Harry Milhan" and "Harry Copeland." Magistrate Corrigan said he was a former convict and reports from Baltimore described him as assistant stage manager of a New York musical revue on tour.

AL CAPONE BUTTING IN IN GRAPE INDUSTRY?

FRESNO, Cal., Nov. 13.—(AP)—The Fresno Bee said today orders had gone out from the headquarters of Al (Scarface) Capone, Chicago gangland chief, that grape concentrates, new product of the Fruit Industries, Ltd., California, could not be sold in Chicago and death would be the price of disobedience.

It was understood, the Bee said, the gangland orders were handed down to those in a position to act as selling agents for the new product — a highly concentrated grape juice capable of fermentation.

HAVE RECEIVED NO THREATS FROM CAPONE

CHICAGO, Nov. 13.—(AP)—Chicago branch officials of Fruit Industries, Ltd., of California, said today they had received no threats from Al Capone and said their only knowledge of the gangster was gleaned from newspaper columns. They had heard nothing of a report from Fresno, that Capone had warned against introduction of their product into Chicago.

L. H. Fisher, local manager, said the company's product had been on the market ten years.

CAL. PLANS CAMPAIGN AGAINST AN INVASION OF GANGSTERS

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 13.—(AP)—Tips of kidnaping plots and newspaper reports of the presence of "Scarface" Al Capone, Chicago gang leader, in southern California sent heads of three law enforcement agencies into a secret conference today to plan action against "an invasion of gangsters."

The danger of the situation was outlined by District Attorney Buron Fitts, who said "it is time to take concerted action against these criminals." Fitts said within the past 60 days he had obtained "astonishing information" from underworld sources.

A report of Capone's arrival here sent detectives in a vain search for the gangster. On several other occasions he had been reported here but no trace of him was found. Two years ago he made a thirty minute visit in Los Angeles, fifteen minutes of which was spent in going to a hotel and 15 minutes more in getting back on a train in custody to police.

Authorities indicated their campaign to prevent gangsters from gaining a foothold here would be one of scattering the criminals as quickly as they learn of their presence.

Today's conference came upon the heels of an alleged plot to kidnap Harry Chandler, owner of the Los Angeles Times. The veteran publisher showed little perturbation over the information but Fitts assigned two detectives to guard him against any attempt to carry out the threat.

Meeting with Fitts at the conference were Chief of Police Roy Steckel and Sheriff William I. Traeger.

GARRETT SAID TO BE IN TOUCH WITH HIS FAMILY

BOSTON, Nov. 13—(AP)—The Boston Post says Oliver B. Garrett, whose body was searched for without avail in Boston harbor today by policemen, was in communication with his family three days ago.

Garrett, former head of the Boston police liquor squad, defaulted when due to appear in court June 23 on charges growing out of his activities as a policeman.

The Post says a close friend of Garrett's has been with him, since he disappeared and both are almost out of funds now. It further says he is within four days' train ride of Boston and has no intention of surrendering.

The dragging activities today were the result of published reports that Garrett had been slain and thrown into the harbor.

NOT TO PAY FOR PHONES IN FIREMEN'S HOMES

BEACON, N. Y., Nov. 13—(AP)—The cry of "fire!" into an Arlington telephone may bring henceforth instead of the fire department, the following exasperating statement from the telephone operator:

"Sorry, sir, but the line has been discontinued."

Taxpayers of Arlington, in Dutchess county, have vetoed a budget item to pay for phones in the homes of their firemen.

Radicals Creating Disorders In Peru

Group of Communist Agitators Under Arrest, Charged With Promoting Strikes

LIMA, Peru, Nov. 13.—(AP)—Sol[illegible] with fixed bayonets tonight [illegible] the muddy streets of Malpaso, [illegible] dean mining town where [illegible] cans were killed and [illegible] wounded in labor riots [illegible]

Troops gathered in [illegible] cke at Lima as a precaution [illegible] possible disorders arising from a [illegible] ral strike called by the workers' council after the Malpasco clashes, and a group of communist agitators, charged with responsibility for the disorders, were in the hands of the police.

Three hundred foreign refugees jammed into a jerky three-car train piled into this city from Malpaso and intermediate points today. They brought some of the wounded, and told the first detailed story to come out of the mining area.

The engineer of the refugee train, named Haggerd, told the story of the Malpaso battle as he gulped the first food he had had in many hours.

The trouble really started, he said, at La Oroya, a mining town not far from Malpaso. Radical organizers had aroused the men there to a strike, and when news of this action reached Malpaso, workmen in that town threw down their tools.

The walkout paralyzed the power house which runs most of the smelting plants, and the local constabulary hurried an armed guard to the bridge on the road between Malposa and La Oroya. When a group of workmen attempted to cross the bridge the battle began.

Before it was over John W. Chapman of Chicago and E. L. Tripary, on American storekeeper were killed. J. A. Morger, another American was critically injured, and the list of wounded included an American named Kelley, an American woman, Mrs. Albert Diamant, her husband, and another man named Whitly. Twelve of the rioters were slain and at least 25 wounded.

The attacking force was driven back by the guard at the bridge and moved against the town, looting stores and offices, and pursuing all foreigners they met on the way. Twenty foreigners fled before one band of workers and their fate was still in doubt tonight.

"The men wounded Chapman," Haggard said, "and bashed in his head with rocks. They shot Tripary to death, and cut off his head."

Meanwhile, the United States ambassador, Fred Dearing, had demanded government protection for Americans at Malpaso and sent the consul to the mining town to assist in removal of the refugees.

The rioters greatly superior in number to the troops on the scene, surrounded the train as the refugees went aboard, but were driven back until it had started its journey to Lima.

Reports conflicted as to whether the mines at La Oroya and Malpaso would be closed for any length of time. Tonight armed guards were stationed at all the plants to prevent sabotage.

The police, and the mine operators, believed that the comunists whom they held responsible for the trouble included some of the men who took part in the bloody labor riots of 1919.

STATE DEPT. WATCHING SITUATION IN PERU

WASHINGTON, Nov. 13.—(AP)—Although confident the Peruvian government would be able to deal with the labor situation in mining districts, state department officials tonight were carefully watching conditions in areas affected by violence there.

Secretary Stimson said the Peruvian government had taken steps to protect American lives and property by sending troops.

Ambassador Dearing at Lima reported fully during the day on the incidents which involved the death of two Americans, at least one other foreigner, and a number of miners and the wounding of two Americans.

CONFUSION AT SESSION OF DISARMAMENT COMMISSION

GENEVA, Nov. 13.—(AP)—Caught in a tangle of parliamentary procedure, the League of Nations disarmament commission adjourned today's session without reaching an agreement on how to limit land war material.

The confusion came from a profusion of proposals by various delegations and at one time became so marked that Lord Cecil, the British delegate, threw his hands in the air and exclaimed to Chairman Loudon, "Let us have something clear and definite to vote on."

Count Von Bernstorff, the German delegate, said he expected to force a direct vote tomorrow on whether the majority of the commission wants direct or budgetary limitation.

Resolutions seeking disposition of the problem were submitted by the British, French and Italian delegations.

The British proposal, offered by Lord Cecil, seeks to get on record the opinions of the various delegations.

SENTENCED FOR CIRCULATION OF OBSCENE READING MATTER

BATON ROUGE, La., Nov. 13.—(AP)—Kembelk Kennedy, former president of the student body at Louisiana State university, was sentenced today to serve one year in prison for criminal libel and the circulation of obscene reading matter in the publication of "The Wrangdoodle," known by students as "a scandal sheet."

Great Britain Faces An Industrial Crisis

Result of Proposed Wage Re[illegible]uctions For Railway and [illegible]ine Workers

LONDON, Nov. 13—(AP)—Already staggering under a burden of unemployment and industrial depression, Britain was faced tonight with prospects of a grave crisis in two of her leading industries—railways and coal mining.

The railway situation, in which a deadlock over wage reduction appears probable, seems likely to come to a head first, but developments in the mining situation, which is much more complicated, may surpass it in gravity.

Discussions of railway problems began today when employers put forward proposals for a general wage reduction of about $1.50 a week, with a minimum wage of $9.50 a week instead of the present $10. Junior staff wages would be cut 75 cents a week and salaries from $900 to $1,750 a year by about $100.

The proposals are now to be considered by the unions and it is likely the process will take several weeks.

C. T. Camp, general secretary of the Railway unions, made a gloomy prediction, however, regarding the possibility of arbitration.

'In our opinion," said he, "no case can be made out for wage reductions of any kind, or for any sort of change the railways have proposed. These demands are going to be resisted."

The mining position is even more complex, for conditions vary in the districts into which the coal mining industry is divided.

Spokesmen for the miners as a whole, in an informal conference tonight with Emmanuel Shinwell, minister of mines, told him the situation is extremely grave.

The problem turns upon an agreement, which becomes effective December 1, reducing the miner's working day from eight to seven and a half hours. In South Wales and Scotland mine owners have asserted this change must entail a wage reduction. Union representatives have refused to consider a wage cut and a deadlock has resulted.

In many other districts owners and employes are at odds over various clauses in the recently passed coal mines act, and the situation as a whole is regarded as one of extreme seriousness.

NO FILIBUSTER IN SENATE UPON APPROPRIATION BILLS

Assurance Given President Hoover by Republican and Democratic Floor Leaders—Both Leaders Have Expressed to the President Their Desire to Dispose of the Bills at the December Session—They Will Contest Every Effort on the Part of the Western Republican Independents to Force an Extra Session

WASHINGTON, Nov. 13.—(AP)—Assurance was given President Hoover today by floor leaders of both parties in the senate that no move would be sanctioned to force an extra session of the new congress next spring by blocking action on vital appropriation measures in the approaching short session.

This announcement was made at the white house as the administration began consideration of plans for meeting the one big obstacle in the way of fulfillment of this course—disposition of the Muscle Shoals, Ala., power and nitrate plant.

The white house statement said:

"The president has been in communication with the floor leaders of the democratic and republican sides of the senate with a view to securing cooperation for the prompt passage of the appropriation bills through the senate at the forthcoming sessions.

"Both leaders have expressed their desire and full cooperation to accomplish this. The fear and apprehension which have been expressed over reports that delay or filibuster would be resorted to to force an extra session of congress have therefore no foundation."

Just whom the president spoke with was not made known. However, earlier in the day both Senator Walsh, of Montana, the assistant democratic leader, and Senator Glass, democrat, Virginia, asserted they knew of no disposition within the party to obstruct legislation at the short session and each resented the "implication."

The president had written Senator Robinson, of Arkansas, the democratic leader, seeking his views and Senator Glass observed that Mr. Hoover should first seek to get his own party in line. Senator Brookhart, republican, Iowa, is one of those who has proposed an extra session for next spring.

While there is apparently no assurance from the western republican independents on this program, the group would have a hard job filibustering enough legislation to force the extra session if it decided to do so without democratic support.

Disposition of the Muscle Shoals controversy is one thing the republican independents intend to insist upon, however, and the president has been told this dispute demands serious consideration.

It involves the controversy over government and private operation. The senate has passed the measure of Senator Norris, republican, Nebraska, for government operation of the plant, and the house has approved a bill for private operation.

Although Representative Reece, republican, Tennessee, has announced Mr. Hoover would veto the senate plan, the president today called in Senator McNary, republican, Oregon, an advocate of the senate proposal, and McNary indicated later he was standing pat. He also announced he would call the senate and house conferees together soon.

Senator Watson of Indiana, the republican leader, and Senator McNary, the assistant leader, both have informed the president they were opposed to the extra session and would lend every aid to the disposition of the heavy calendar of unfinished and new business at the short term.

Unemployment legislation, and relief for drought-stricken farmers were named today by Senator Walsh, of Montana, as measures demanding prime consideration and Senator Watson said the administration program probably would give first call to these.

An injunction restraining the communists from picketing the place was issued a month ago. Since then more than 100 persons attempting to picket were arrested.

PROBABLY 100 DEATHS FROM LANDSLIDE AT LYONS, FRANCE

LYONS, France, Nov. 13—(AP)—This was a bitter night in Lyons as workmen thrust crowbars under the debris of 12 ruined homes, half fearful of what they would find beneath as the toll of a landslide which today took perhaps as many as 100 lives.

As night fell they had recovered but three bodies in the ruins along the slope of the Fourviere hill where the ground slid out from under a dozen houses this morning, tumbling them in upon themselves and burying men, women and children.

Police and firemen hurried to the vicinity as the first crash of the catastrophe startled the city. Twenty-five of them went into the ruins to bring out the injured, and were buried under walls which toppled in upon them without warning.

About the scene of horror tonight the families of those who were lost sobbed as the work went slowly along. Volunteers were scarce after that group of police and firemen had perished, and the task of caring for the living appeared of even greater importance than that of searching for the bodies of the dead.

Engineers called from Grenoble hastily shored up buildings which remained standing in the vicinity; hospitals near the ruins were evacuated as a precautionary measure. The cathedral was opened to the survivors and hundreds of homeless crowded in, for it was the only place they had to spend the night.

The Prince of Wales, who went aloft in the huge twelve-motored ship yesterday and assumed the controls for ten minutes, was the last visitor to board her. Today, the plane lay at anchor while refueling was completed, and the curious were obliged to content themselves with watching the operation from the shore.

Twelve passengers will make tomorrow's flight.

"I was riding with her below Arlington that day. She knew I was wanted in Georgia for killing Harry Nagail, in December, 1928, and she threatened to expose me. So I killed her."

The Windham town school committee, acting on recommendation of Secretary Egbert A. Case, is giving considerable thought to the enlargement of the grounds in the immediate vicinity of the high school. Secretary Case points out that about 300 pupils from nearby towns are unloaded from buses in the morning and in the afternoon have to congregate in the street as the school has only an alleyway for vehicles to get off the thoroughfare. The land on the east boundary of the school property, on which are now located two tenement houses, should be cleared and graded as school grounds, in the opinion of the committee. It is believed that the use of the land for this purpose would be of more value to the town than the small income now derived from the buildings. The original construction plans for the high school called for ample amount of land aside from that used for the structure, but this improvement has never been carried out. The registration at the high school is now 708 and the average attendance in October was 691, an increase of 30 over the average attendance for October of last year.

A most surprising and alarming condition among disabled veterans in this county has been found in a survey of disabled veterans now reaching completion by a committee of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, according to Chairman Shaprowe of the committee. The percentage of men actually hospitalized by the post in relation to all other hospitalized in the post area was 89; percentage of compensation cases reopened in relation to all others in the post in relation to all others hospitalized under the new pension law and followed up by V. F. W. liason service, 87.

Clark of this city on the Hartford highway, in the town of Marlborough, was destroyed by fire of unknown origin between 6 and 7 o'clock this morning. A bucket brigade, formed by residents of the neighborhood succeeded in saving nearby buildings. In view of the danger of the front wall of the house collapsing, traffic along the turnpike was held up for nearly an hour. Mr. Clark purchased the dwelling about a year ago and estimates his loss at about $7,000. There was but little furniture in the place, which has not been occupied for some time. COLCHESTER

MISS CUSHMAN TO SPEAK ON HER WORK IN CHINA

Miss Betty Cushman, a girl missionary and teacher in Wenshan Girls' school, Foochow City, China, is to address a union meeting of the young people of the Congregational churches in this vicinity in Colchester Congregational church. Tuesday evening, Nov. 18. Mrs. George B. Boson and Miss Doris Riley are in charge of the arrangements. Young people from Hebron, Westchester, Lebanon, Columbia, Marlborough, Salem and Gilead churches are expected to be present. Eight thousand miles from her New England home, Elizabeth F. Cushman, of Pawtucket, R. I., affectionately known among young people on both sides of the world as "Betty," teaches in Foochow, under the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions, and is known as the girls' missionary of the Congregational churches east of Ohio. In 1922 she was graduated from Oberlin college, after a freshman year at Brown university, and in 1925 set sail for Foochow, where she shortly entered into the chaotic days of revolution. For a time American newspapers reported thrilling stories of the dangers which confronted Wenshan from excited mobs, but through it all Betty and her associates carried on. She now speaks Chinese fluently. Music, calisthenics and history are her special subjects for teaching, but above all is her personal contact as a Christian leader of Chinese girlhood.

"China will come through and her young Christian nationals of today will eventually lead her," declares Miss Cushman. "That is why I want to go back—to stand behind these Chinese nationals, both young men and women. They are leading now but they still need our help. China's one aim is unity." In direct line with this statement of Miss Cushman's comes that of Prof. Roderick Scott, an associate missionary in Fukien Christian university, Foochow, who reports: "A young Chinese college president said to me recently. 'Character is China's need and we who teach for character hold the key to China's future. But character depends on religion and there is, for the modern world, only one religion—Christianity.'"

CHAS. CLARK HOMESTEAD BURNED AT MARLBOROUGH

(Special to The Bulletin)

COLCHESTER, Nov. 13.—Fire of undetermined origin burned to the ground the old Charles Clark homestead, five miles above Colchester Center, on the Colchester-Hartford road in the town of Marlborough, about 8 o'clock Thursday morning. The flames were discovered by a passing motorist, who notified neighbors, the Clark house having been unoccupied for over a year. Due to small supply of water and the headway the fire had gained, the building was soon a mass of blazing ruins. Loss was estimated at $6,000 which is understood to be partially covered by insurance. The house had been occupied for several generations by the Clark family. Charles Clark and his son, Albert Clark, the last of the family to reside there, both died in February, 1929, and since then the place had been vacant. About a year ago the property went into the possession of a nephew of Charles Clark, William E. Clark, of Willimantic, who had expennded a considerable sum in making alterations and repairs to the house.

WESTERLY

FIVE HELD BY POLICE AS WHITE SLAVE SUSPECTS

(Special to The Bulletin)

WESTERLY, Nov. 13—Four men, three of Italian parentage and one Jewish, with several aliases and giving Greater New York addresses, were held all day at the Westerly police station by R. I. state police of the Hope Valley barracks, under suspicions of white slavery. They were apprehended in Hope Valley on Wednesday night and held there until New York police authorities could be communicated with, it being understood that they had police records.

Suspicion first attached to the party when the automobile in which they were riding was observed to follow an erratic course. When the auto was stopped for questioning it was found that a woman of German-Scotch parentage, 17 years of age, a blond, was also a member of the party. Her relation to one of the Italian members of the group who stated that she was his "cousin" caused the party to be taken to the barracks for a more thorough examination and check-up.

At Westerly police headquarters the men, who claimed that they had "dates" in New York which they did not want broken whiled away the time on Thursday by rendering such selections on a mouth organ as "The Prisoner's Song" and at times other songs with vocal accompaniment. The woman in the party, reported as married with five children, was mostly interested in sleeping under the watchful eye of Westerly Police Matron Mrs. Marietta Brown. Police authorities were not ready at a late hour Thursday to reveal the names of the prisoners.

New York police authorities reported that the men detained at Westerly police headquarters had no lengthy criminal records and, on their recommendation, the Westerly police allowed their visitors to depart.

Curtin, 1203 Campbell avenue, Detroit, Mich., to Michael Curtin, 1992 Hubbard avenue, Detroit Mich., all rights, title and interests in a lot or parcel of land with buildings and improvements, bounded northerly by John street, easterly by lands of Thomas Murray and wife, southerly by land of the heirs of Patrick Donovan and wife and westerly by land of Samuel Fyfe and wife.

The new cement walk having been laid from Union street to the newly located flight of stone steps leading to the Westerly police station and open for use, workmen were engaged on Thursday in smoothing the cement landings with surface water drains. The granite cap stones have all been set to the dry wells at the police station windows and debris cleared.

Services were conducted by Rev. Arnt L. Schoning, pastor of the Broad Street Christian church, who also conducted prayer at the interment in Riverbend cemetery.

DR. J. M. BENNETT, FORMER WESTERLY BOY DIES

The unexpected death of a former Westerly boy and summer cottager in the Haversham section of the town, Dr. Joseph Martin Bennett occurred on Thursday in Providence shortly after 2 o'clock at his home, 165 Angell street. He was in his 68th year.

Dr. Bennett was a practicing physician in Providence for almost 36 years and had served as chairman of the old state board of health before the formation of the present public welfare commission.

He had been confined to his home since Sunday, when he was stricken with a recurrence of a previous illness.

Dr. Bennett was on the staff of 11 hospitals in this state and was one of the oldest physicians on the staff of St. Joseph's hospital, where he served as first president of the hospital staff. His brother, the late Charles P. Bennett, was secretary of state of Rhode Island from 1894 to 1905.

Dr. Bennett was born Jan. 13, 1863, a son of Thomas F. and Mary (McCarthy) Bennett. He was educated at the town schools of Westerly. For a time he was employed in the railway postal service and later matriculated at the University of Pennsylvania, from which he was graduated in 1892 with the degree of doctor of medicine. He then attended the University of Vienna, Austria.

Appointed to the old state board of public health by Governor R. Livingston Beeckman more than 10 years ago, Dr. Bennett retired two years ago when the state public health commission was formed. During the World war he was a member of the medical advisory board of Rhode Island, District No. 8.

In addition to membership in the American Medical association and the Providence Medical society, he was a life member of the American Medical association of the University of Vienna. While in his senior year at the University of Pennsylvania, he was president of his class, and likewise headed the Stille Medical society and the New England Medical society of the university.

He was married to Julia A. Fitzpatrick of Waterbury, Conn. His wife survives him, as do one son and four daughters. They are Joseph M. Bennett, Jr., assistant manager of the Flatbush division of the New York Telephone company, Brooklyn; Miss Margaret Bennett, a teacher at Commercial high school at Providence; Miss Catherine Bennett, a teacher at West Warwick junior high school; Miss Mary Bennett, who also teaches at Commercial high school, and Miss Agnes Bennett, now a student at the College of St. Elizabeth, in New Jersey.

He is survived also by a sister, Mrs. Ellen Bennett Sweeney, wife of Justice John W. Sweeney of the Rhode Island supreme court.

Dr. Bennett was a past president of the Friendly Sons of St. Patrick, a member of the Knights of Columbus, fourth degree, and a member of the Holy Name society.

Thursday morning occurred the death of Miss Josephine Pignataro of Bradford who died at the South County hospital in Wakefield. She was 24 years of age.

Miss Pignataro was admitted to the hospital Wednesday. She had been ill only a few days. Death was caused by peritonitis. The body was brought to her home in Bradford.

4¾ MILES UP!

. . . it flowed freely at 6 degrees below zero

THIS, we believe, is one of the most convincing and most dramatic tests to prove cold-weather performance ever given a motor oil.

Carrying a regulation quart bottle of the new Socony Motor Oil, Captain Boris Sergievsky, holder of the world's altitude record for amphibians, shot his record-holding ship up more than four and three-quarters miles . . . 25.200 feet on a sealed barograph . . . where the thermometer registered 6 below zero.

At that extreme low temperature . . where ordinary oils would usually "freeze" or become sluggish . . . the new Socony Motor Oil flowed freely.

Because it is completely dewaxed, the new Socony Motor Oil is more fluid at low temperatures than any other. It insures easy starting for your car in coldest weather, gives instant lubrication, and reduces the drain on your battery.

The new Socony Motor Oil consistently maintains the proper "body" at all engine temperatures, so that it gives perfect piston seal, maximum power and minimum fuel consumption. New refining process reduces to a minimum all harmful elements which cause carbon, gum and sludge.

The new Socony Motor Oil is made from a Paraffine Base crude, selected because of its greater inherent oiliness (adsorption). It is refined by the new and exclusive Socony process which gives additional lubricating value and insures less wear on your motor.

We sincerely urge you to drain and flush your crankcase, and refill today with the new Socony Motor Oil. You will find this oil is even better for your car than Socony "Aircraft."

Socony Winter Gear Oil, the superior lubricant for cold weather, insures proper lubrication and easy gear shifting. Switch to it today. And for a quick starting gasoline try Socony Special plus Ethyl. Remember, too, the importance of lubrication during the winter months. Take no chances. ASKING CONNECTICUT TO MOVE

Evidently President Hubbard of the Connecticut Manufacturers' association was trying to get Connecticut to show a greater interest in its problems than it has been doing and to take better advantage of its opportunities, when he made the statement before the annual meeting that the state should withdraw from New England.

He points to the fact that Connecticut hasn't experienced the manufacturing decline that is attributed so often to New England and he calls attention to the fact that "Our port is New York. Ninety-six per cent of our exports and imports go through the port of New York . . . the eyes of Connecticut are turned toward New York as a port, as a financial center, as a rail center, as a distribution center and as a management center."

Inasmuch as we seem to be getting along pretty well because of our proximity to New York and our not too distant relationship with Boston, there seems to be no good reason for trying to convince the rest of the country that we are not a part of New England. It wouldn't bring us any more favorable recognition from the nation at large, or the world in general, and it certainly would leave a decidedly poor impression among those states with which we have stood so valiantly for so many years. Indeed, the position of a deserter of New England could hardly be expected to improve the impression of Connecticut among its own people.

Just how any effort on the part of Connecticut to reshape New England is going to operate to the benefit of state manufacturing or state business, when Mr. Hubbard already shows that a large volume is already done through the port of New York while we continue to hold our position on the southern tier of New England states, is difficult to see. The removal of the boundary line of New England would create no charm or interest in Connecticut which doesn't exist or which cannot be developed.

If Mr. Hubbard is desirous of finding out the reaction of Connecticut to the proposition he has advanced he will undoubtedly be successful. It is quite certain, however, that it will be impossible to fix any moving day for the state of Connecticut in the immediate future. We are too firmly imbedded in New England in every way to be budged.

MUSCLE SHOALS

Already evidence is being given of the desire to get rid of the Muscle Shoals problem which has been before congress for years. There promises to be enough legislation which might easily be regarded as more important during the coming short session of congress and which ought to be insured of early and proper attention, but there is no escaping the fact that some disposition should be made of Muscle Shoals.

Those who are displaying the most interest at this time are those who are committed to the government operation plan. They hold firmly to the belief that the greatest satisfaction lies in putting the government funds into the operation of that plant, regardless of the fact that there has been sufficient opposition to it in the past to defeat such a proposition.

The opponents have taken the position, and continue to do so, that the country has had enough experience with government ownership to refuse to have anything more to do with it except in case of an emergency. They direct attention to the experience of the government in the operation of the railroads, the tremendous burden that has been borne since the government undertook the building and maintenance of the merchant marine and the constant loss that is experienced through the operation of the postal service. They also set forth that the government ought not to be in competition with private enterprise and that the interests of the country in such a project can be duly safeguarded under a leasing arrangement, which will be fair to the operating company as well as to the government.

There is nothing to indicate that there is any different attitude in congress concerning the government operation of Muscle Shoals than there was when the last vote was taken. Certainly there has been no national referendum on the question. It would be fine to have it disposed of and out of the way. It has been hanging fire too long, but that doesn't mean that any disposition will be satisfactory. If that policy held favor it would have been eliminated a long time ago.

GLASS CHEERS INSURGENTS

Although there are plenty of commendations from both republicans and democrats for the attitude displayed by the group of leading democrats who promised that the democrats would cooperate with the republicans in support of the administration, for the purpose of helping the restoration of prosperity and other necessary legislation, it is being made apparent that such an attitude doesn't voice the sentiment of all the democrats who are expected to be included in the democratic pledge.

There are so many ways in which that pledge can be interpreted, so many ways in which it can be easily dodged, so many excuses which can be offered for not keeping it, so many avenues for claiming that its scope is limited that reception of it has been accepted only in a strong saline solution by those who understand political ways and the operations within congressional circles.

Senator Carter Glass of Virginia holds a prominent place in the democratic ranks and he has been prompt to disclose the fact that the pledge does not include him. He isn't disposed to give the country the benefit of such a cooperative spirit when it comes to enacting legislation. He wants a partisan flavor to it. He challenges the right of the group to dictate to the rest; he cannot see the need for any such action. He created the impression that the nation doesn't need any such help and the inference is that it would be just as well off if there was a continuance of the policy that was carried out in the last congress of having the democrats and insurgents line up together for the purpose of obstructing administration policies.

The desirability of ending any such practice is voiced by the democratic group, only two of whom are in congress, but those two are leaders of the respective bodies. The expression of Senator Glass, especially if it is backed by similar views on the part of other democrats, indicates that adherence to the pledge will mean a democratic split, the seriousness of which will depend upon the numbers involved in the division. Senator Glass' attitude will, of course, be cheering news to the insurgents.

LAYING OUT NEW TOWNS

Many communities will envy the new town that is being laid out in Nevada where will reside those who construct the Hoover dam and which community can be expected to become a sizeable place, not only during the construction period, but in the days after the great project is completed.

The reason for this envy lies in the fact that in laying out the town provision is being made for parking places for automobiles so that it will be possible to prohibit parking in the streets and in so locating the center that it will be off the transcontinental highway which is routed through that locality.

In other words, the department of the interior, which has charge of that dam project, is giving consideration to the problems which are bothering all other cities. It recognizes the handicaps that are created by the parking of autos in the streets and it insists that in this new community the streets shall be for transportation purposes only. It is also evident that it knows the desirability of routing through traffic around a settlement for the relief of congestion and traffic problems and the accommodation of that through traffic which doesn't like the idea of being held up by city traffic and by signals and other traffic requirements, but wants to keep on its way to its destination.

There may come the time when this town that is being developed will find that provision has not been made for the unseen future, but it will have to be admitted that, so far as motor vehicle traffic is concerned, proper attention is being directed to bothersome problems of the present day. Other cities would like to eliminate such troubles in as easy a manner but realize that they were founded too long ago.

DSCUSSING INDIA

While it means much to those who are directly involved, there cannot fail to be interest throughout the world in the round table that has been opened in London relative to the plea of the delegation from India that the status of a dominion be granted to India.

The British have repeatedly been faced with demands for changes in that part of the empire. They have had plenty of trouble in dealing with uprisings and they have, from time to time, discussed the ideas for changes with those who have presented them.

Recently, the British have experienced plenty of difficulty in dealing with the new leader, Mahatma Gandhi, and it is as the result of his efforts and a survey which has been made of conditions in India that an attempt is now being made to see what kind of adjustment can be made that will meet the situation.

Although Gandhi doesn't appear at the conference, he has supporters there. There is plenty of backing for the dominion idea, which is, in fact, only what has been indicated the Indians had a right to strive for, but the British have had little difficulty in pointing out that India has not progressed to the point where conditions warrant greater self-government. Whether it can continue to advance such views, or whether it can find ways of increasing governmental privileges without extending dominion rule, is a question which may be determined by the conference that is now underway.

It has been shown that, while the British were inclined toward dominion government at the proper time, the demands of Gandhi seem too great to be satisfied thereby, and yet it is not improbable that the demands have been placed so far in advance of what is actually expected as to permit of a certain trimming and still leave the result of real value. Those that demand more than can be obtained usually find a middle ground which proves satisfactory.

THE WORLD AT SIXTEEN

"I've just about concluded," began Ernestine before she was quite inside the front door, "that maybe I have been making a mistake all this time in not fully appreciating my family.

"Before they went away on this Florida trip they seemed to be so fussy and irritating, always insisting that they knew best and telling me what to do every minute and everything, that they were regularly hard to stand. I'm free to confess that I was tickled pink at being left on my own for a whole month. Staying with the Donnians, who are a terribly proper family, at so much a week, was going to be a simple cinch. Because of course all I had to do was to smile sweetly at Mrs. Donnian and go right ahead and do as I wanted to do. And there were so many things I wanted to do and no reason at all for not doing them except that mother got a don't complex when she was much younger and it has grown on her.

"Anyhow, I bore up wonderfully that last day when every one was running around knocking over golf bags and wanting to know where in heck was that gray and green striped shirt I just bought and are you sure the man drained the water system completely, dear—things like that. And that night I read in bed at Mrs. Donnian's until 1 o'clock, with a big bag of candy, and not a soul sticking their head in and saying good gracious, do you know what time it is, you'll ruin your eyes, turn the light out this instant! I realized then how hampered I had been. I actually could feel myself expanding and developing along my own lines as the psychology class points out that one should do to become anything in life.

"It grew more glorious every day—two sodas for lunch and a chocolate bar instead of whole wheat bread and lettuce and sliced oranges and milk, and if I forgot and stayed longer than I should at Bettie's and was not on time for dinner not a single thing happened and the Donnians kept my plate warm for me. I told Mrs. Donnian I certainly wished my mother was like her. I knew precisely how a person feels when he has just got out of jail.

"Only once I came in and Tommy Donnian had eaten up most of the three-pound box of candy Tod had given me and that I had forgotten to take to my room, and nobody sewed up my shoulder straps when they came loose and I forgot to send my laundry out for two weeks straight. And when I had callers the Donnian twins came right in and helped to entertain—they're 9—and the rest of the Donnians seemed to be circulating over the whole place. And there was no big fat chair to lounge in downstairs because of course Mr. Donnian had it and I couldn't go to the kitchen to make fudge and there wasn't any one to remember to get the matinee tickets the day Celeste and I were going in town and we missed the show—and my stomach felt queer. It suddenly dawned on me that there was not a soul on earth who cared anything special about me.

"I began answering mother's and dad's letters, after they telegraphed to know what was the trouble, and was I all right—in fact, that last week I wrote every night and didn't go to the movies with Tod at all when I could have gone every school night with nobody to stop me. When the family arrived yesterday I was absolutely thankful and I sang every minute I was packing up to go home, too. I told mother and dad solemnly, after I had looked at the gorgeous things they brought me and everything, that I realized how marvelous they were and that I was always going to do just as I was told and they should never—I'll bet that's mother on the phone now!"

Ernestine picked up the receiver, listened, jammed it back. "Crispy crackers, wouldn't that frost you," she said in quite her usual tones of disgust. "It was mother, all right, reminding me that I hadn't done my practicing nor darned my hosiery and what on earth had I been doing to my green crepe dress because it was ruined! The minute they get hold of you they start right in again—I'll say parents are heard to bear!"—Exchange.

YOUR HEALTH

Appendicitis

By Walter M. Brickner, M. D., New York City.

(From Gorgas Memorial Institute)

Fortunately, appendicitis is a disease concerning which the public has become much enlightened—at least to the extent of knowing that an attack may cause very serious consequences, indeed death, and that removal of the offending organ before it becomes gangrenous prevent those dangers and, usually, effects a speedy, complete recovery. Unfortunately, however, the mortality of appendicitis is still high—much higher than it should be. And these deaths are chiefly in cases in which the disease has progressed beyond the appendix itself and has formed an abscess or, worse yet, peritonitis.

This unnecessary mortality is, then, due to delay, sometimes a delay of even as little as 12 hours. Such deaths are not usually traceable to ignorance on the part of the intelligent laymen that acute appendicitis is a dangerous disease that requires operation; but they are definitely traceable to failure to recognize certain symptoms as possibly being produced by appendicitis. All too often the average individual attributes to "a spoiled stomach" an attack of abdominal pain, or of vomiting, or of both. Instead of sending for his physician, he will blame it to the last food he has eaten and he will dose himself with purgatives. If he has appendicitis, great harm is done both by the purgation and by the failure to have the condition properly and promptly diagnosed.

When there is pain in the lower right side of the abdomen, I dareway that most people think of appendicitis and consult a physician. But what the public has not yet generally learned—and herein lies the danger of delay—is that in appendicitis the pain very often starts, and for many hours remains, elsewhere.

There is widespread belief that an attack of appendicitis can be "frozen out" with an ice-bag. Of course, many attacks subside spontaneously, but I venture to assert that no attack of appendicitis was ever cured, or even shortened, by an ice-bag. Chilling by the ice does not extend deeper than the skin. To be sure, the ice-bag may relieve the pain, too its benumbs the sensibility of the skin. But in these respects it is dangerous insofar as it makes the signs that the physician has to watch.

True, appendicitis often subsides spontaneously, but the individual who has had a bona fide attack is always liable to have another, probably more severe, and perhaps at a time and place where a competent surgeon is not at hand. Therefore, if you or your child has an attack, have the appendix removed at once or, if your doctors counsel waiting, then at the first convenient time. When the inflammation is confined to the appendix, the operation is usually comparatively simple and the patient is home again in ten days. When pus has spread beyond the appendix it means a more complicated operation, weeks of drainage and, often, death from peritonitis or other cause.

"Chronic appendicitis," by which is meant no recurring attacks but more or less continuous pain and tenderness in the appendix region without any "attack," does sometimes occur. But it is by no means as common as is generally supposed. In most cases of this type the pain is not due to the appendix and is not relieved by its removal. Usually the physician first eliminates all other causes for such pain, organic and functional, physic and occupational, before deciding to operate.

Many of these cases, as well as with other disturbances, can be discovered and corrected by a periodic health audit. Such as examination is a good thing to have once a year.

BURGESS BEDTIME STORY

Peter Visits An Old Friend

Though riches fortune may not send,
He is not poor who has a friend.
—Peter Rabbit.

Peter Rabbit was sitting not far from the old stump where he had first heard the unknown singer in the Green Forest. He visited that old stump very often. He just couldn't keep away from it. In fact, he went over there every time he was in the Green Forest. Suddenly there appeared on the very top of it a small form which Peter could not see very clearly. His heart leaped. Could this be the unknown singer? Peter held his breath and leaned forward eagerly. Then a wave of disappointment swept over him. That was none of the feathered folk and so could not be the little singer for whom he had searched so long. He recognized an old friend, one whom he had not seen for a long time.

"Hello, Whitefoot," said he.

"Hello yourself," replied Whitefoot the wood mouse, for that is who it was. "What are you doing over here?"

"Nothing in particular. Just sitting around," replied Peter.

"What is all this I have heard about you?" asked Whitefoot in his funny squeaky voice.

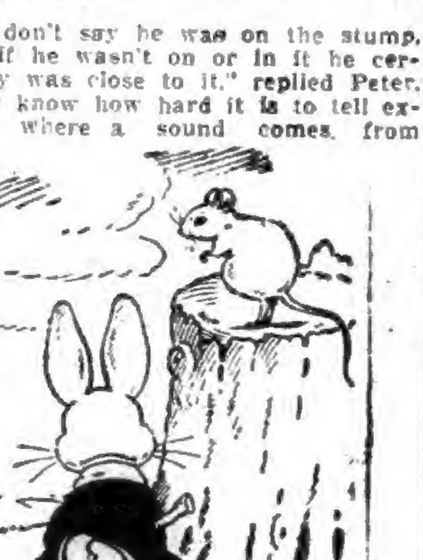
"What have you heard!" asked Peter in his turn.

"That you spend all your time hunting for a stranger whom no one else has heard or seen," replied Whitefoot. "Tell me about it."

The thought came to Peter that here was an old friend who lived all the time in the green forest and probably not very far from that old stump on which he was now sitting. Perhaps he might know something of that strange singer. For a minute or two he hesitated to tell Whitefoot the story, for he had been laughed at so much and made fun of so often that he had become very sensitive. But timid little Whitefoot did not seem like one who would tease, so he decided to tell the whole story. Whitefoot listened without once laughing.

"I don't say he was on the stump, yet you didn't see him," said he at last.

"I don't say he was on the stump, but if he wasn't on or in it he certainly was close to it," replied Peter. "You know how hard it is to tell exactly where a sound comes from sometimes. But I know it came from somewhere around this old stump. Have you seen a strange bird around here any time, Whitefoot?"



"Hello yourself," replied Whitefoot the Wood Mouse.

"Not I," replied Whitefoot, shaking his head. "If one was around I would be likely to see him, for though I keep out of sight myself there isn't much around here that I don't see. What did you say that song was like?"

Peter thoughtfully scratched a long ear with a long hindfoot. "I can't tell you," said he. "Not being a singer myself, I can't tell you just what it was like. But it was a real song. Yes, sir, it was a real song. It wasn't very loud. You know how some of the Warbler family sing. Well, it was something like one of those songs, yet different. It wasn't just like any song I ever have heard. And it was in the night. That is the funny part of it. If it hadn't been I might have seen the singer. The Black Shadows must have hidden him. Everybody laughs at me when I tell about it. They say I was dreaming, but I wasn't. I was as wide awake as I am this very minute. You believe me, don't you Whitefoot?"

Whitefoot nodded his pretty little head, but there was a twinkle that Peter couldn't see in his big bright eyes as he replied. "Yes, Peter, I believe you really heard what you say you heard. But who could that singer have been?"

Peter sighed. "I wish I knew," said he. "It is a mystery and I don't like a mystery. I wish you would keep your ears open, Whitefoot, and if you hear that song try to find out who the singer is. Hello! Where have you gone to?"

Whitefoot had disappeared while Peter's head was turned just for a second. You know Whitefoot is a very little fellow and he can move quickly. Peter looked about hastily to see if some enemy had frightened Whitefoot, who is very, very timid. But no enemy was in sight.

"He must have imagined he heard something," thought Peter. "Well, I'll wait. He'll probably appear again as suddenly as he disappeared."

Just then something happened that made Peter forget all about Whitefoot.

A Washington Bystander

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, Nov. 13—To his great regret the Bystander finds he has often done Secretary Stimson an injustice in this column. He has called the cabinet dean "Colonel Stimson.

As a matter of fact, Stimson was a cambot colonel overseas during the war and afterward a one-star general in the reserve. He prosecuted his military studies vigorously after his first cabinet service, even taking a course at the army war college. And as the result of these labors and his war service he held a reserve commission as brigadier-general after the war.

That commission has lapsed, the Bystander understands. Stimson is now 63 and probably does not expect a call to active service to come while he still would be young enough to serve in the field, even as a general officer. But by military courtesy he still rates the title "general" instead of colonel.

On Combat Line

To correct an inadvertent further error about the military aspects of the Stimson career, let it be said that both his reserve and active commissions during and since the World war have been in the combat line.

He commanded a regiment of field guns in France. Before the United States entered the war, however, and as a corollary to his own service in President Taft's cabinet as war secretary, Stimson held a reserve commission in the judge advocate general's corps, the legal department of the army.

The wartime war secretary, Newton Baker, is now a reserve colonel of that corps.

T. R. Liked 'Colonel'

Speaking of military titles, the Bystander recalls his own perplexity when assigned by The Associated Press to travel with the late Theodore Roosevelt in 1911, as to how he should address the former president.

It was rather a small and intimate party, and to say simply "Mr. Roosevelt" every time you spoke to him seemed a little stilted. So the Bystander asked the ex-rough rider what he preferred, and was urged to address him as "Colonel."

Folks who deal with Mr. Stimson day by day have the impression that colonel is the title he prefers. It recalls those days in France with his regiment, perhaps.

Anyhow, Colonel Stimson he will continue to be to the Bystander until further notice, now that suitable recognition of his just claims to higher rank has been given.

Colonel Stimson has not wholly lost interest in military matters. He is the only secretary of state of record equipped with a military aide, and he reviewed troops a-horseback this last summer, which hasn't been done by a secretary of state in generations, if ever before.

A HISTORY OF CONNECTICUT INDUSTRY

Released by Manufacturers Association of Connecticut

H. G. Shepard & Sons, New Haven

The wood bending firm of H. G. Shepard & Sons was organized in 1880, under the guidance of H. G. Shepard, who had been employed for many years by builders of heavy carriages, as a designer and maker of carriage parts. He had obtained national recognition for the excellence of his product and as an expert on timber used in the trade. He was for many years, and up to the time of his death, chairman of the lumber committee of the Carriage Builders National association, then next to the largest business organization in the United States.

Previous to 1880, Mr. Shepard had become interested in the bending of woods used in carriage building and invented entirely new methods for the production of bent wood, which gave promise of results far in advance of anything that had been accomplished up to that time. In the fall of 1880 a factory room of about 2,000 square feet of floor space was rented and the business started. Webster G. and Arthur L. Shepard, sons of H. G. Shepard, were placed in charge of production, while John F. Shepard learned his trade from his father who continued in his regular employment until the following year.

In 1881, the business was moved to quarters which seemed ample for the expansion assured by the production of bendings required in the building of coaches and similar carriage work. The production of bendings which had been thought impossible before, took the place of sawed out curves, which were unsatisfactory.

News of the successful production of the heaviest and most difficult bendings required, spread rapidly throughout the carriage industry and the company very soon became favorably known for the great advances made in the art of bending wood. The leadership thus acquired, has been maintained through the half century of the company's existence, and has brought to New England the credit of superiority in the production of difficult bent wood.

The company began under the name of W. G. Shepard & Co., consisting of H. G. Shepard and the oldest son, W. G. Shepard; John F. and Arthur L. were admitted as partners and the company name changed to the present form in 1883.

Many difficulties had to be overcome during the early years in order to supply the demand for many new types of bendings, and to keep up with the requirements of a rapidly expanding business, without outside capital.

When larger quarters were again found necessary and the present location, at the corner of James and River streets, was acquired in 1888; it consisted of a three story carriage shop and land, sufficient for additional buildings, several of which have since been erected.

This company supplied the large amount of bent wood used in the Curtiss airplanes made during the World war, and was the first to make wood mud guards, handle bars for bicycles and bicycle wood rims for general use. The bicycle department was sold to the American Wood Rim company in 1906.

Among the awards for specimen exhibits are two medals and parchments, highly prized by the company; one a gold medal secured at the International exhibition in Paris, in 1889; for an exhibit made at the request of the U. S. government at its expense for transportation; another at World's exposition in Chicago in 1893. For a very fine display of bent wood, which well represents the great advance made in wood bending in recent years, the awarding judges stating they would like to have added, if permissable, an advance mainly due to the work of this company.

The present output is used in all lines where curved parts are required. The company motto, which embodies the progressive spirit of the organization from the beginning, follows:

"With the progress of the age keep pace;
In the forefront of the struggle run;
Then will you speed with vantage in the race,
Nor tread upon the heels of anyone."

For several years prior to the death of their father, H. G. Shepard, in 1911, and to date, the business has been carried on by two of the original partnership, John F. and Arthur L. Shepard.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

No Actually Non-Gaseous Mines

Mr. Editor:—As an old miner allow me to express appreciation of your editorial on 'Mine Safety'.

The general public must bear in mind, however, that there is no such thing as a 'non-gaseous' mine in actuality; but simply that in some mines the body of gas is relatively small; also that rock-dust spraying is but a makeshift at best, and creates problems of its own, and that no system of ventilation yet devised can make a mine actually non-gaseous. A mine is a place of eternal danger despite all modern precautions. The operators deserve the highest credit for their efforts to meet this everpresent danger. And the common miner deserves the goodwill of the people who depend on him for winter comfort, and machine power.

Mr. Editor: That item in the Bulletin about the Danish girl who wrote her address on an egg and stated that she would marry the man who ate the egg, reminded me of the colored waiter in a New York restaurant. When asked, "Are these eggs fresh?" he replied, "I don't know, suh. I has only been here two years. I don't know how long they had been here before I came here."

Castoria... for CHILDREN'S ailments
ARE you prepared to render first aid and quick comfort the moment your youngster has an upset of any sort? Could you do the right thing—immediately—though the emergency came without warning—perhaps tonight? Castoria is a mother's standby at such times. There is nothing like it in emergencies, and nothing better for every-day use. For a sudden attack of colic, or for the gentle relief of constipation; to allay a feverish spell, or to soothe a fretful baby that can't sleep. This pure vegetable preparation is always ready to ease an ailing youngster. It is just as harmless as the recipe on the wrapper reads. If you see Chas. H. Fletcher's signature, it is genuine Castoria. It is harmless to the smallest infant; doctors will tell you so.
You can tell from the formula on the wrapper how mild it is, and how good for little systems. But continue with Castoria until a child is grown.

Sidney Morse Colgate

At Orange, N. J., Wednesday, 2,000 persons, counting those who were unable to enter the crowded church, attended the funeral services for Sidney Morse Colgate, Norwich Free Academy, '80, manufacturer and philanthropist, held in the North Orange Baptist church by its pastor, Rev. Dr. Joseph C. Hazen. Music was provided by Dr. David Williams, organist and choirmaster of St. Bartholomew's in New York and a mixed quartet. There was no eulogy, but Dr. Hazen in his prayer gave thanks for the example Mr. Colgate had set in his business, religious and social activities.

The pulpit end of the church was banked with flowers. A pall of orchids covered the coffin.

By order of Mayor Murray, all public schools closed at noon. The city hall, which was draped in black, also closed at that hour, as did the Orange district court and the police court.

Delegations were present from nearly all the churches and civic and social service organizations of the Oranges, including the chamber of commerce and Civics, of which Mr. Colgate had been president. SUFFERS SERIOUS INJURIES IN FALL DOWN ELEVATOR SHAFT

G. Herbert Rich, the well known violinist, who resides in an apartment on the fifth floor of the Connor building, 43 Broadway, was seriously injured in a fall down the elevator shaft there about 1 o'clock this (Friday) morning. He landed on the top of the elevator, which was standing at the first floor, and was removed from there by Deputy Chief D. J. Brennan and Squad A of the fire department, who responded to a telephone call for help.

At the Backus hospital to which he was taken in the motor police patrol, it was stated that his injuries consisted of fractured left arm, fractured right leg, fractured left cheek and many contusions and abrasions. When first removed from the top of the elevator Mr. Rich talked to those who were helping him, but later at the hospital he was reported to be unconscious and his condition was considered serious.

Earlier in the evening Mr. Rich had been playing in the orchestra at the Christ church supper and sale and when he returned home, he and Mrs. Rich spent the evening playing cards with two friends, Mr. and Mrs. Coffey. When their visitors came to go home, Mr. Rich accompanied them to the elevator shaft doorway, unlocked the door and stepped off, evidently expecting to find the elevator there.

Efforts to reach him by trying to break in the elevator door on the first floor were unsuccessful and the firemen were summoned by James E. Sheridan, night bank watchman, who telephoned to central headquarters. When the firemen arrived, they went to the second floor of the building and from there were able to get to the top of the elevator in the shaft and lift Mr. Rich out. He was carried down stairs to the police patrol, which had been sent from headquarters, with Sergeant Mathew Delaney to assist Officer Peter Driscoll, who had been rendering assistance in reaching the injured man.

SENIOR CORPS LEADERS AT Y. M. C. A. GATHERING

The monthly meeting and supper of the Senior Leaders corps of the Young Men's Christian association Thursday evening at the association building was featured by an address by Ira Matheny of New Haven, new state Y. physical director, who spoke interestingly and instructively upon matters having to do with the work of a leader. Guests to the number of 22 from leader corps in Meriden, Middletown and Willimantic were present, also a number of members of the board of directors of the Y.

An appetizing menu was served at the supper by members of the girls' group, Mrs. Albert P. Streeter, instructor, and James L. Case was song-leader for the community singing. Two excellent solos were rendered by James Lockhart of Norwich, Mrs. Harry Stebbins furnishing the accompaniments at the piano. Harold E. Robbins, president of the association, presided as toast master in an interesting way and introduced Herbert B. Cary, president of the board of directors, to welcome the gathering.

Following Mr. Cary's remarks Frank Hargraves, a member of the local leader corps, was introduced and spoke briefly, referring to the local association as a "great institution for boys and young men." Mr. Hargraves had the honor of introducing the new state secretary, who, in his opening remarks, declared that the association will only be as strong as its laymen, no matter how good its officials are. He enumerated a number of things that the leader can do in the instruction of beginners in the gymnasium and went on to tell of the leaders' problems.

In making clear his point of the sacrifices that a leader must make Physical Director Matheny spoke of the sacrifice of a Georgia Tech football player, an expert in his line, but who upon orders from the college coach had to take a back seat in a certain game and allow an associate to receive all the glory. He brought out the fact that leaders in the past had a smattering knowledge of all departments in physical education, but owing to the change of times the present day leader must specialize in a certain branch.

He cautioned the group of leaders against poor sportsmanship, remarking that this qualification of a leader was a most important one. In conclusion the new secretary gave a blackboard talk on the qualifications of an ideal leader, in which the gathering participated. According to the group an ideal leader must have at least 14 qualifications, seven of which were placed in the absolutely necessary category, five in the secondary column and two in the third.

Following Mr. Matheny's address the gathering repaired to the gymnasium where a group was put through a number of marching stunts by William Jackson, physical director of the Meriden Y., and two candidates were initiated by the Meriden leaders' club.

FINAL SEASON'S MEETING OF SIX CHURCH CONFERENCE

The final meeting of this year of the six church conference was held Wednesday at Plainfield Congregational church and was called to order about 11 by Rev. W. C. Prentiss, who is about to relinquish his pastorate of this church. The organ prelude was followed by the invocation by the pastor, responsive readings, hymn and the scripture read by Rev. D. C. Stone of Hanover. A duet, "In the Cross of Christ I Glory", was rendered by James Royle and Mrs. William Krauss, and prayer was offered by Rev. G. W. Clark of Preston. The offering was taken by Deacon Barstow and Rev. Mr. Fuller, whose father had been deacon here.

A roll call showed 182 present, 14 of whom were of the clergy, 54 were from various undesignated communions, 40 from Plainfield, 22 from Preston, 18 from Griswold, 19 from Hanover, 5 from Jewett City and 3 from Lisbon.

The address of the morning was by Rev. Joseph Vasey, who has recently come to Putnam church. His theme was "Playing Children's Games, Especially I Spy." In part he said:

"You grow old when you stop playing. We are continually trying to find each other. The great men have became so by seeking the colossal. Darwin, Columbus and their like have found by seeking something for the world worth while. Each game has its rules. Our rule for the life-giving game of seek is advanced by two cautions: First, it had best not be played on stilts. You cannot look down on your world without losing suppleness and efficiency; second, it is not found in a mirror. He who looks at himself isn't finding much."

He closed his address by illustrations taken from his experiences in the World war.

Rev. W. I. Muttart of Hampton closed the morning session with the benediction.

At the bountiful dinner served by the Plainfield women, Rev. W. J. Reynolds offered thanks.

Afternoon Session.

At 2 p. m. the services were resumed by a devotional service led by Rev. Harold Arnold of Pachaug.

A business session followed wherein a committee on resolutions presented a threefold minute, which was accepted which expressed gratitude for the dinner to the women of the church, delight in music and the speaker of the day and appreciation of the nine year service by Rev. William Carlos Prentiss, who was heartily commended to his new work in North Brookfield, Mass. This latter minute called for several commendatory remarks from the floor.

Another resolution was lost after being put to vote. That was to change the method in connection with the mid-day meal, from an offering taken of voluntary participation to a definite ticket system and a flat rate of 50 cents. After discussion that showed a growing drift toward such a change, a majority was not yet ready for it.

Singing followed and after waiving the minutes of the last meeting Rev. Lydia Hartig of Ekonk brought brief greeting from a sister group of churches to the north. A second duet was rendered.

Rev. Henry J. Kilbourn, D. D., of Brookfield, Mass., then brought his message, taking for his text, "The Power of an Endless Life."

He first gave the background. To meet the mighty power of the Roman empire—a few courageous groups of those who owed allegiance to an Unseen King, whose words and ways they knew. Endless and indissoluble was the new relation. They did not think that Christianity was entirely covered by the Golden Rule, although that was much of their human relativity. The cross and its meaning had a place. The resurrection had still more. The widening window of Jesus God—ready to share and import His nature of its endless urge. Not a sprint to be started and over in a few seconds—but a marathon race that needs endurance is a Christian.

ARMY AND NAVY UNABLE TO AGREE ON DATES FOR BENEFIT GRID GAME

NEW YORK, Nov. 13.—(AP)—All efforts to bring about a football clash between the Army and Navy this year for the benefit of the unemployed apparently had failed tonight.

With both institutions willing to forget their differences over eligibility rules long enough to meet for charity's sake, negotiations for the game seemed to have foundered because no date, agreeable or convenient to both, could be found.

The Army took the first step in the latest attempt to bring about a meeting with the Navy for the first time since 1927. Maj. General William R. Smith, superintendent of the military academy, announced the Army was ready to play the Navy in New York, Dec. 6. He suggested that the contest be played for the benefit of the unemployed and that all eligibility differences be waived for this one clash.

The naval academy immediately replied that it could not accept the December 6 date since the midshipmen already were under contract to meet Pennsylvania on that day. West Point officials had understood that the Navy-Penn game was arranged conditional upon a possible resumption of football relations between the two government institutions but Rear Admiral Samuel S. Robison said the Penn contract contained no waiver clause and therefore could not be voided under any circumstances.

The admiral immediately offered two alternative dates for the game, Nov. 29 and Dec. 13, and expressed a preference for the latter Saturday.

Officially this offer had not been received at West Point tonight but it was said authoritatively that neither of the Navy's alternative dates could be accepted.

Major Philip B. Fleming, graduate manager of athletics, pointed out that the Army was under contract to meet Notre Dame on Nov. 29 and that this date therefore was out of the question. As for Dec. 13, Major Fleming said it would interfere with semi-annual examinations.

Admiral Robison countered that the Dec. 13 date would be just as embarrassing to the naval academy as to West Point in the matter of conflict with examinations but he believed both institutions should ignore this difficulty in the interests of a "worthy cause." This attitude did not meet with a favorable reception at West Point.

There still was a possibility that some date might be found, but it was slight. Most observers were of the opinion that no clash between the two schools could be hoped for this year.

SINGER DEFENDS TITLE AGAINST CANZONERI TONIGHT

NEW YORK, Nov. 13—(AP)—Young Al Singer, who won himself a lightweight championship by knocking out Sammy Mandell last summer, will carry the crown into battle for the first time tomorrow night in a fifteen round match with Tony Canzoneri in Madison Square Garden.

Singer's defense of the 135 pound title will mark the first title go in that class staged indoors here since Benny Leonard whipped Ritchie Mitchell in the old Garden years ago. Under financial conditions existing in the fight game today, however, despite the drawing powers of the two local favorites, gate receipts are not expected to exceed $50,000. The Singer-Mandell affair, staged in the Yankee stadium, drew better than $150,000.

The mental rather than physical condition of the youngsters perplexes the wise ones who whisper the odds on tomorrow night's battle. Singer, after knocking out Mandell in a round, tackled Jimmy McLarnin, the Vancouver belter, in an overweight match, and was himself battered senseless. The critics fear that Singer, just turned 21, may have been "spoiled" by that defeat.

Canzoneri, not yet 23, still is such a veteran in point of action that the ring wise believe his best days are behind him. He lost the decision in Mandell's last successful title defense and was beaten a few months ago by Billy Petrolle, of Fargo, N. D. He has rested for the past few months, however, and seems in splendid condition. Almost two years ago, Canzoneri and Singer met here for the first time and the match was declared a draw, although most of the critics gave Tony a wide edge on points.

Neither youngster will have any particular trouble making the class weight. Singer will scale under 135 pounds and Canzoneri, who already has won and lost the featherweight crown, about 132.

Harry Ebbets and Ben Jeby, young New York middleweights, meet in the ten round semi-final.

BAER TO MEET BRADDOCK AT NEW YORK ON DEC. 19

NEW YORK, Nov 13—(AP)—Max Baer, sensational California heavyweight, will meet Jimmy Braddock, of New York, in a ten round bout in Madison Square Garden, December 19, it was announced here today. The match will mark the first eastern appearance of the clouting westerner, who has a record of 23 knockouts in 25 fights.

Efforts to match Baer and Paulino Uzcudun, now in Spain for a match November 23, with Primo Carnera, failed when the New York athletic commission warned promoters here that Uzcudun would be suspended for fighting Carnera, who is under the New York ban. Uzcudun will not give up his match with Carnera, Garden promoters learned.

AGGIE-RHODY CLASH AT STORRS TOMORROW

(Special to The Bulletin)

STORRS, Nov. 13—Students of Rhode Island State college will follow their football team here Saturday to witness the annual contest with their traditional rivals, Connecticut Aggies. This game will be one of the battles which have been fought almost annually since 1897.

After the game in which Rhode Island defeated the Aggies at Kingston last fall, the record of football games between the two institutions shows the Engineers to be slightly in the lead with 10 wins to the Aggies 9. Three games have ended in ties.

During the first four years of competition, Connecticut rode roughshod over its rivals, but from 1903 to 1910 Rhode Island found its stride taking four out of five games played and tying the other one. After that scores were a little closer although Rhody continued to take most of the victories until 1922. Since 1922 Rhody has succeeded in scoring a total of 33 points against the Aggies while Connecticut has rolled up a total of 92 points.

Of the last seven games Rhody has won two, tied one and lost four. The Aggies continue to hold the lead in the total number of points scored in all games with 266 to their credit while Rhody has 252.

To date this season Rhode Island has had an admirable record with but two defeats on their slate, the losses having been received at the hands of Brown, 7-0, and Maine, 13-12. They also boast Ken Goff, leading touchdown scorer of the country, who has been one of the major contributors to their success thus far.

The Aggies, on the other hand, have won but a single contest out of the six played this year. However, the Nutmeg eleven is well prepared for Saturday's game and will probably start the same lineup that has been used during the last two games.

Today's practice consisted of a drill on signals, kicking, and passing. Pierce and Eddy worked on the punting, Harger on place-kicking, and DeRosa on drop-kicking.

BOOTH TO BE HELD IN RESERVE AGAINST PRINCETON

NEW HAVEN, Nov 13—(AP)—Coach Mal Stevens announced today at the conclusion of a hard two hour practice that McLennan will start for Yale as quarterback instead of Albie Booth in Saturday's game with Princeton.

The selection of McLennan, who returned to the squad this week, came as no great surprise, since Yale followers had predicted earlier in the week that Stevens would probably revert to his early season plan of keeping Booth in reserve. Parker, Dunn and Crowley will be in the starting backfield with McLennan.

Today's workout was held at Anthony Thompson field and while closed to the general public, was opened to Yale undergraduates. Previous practices during the week had been held in secret at the bowl.

One hour was devoted to live tackling, while the rest of the time was spent in kicking, passing and other fundamentals. A signal drill topped off the programme.

The squad will leave at 10 a. m. tomorrow for Princeton and expects to arrive in New Jersey in time to hold a final workout in Palmer stadium.

THREE TEAMS DROPPED FROM YALE GRID SLATE

NEW HAVEN, Nov. 13—(AP)—Three rivals who appeared on the 1930 schedule are missing from the 1931 Yale football schedule, which was announced tonight by the Yale A. A. The next season will also see the Elis reverting back to an eight game campaign, as against a 1930 schedule of nine games.

The old football rivalry between Yale and Brown will be temporarily interrupted next season. The Brunonians have agreed to relinquish their place on the schedule in order to permit Yale to play Chicago at Chicago on October 17 as a tribute to Alonzo A. Stagg, who will observe his 40th anniversary as a football coach. St. John's of Maryland, will replace Alfred next year, while Maryland will be the third missing team.

The schedule: October 3, Maine; 10, Georgia; 17, Chicago at Chicago; 24, Army; 31, Dartmouth; November 7, St. John's of Maryland, 14, Princeton; and 21, Harvard at Cambridge.

BIG GREEN HAS SHORT PRACTICE ON HOME FIELD

HANOVER, N. H., Nov. 13—(AP)—The Dartmouth varsity football squad concluded its home practice for Saturday's Cornell game with a short workout today, and then entrained for Freeville, N. Y., a short distance from Ithaca.

Head Coach Jackson was pessimistic about the Green's chances against the big Red team when he and his 38 players quit Hanover. He feared that the injured knee of Eddie Toothhaker, second string quarterback, would upset his backfield plans and prevent him from playing Wild Bill McCall at halfback.

Today's work stressed the attack Dartmouth will use against Gil Dobie's team and Cannel, said he would give his players a short but brisk drill tomorrow at Freeville.

Cannell refused to reveal his starting lineup but, unless something unforseen happens, he will probably start Morton at quarterback, Frigard or McCall and Wolff at halfback and Wilkin at fullback.

HOPPE TO PROMOTE NEW BILLIARD FERERATION

NEW YORK, Nov. 13—(AP)—Pursuing his move of independence, Willie Hoppe announced today his plan to form a new organization known as the Federation of Billiard Players, a national, self-governing membership body to guide the destinies and finances of players in this country. Through this medium Hoppe hopes to break the alleged monopoly of the National Billiard association.

"I have obtained more than sufficient financial backing for a running start in New York," says Hoppe.

"On December 1 when I begin an exhibition tour that will take me to the Pacific coast, I shall organize the sectional membership groups and be ready for national incorporation by the first of the year."

Hoppe bolted the N. B. A this week with the announcement that he would defend his 18.1 balkline title against Welker Cochrane next week.

Huertgen-Rausch Team Wins

BERLIN, Nov. 13—(AP)—The German team of Gottfried Huertgen and Victor Rausch won Berlin's six day bicycle race which ended at 11 o'clock tonight, Huertgen and Rausch, the latter well known in the United States, won by two laps. Fifteen teams competed.

Bobby Walthour, of the United States, and his Australian partner, Harris Horder, dropped out of the race at an early stage.

BEAUREGARD TO BOX NADEAU IN STAR BOUT OF SHYMA CARD ON WEDNESDAY

Al Beauregard of Taftville, New England bantamweight champion, dons the gloves again next Wednesday night at Parish hall in the main bout of an all-star show under the auspices of the Shyma Boxing club. Buster Nadeau of Holyoke, one of the scrappiest little boxers in New England, is to be his opponent. Nadeau and Beauregard were supposed to box several weeks ago but, owing to illness, Nadeau did not go through with the bout. North Adams has tried to secure the bout again but the Shyma club at last landed it. Nadeau is one of the leading 120-pound boys in New England, clever and a hard hitter.

A strong supporting card has been arranged for the main go. Vic Darr, who has been coming to the front in rapid strides, takes on Barney Sweeney of Providence, formerly of Brooklyn, N. Y. Sweeney is more or less an unknown in these parts but comes with an exceptionally fine record. It was thought at first to get Joe Barrie, who has fought here before, for Darr, but a search of the records reveals that Sweeney has taken Barrie over the bumps several times, which makes Sweeney an even better attraction than Barrie.

Al Koziol clashes with Al Porter of Fall River in another eight-rounder. Porter has been boxing in the Bay State for the past year or two and has met with excellent success. Porter is reported to be a clever boy who packs plenty of steam behind his punches.

For the preliminaries, Al Brouillard and Julio Rossi meet in a renewal of their feud, Brouillard having taken the first decision by a close margin.

For the opener, Snooks Lacey tackles Young Comfort of Westerly in a four-rounder. Snooks showed well in the last bout and has the fans with him.

SONNENBERG BEATS SHERRY THROUGH AN ACCIDENT

BOSTON, Nov. 13.—(AP)—An accident tonight gave Gus Sonnenberg, holder of the disputed wrestling title, the deciding fall over Jack Sherry, of Ohio. Sherry was trying to give Sonnenberg an airplane whirl and fell backwards toward the mat when Referee Leon Burbank suddenly broke Sonnenberg's clutch on the ropes. Sonnenberg landed on top of his powerful rival and managed to pin his shoulders to the mat for the required three seconds.

After the match, one of the roughest ever staged here, Sherry struck the official several times before his handlers pulled him out of the ring.

Sonnenberg won the first fall, after 38 minutes of furious grappling, with his favorite flying tackle. Sherry squared matters in 14 minutes by weakening Sonnenberg with headlocks and giving him an airplane whirl and body slam. Sherry appeared to have Sonnenberg in dire distress when the accidental fall was scored, after nine minutes.

HARVARD TO USE FULL STRENGTH AGAINST CRUSADERS

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Nov. 13—(AP)—Every football weapon in Harvard's armory will be used by Head Coach Arnold Horween on Saturday to gain a victory over the Holy Cross Crusaders, once considered a "warm-up" for the Crimson's objective clash with Yale. Horween announced his starting lineup after today's workout and the Crimson's opening team will be the strongest that it can assemble. Moushegian and Cgden will open at the ends, Myerson and Kales at tackle, Trainor and Myerson, guards, and Captain Ben Ticknor will complete the line at center. The Harvard backfield will comprise Wood at quarterback, Mays and Huguley at the halfback posts and Bernie White at fullback.

Horween gave his team another long workout, spending much time on fundamental drills and a dummy scrimmage against Holy Cross formations.

BRUNDAGE WILL BE CHOICE FOR A. A. U. PRES.

NEW YORK, Nov. 13—(AP)—The re-election of Avery Brundage, of Chicago as president of the Amateur Athletic union at the national convention in Washington on Sunday, Monday and Tuesday, was forecast in A. A. U. circles today.

No other names have been mentioned in what little pre-convention discussion there has been.

President Brundage, a former track and field athlete, has served as president for two years.

STRIBLING SAYS HE WILL BOX FOR TITLE IN JUNE

MONROE, La., Nov. 13—(AP)—W. L. "Young" Stribling, here for a boxing exhibition, said tonight that he will fight Max Schmeling for the heavyweight title next June in Chicago or New York.

Stribling said that terms already had ben agreed upon and that the contracts will be signed next January.

W. E. A. F. CHAIN TO BROADCAST SINGER CANZONERI BOUT

NEW YORK, Nov. 13—(AP)—The lightweight championship fight tomorrow night between Tony Canzoneri and Al Singer, is to be put on within hearing of the radio audience.

The National Broadcasting company will give a blow by blow account of the scrap on the WEAF network starting at 9:30 p. m. Graham McNamee, veteran announcer, will give the details and Ford Frick will summarize the rounds.

Jewett City Beats Recreation

In one of the closest and exciting match games ever played in Jewett City the "Jolly Five" defeated the Norwich "Rec's" by 6 balls. The crowd of over 300 were in a constant uproar as the match was in doubt until Arremony ran 12 balls to run out and clinch the match for Jewett City.

One of the features of the match was the defeat of Al. Benson by Baker. Incidentally this is the third time Baker has beaten Benson in match games.

Baker had high runs of 26 and 24 while Benson got in runs of 25 and 23.

A return game will be played at the Recreation Parlors next week. The scores:

NOTRE DAME AGREES TO CHANGE OF N. W. GAME

SOUTH BEND, Ind., Nov. 13—(AP)—Notre Dame tonight agreed to Northwestern university's proposal to transfer the 1931 Notre Dame-Northwestern football game from South Bend to Soldier field, in the interest of charity.

The Rev. Father Charles L. O'Donnell, president of Notre Dame, in a letter to President Walter Dill Scott of Northwestern, made the announcement tonight.

Northwestern, through Dr. Scott, yesterday offered to immediately advance $100,000 to Governor Emmerson's unemployment commission, if Notre Dame would agree to give Northwestern the extra proceeds up to $100,000 made available by transferring the game to the larger stadium.

Only consent of the western conference faculty committee on athletics is needed to complete the arrangement.

Dr. Scott called President O'donnell last night and the Notre Dame faculty board of control of athletics, in a special meeting tonight approved the proposal.

AMERICANS AND MAPLE LEAFS PLAY TO SCORELESS TIE

TORONTO, Nov. 13—(AP)—The New York Americans and Toronto Maple Leafs played the first scoreless tie of the new national leauge hockey season in the local opening tonight.

The game was a typical early season exhibition, neither team showing good form. Warm weather and ultra strict officiating also detracted from the interest. The Americans, greatly improved over last season, held the Leafs thoroughly in check with Red Dutton and Bill Brydge displaying some fine defensive work. King Clancy, purchased from Ottawa this year, was the backbone of the Toronto play.

Twenty penalties were meted out, all of them minors except one double major to Ace Bailey for clipping Joe Simpson over the eye with his stick. It was the first case of the new "automatic" penalty as the referees did not see the incident.

TO INVESTIGATE ATHLETIC POLICIES AT BOSTON COLLEGE

BOSTON, Nov. 13—(AP)—Twenty well-known former athletes and graduates of Boston university today called a meeting of the alumni to discuss the athletic policies of the university and demand an investigation into them. The meeting will be held tomorrow night.

Although the university has a large enrollment it football squad is small and this year suffered severe setbacks at the hands of the Army and Dartmouth, Rhode Island and Depauw.

The letter sent out by the group said that in a recent game the coach could not take out an injured player because he had no one to take his place.

Al Marsters, former Dartmouth star, and Hillary Mahaney, former all-American end at Holy Cross, coach the team.

PRINCETON AND MICHIGAN TO MEET AFTER 50 YEARS

ANN HARBOR, Mich., Nov. 13—(AP)—After a lapse of 50 years, Princeton and Michigan will meet on the gridiron in 1931, according to next year's University of Michigan football schedule announced tonight. The Tiger and Wolverine have met only once, in 1881.

Princeton will replace Harvard as Michigan's only eastern opponent. During six years of competition with eastern teams Michigan has won four games, lost one and tied one. Navy administered the only defeat, losing two and getting a tie in four games. Harvard was defeated twice.

PROVIDENCE BEAT ARROWS IN CAN.-AM. OPENER

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 13—(AP)—The Providence Reds, defeating champions, opened the Canadian-American hockey league season at the arena tonight with 2 5-1 victory over the Philadelphia Arrows.

The first two periods were bitterly fought, but in the last period the home team showed the effects of the grilling contest and was completely outclassed by the sturdy New England players. Cormier and Hart, two veterans of last year's team, bore the brunt of the attack for Providence.

FALCONS TAKE RANGERS 1 TO 0 IN NAT. OPENER

DETROIT, Nov. 13—(AP)—Detroit's Falcons opened the National Hockey league season here tonight with a 1 to 0 victory over the New York Rangers, and 11,000 spectators saw one of the fastest exhibitions of skating in many a day.

Johnny Sorrell, new Falcon wingman, teamed up with Ebbie Goodfellow, center, to score the lone tally. Sorrell caught the Ranger defense napping late in the second period, broke through and laid a pass to Goodfellow, who beat John Ross Roach in the Ranger net with a hard, slanting shot.

Shyma Practice

The Shyma basketball team will have a practice this Friday evening at 7 o'clock for their opening game Tuesday with the New London Ockfords. It is planned to have dancing after the game.

Plain Speaking

The man who says just what he thinks
May not have many friends,
Unless he thinks as others do—
You see, it all depends.
So if you think as others do
Perhaps plain speech will pay,
But if you think as others don't
Be careful what you say!

Plain speaking is a two-edged sword,
And gracious! how it cuts
Somet'mes when you say what you think,
Eschewing ifs and buts
The man of independent thought
May think he knows what's what,
And get into trouble with his mouth
Unless he keeps it shut.

But if you're sure that with your thoughts
Your hearers will agree,
It's safer to speak out what you think,
Wherever you may be.
For when you say what others think
You know just where you are.
And unrestrained plain speaking then
May make you popular.

Eastern Football Briefs

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 13—(AP)—With most of his first-string backfield definitely out of the Georgia Tech game, Coach Lud Wray confined Penn's workout today to fundamentals. In addition to Gentle, Gette and Ford, neither Masters nor Raffel may be in shape to start against the Southerners.

NEW YORK—Columbia's hopes of stopping Brown took a sharp drop with the announcement that Baldy Hewitt will not be able to play. Sheridan probably will take Hewitt's place at quarterback and Hodupp is expected to fill in at left half in place of Manuel Rivero, who is nursing a badly injured thumb.

PRINCETON—Although he has not taken part in any practice sessions this week, Jay Howson, star Princeton punter, will be in shape to start against Yale, it was announced today. The Tigers had a light workout, remaining on the field only an hour. The starting Tiger backfield probably will consist of Howson, Trix Bennett, Jack James and Bob McIver.

WEST POINT—Full speed scrimmage was the order at Army's football practice for the game with Kentucky Wesleyan. Three teams participated in the workout. Considerable time was devoted to punting with Stecker, Fields, Glattly, Letzeiter and Elliott doing the booting.

NEW YORK—With emphasis laid on forward passing, Fordham went through a light but speedy drill in preparation for its intersectional clash with the strong St. Mary team from California. The far westerners arrived today and limbered up at the Westchester Country club.

PITTSBURGH—A brisk drill was the program for the Pitt Panthers. A brief morning workout will be held Friday before the squad leaves for Columbus for the intersectional game with Ohio State.

ANNAPOLIS—Navy went through a dummy scrimmage in defense against the passing attack the Midshipmen expect from Southern Methodist. Tschirgi, halfback hurt in the Ohio State game, was back in uniform and participated in the drill.

CONFERENCE CALLED TO SETTLE SCHOOL DIFFERENCES

NEW CANAAN, Nov. 13—(AP)—The athletic board of the New Canaan high school tonight appointed a committee, which will seek a conference with a similar committee of the Staples high school of Westport, on the future athletic relations of the two schools which became strained as a result of Saturday's football game.

Whether the schools will continue as athletic rivals or sever relations will depend on the outcome of the conference. Both institutions are in the class B division of the Fairfield County Interscholastic league.

The strained relations resulted from a fracas during Saturday's game at Westport, in which a New Canaan player suffered a fractured nose when he is said to have been struck by a member of the Staples team. The game resulted in a six to six tie.

Recreation Juniors Win

The Recreation Junior Five emerged victors over the Lucky Strike Five of Jewett City by the score of 485 to 366, at the Recreation last night.

Fortin of the visitors was the only one to win his match. Buchka and Anton of the "Recs" won by wide margins and gave their team a comfortable lead.

Swatzburg and Avery played the best game and kept the crowd on edge by their long shots.

Vulgares, playing the final match, was in rare form, beating the Jewett City anchor man by 30 balls.

A return match will be played at Jewett City next Wednesday, the 19th.

The score is as follows:

Recreation:

Swatzburg	100
Anton	100
Buchka	100
J. Eric	85

[illegible]ups the glamor of Booth, Harry Wood, Jimmy Murphy and countless other stars of the big college teams has so far outshone the lights of the lesser colleges that few persons in this vicinity are aware that at Storrs on Saturday will be seen one of the most brilliant backfield men of the country. He is Ken Goff of Rhode Island State which meets Connecticut State in the annual grid classic between these two colleges. When Coach Towle of Brown was asked a few days ago who he thought was the best backfield man in the country, he said "Ken Goff."

Goff is a hard-running back, elusive with a smooth change of pace that makes him a hard man to throw. He is a real triple-threat man in every sense of the word. He runs with the speed of Jim Thorpe, throws with the accuracy of Benny Friedman and punts with all the skill of Charlie Brickley. But his light is hidden under a bushel, as it were. He is with a small college and only a word or two relative to his work squeezes onto the sport pages. The sports writers follow the large teams and thereby pass up some mighty good copy among the small teams.

Put Goff in the backfield of any of the large college teams and the sport pages would devote columns to him. He would outshine most of the so-called stars with a brilliance that would make them very dim in comparison. Goff should just about have everything his own way up at Storrs on Saturday and it will be worth a trip up to Gardner Dow field just to see him perform.

Is all this controversy over the proposed Army-Navy game just a good bit of exploitation or is it the real goods? First there's the old question of eligibility and when that's all ironed out then conflicts in dates crop up to keep the interest alive. Whatever it is, there will be a capacity gate if the game is played. The Army-Navy grid classic was the most colorful on the autumn sports calendar and there is no reason to believe it would be otherwise this season.

Al Singer is apparently not going to be one of those champions who put their crown away in a safety deposit vault for fear somebody is going to take it away from him. Winning his crown early in the summer, Singer puts it up tonight for Tony Canzoneri to take a shot at. Canzoneri is no setup for anybody and Singer is meeting stiff opposition in the ex-featherweight champion.

Joe Faber, local ball player, with the Omaha team of the Western league, is in the clear again. Joe drew down a fine and suspension for playing with an outlaw player. He was recently reinstated upon payment of a $200 fine.

Basketball Challenge

The Shyma Jrs., of Taftville would like to arrange a game with any fast basketball team's averaging 18 years of age, to be played at Taftville every Tuesday as a preliminary to the Shyma Seniors. They would like to hear from the Willimantic Choir Boys, Baltic, Y Emps or New London.

Those wishing to book games write to Shyma Jrs., Taftville, Conn., or call 742.

KILLINGLY DEMOCRATS TO ORGANIZE POLITICAL CLUB

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, Nov. 13.—Killingly is to have a democratic club, it was announced this morning. This town's militant democracy, inspired by its feat of turning Killingly democratic last week in the state election after it had been uninterruptedly in the republican column for 70 years, now proposes to consolidate its present strong position.

For several days past there has been talk of forming a democratic club, with membership from all parts of the town. This informal discussion has resulted in the formation of a temporary organization. The officers pro tempore are A. J. Cavanagh, Dayville, chairman of the democratic town committee, president; Mrs. Frank J. Gorman, Danielson, vice-president, and John M. Dowe and Francis Gagnon, representatives-elect from this town, respectively secretary and treasurer.

Though the meeting for formal organization will not be held until Dec. 3, at a place yet to be designated, from 40 to 50 members of the party already have signified their intention of becoming members. The organizers of the club hope for a membership of at least 200, but some of them feel that it is likely to reach a much higher total. Every member of the party in Killingly will be welcomed in the new club.

When the organization is completed it is planned to hold meetings periodically throughout the year, that matters of party interest may be discussed, campaign plans worked out and various angles of the local, state and national political situation considered.

It so happens that the democrats of this town have in the past had to get along in campaigns without any financial assistance from the state organization. The nominal club membership fees that will be charged here will give Killingly's democrats a little money to work with, and they feel that their success in the last election will gain them some financial aid in the future for campaign expenses here.

THIEVES STEAL CAR, THEN BURGLARIZE STORE

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, Nov. 13.—This morning two crimes were reported to the state police here that it is indicated are chargeable to the same set of crooks. Last night Paul MarcAurele of Moosup parked his Chevrolet truck near his house. At about 1:30 this morning he heard a noise, got out of bed, and as he looked out of his window saw the truck disappearing down the road. Some time within the next two hours the store of John L. Sullivan at Sterling was broken into. Entrance was gained by breaking out a glass in the front door and releasing a bolt. The thieves left plenty of evidence to show that they had made a leisurely call, helping themselves to meat and bread, on which they lunched, and washing down the repast with soda. They were also generous with themselves in appropriating cigars and cigarettes.

Tire marks outside the store were identified today by MarcAurele as having been made by the truck that was stolen from him. State Officers Henry Mayo and Lionel Poirier were engaged in the investigations of the affairs today.

Maitland Named President

Selectman John Z. LaBelle of this town was re-elected vice-president of the Windham County Farmers' association at the annual meeting of the organization in Hampton yesterday. Over 100 persons attended the meeting, which was the best and most satisfactory from many viewpoints the association has held in a long time.

The complete list of officers and directors elected for the ensuing year is as follows: President, Alexander Maitland, Thompson; vice-president, John Z. LaBelle, Killingly; secretary, Whitman Danielson, Putnam; treasurer, Andrew H. Amidon, Abington; directors, Nathan G. Armitage, Ashford; Clarence E. Salmon, Brooklyn; Adelard Laframboise, Canterbury; Michael Landeck, Chaplin; Henry B. Buell, Eastford; Chester C. Jewett, Hampton; Godfrey Farland, Killingly; Peter Chabot, Plainfield; Joseph E. Stoddard, Pomfret; Myron J. Hoxie, Putnam; Charles A. Breen, Scotland; John E. Tanner, Sterling; Everett L. Huntington, Thompson; Carl Josephson, Windham; Louis A. Lindeman, Woodstock; directors-at-large, W. S. Warren, Eastford; Fred Rosebrooks, Windham; Albert H. Williams, Woodstock.

H. E. Lillibridge Dangerously Ill

From a hospital in Waterbury where he is a patient there came reports today of the dangerous illness of H. Edward Lillibridge, long a resident of Danielson. He is understood to be suffering from septic poisoning. Yesterday he underwent an operation for the relief of his condition, and today was to be visited by a New Haven specialist. His mother, Mrs. Henry C. Lillibridge, of Danielson, is with him. Mr. Lillibridge is a resident of Naugatuck, where he has been in the employ of an undertaking concern for years past.

Chestnuts Not Likely to Return

To those who knew them and delighted in them in years gone by there will be disappointment over the forecast of Dr. G. P. Clinton that chestnut trees are not likely to come back. Dr. Clinton is the botanist of the Connecticut Agricultural Experiment station. In many sections of the town of Killingly and in other nearby towns chestnut sprouts have grown so commandingly in the past five or six years as to inspire the hope that one day beautiful chestnut groves would again be seen in this area. This fall a few chestnut burrs were found within the limits of the town, and the chestnuts within them were nice. However, Dr. Clinton points out that these sprouts are growing out of the stumps of dead chestnut trees that were killed by the blight. In four or five years the sprouts succumb to the disease. Seedlings may reach the height of 20 feet, yet become infected with the blight and eventually die.

Local motorists continue to chafe under the handicap they face in night driving when they encounter Massachusetts cars equipped with 32 candle power bulbs. Connecticut drivers are restricted to using bulbs of no greater than 21 candle power. Meeting the Massachusetts cars at night means a blinding experience and the creation of an additional hazard for the local driver. The only remedy is to slow down, or stop. It is likely there will be a request from Danielson drivers, through the town's representatives-elect, for a change in the motor vehicle law at the coming session of the legislature to permit of using the larger headlight bulbs in this state.

FUNERAL

J. Henry Milligan

There were relatives and many friends at the home of J. Henry Milligan on North Main street for his funeral services at 2:30 this afternoon. Rev. Harding W. Gaylord of the Westfield Congregational church was the clergyman. Bearers were Nathan D. Prince, Judge Willis Covell of Pomfret, Frank Kennedy, George B. Guild, Herbert Chase and Irving W. Davis. Burial was in Evergreen cemetery at Central Village. The arrangements were in charge of A. F. Wood.

The Men's club of the Methodist Episcopal church has arranged to stage a mock trial when they get together in their rooms at the church next Tuesday evening. The real object is to get the men together for social work, and into a spirit of helpfulness for each other. Having a mock trial involves the necessity of having someone to prosecute, this, presumably, having to do with an imaginary criminal case, so the committee has picked upon one of the prominent men of the borough to take his place in the prisoner's dock. It's just going to be a nice party, though it is forecast that the veracity of witnesses will be gone into minutely by opposing "counsel."

WEDDING

Martin—Bessette

This afternoon Miss Alice A. Bessette, organist of the Orpheum theatre here for several years, and Richard Martin, also of Danielson, were united in marriage at his office by Attorney Louis A. Woisard, acting in his capacity as a justice of the peace. The attendants were Dr. and Mrs. William C. McLaughlin.

Remember rummage sale, 108 Main street, Fri.-Sat.—adv.

The Red Cross roll call proceeded satisfactorily today, though the workers were somewhat hampered by rain during the morning hours. On Saturday youthful workers will be on duty at banks here.

Arthur A. Dean, as personal tax collector, will begin this week-end the reception of the several thousand such taxes to be paid in Killingly. Those liable to pay will have 30 days in which to do so.

No more Red Arrow money will be redeemed after Saturday, Nov. 15. Redemption is being made at Dupre's store, Center St.—adv.

It is time now for farmers and others who would rid their premises of rats to file application with the Windham County Farmers' association for the bait that will be used in the "big feed" that is being arranged for the night of Nov. 21.

Operators of public service cars here are complaining of an alleged violation of the motor vehicle laws by a light truck bearing a Massachusetts registration in which, the claim is being made, passengers are being carried between Webster and Danielson every week day.

While it has its share of it, Danielson, on all reports, is less afflicted by unemployment than most of the larger centers of eastern Connecticut.

Mr. and Mrs. Dewey Tetreault, after spending some time in Florida, have returned here, preferring the north.

Danielson motorists who are inclined to drive too speedily have noted with interest that there is a campaign on in Putnam to round up all reckless drivers. As scores of Danielson drivers go to Putnam regularly, the matter is of special interest here.

CREDITORS OF DEFUNCT BANK ARE ANTICIPATING FINAL DIVIDEND

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, Nov. 13.—"The Final Dividend," which will be the last chapter to be written into the story of the First National bank of Putnam, a defunct institution, has bobbed up again, but not the least in a definite form. For some months, Receiver George M. Coffin has been endeavoring to bring his trust to a close by the end of the present year, but affairs at the present indicate the remaining securities will be sold out within a reasonable period and the trust definitely closed.

According to reports, the treasury department is desirous of clearing up affairs of the bank, which closed its doors in 1924, during the next six months, but there is an existing possibility whereby the assets may be converted into cash and paid off to creditors in dividend form before the expiration of that period.

The liquidation of the banking house ips being supervised by the bureau of defunct banks, a division of the comptroller's office of the treasury department. There are many thousands of dollars worth of assets which must be disposed of and proceeds of sale added to the treasury of the trust before a dividend can be paid.

On the occasion of the last dividend paid, it was said that the next and final amount to be paid would perhaps be 5 per cent and possibly more. The cost of the liquidation process is being met by the trust and the sooner a settlement is made, the greater the amount of the dividend to be paid will be.

The report of Receiver Coffin, filed with the treasury department on June 30, 1929, showed cash with the comptroller at that time amounted to $33,577.14 and bills receivable then were classed as follows: Good, $217,885.69; doubtful, $110,990.44; worthless, $38,775.40. Other assets at the time this report was made were classed as follows: Good, $6,421.64; worthless, $81,756.62; additional assets, classed good, $7,949.29.

Since then Mr. Coffin has converted much of the tangible assets into cash, creating a fund the size of which inspired many to believe that a last dividend would be disbursed during the present year.

Receiver Coffin is now residing in Woonsocket, R. I., where he is in charge of another trust.

PLAINFIELD

RED CROSS CHAIRMAN URGED TO NEW EFFORT

Miss Joan M. Kirly, chairman of Plainfield chapter of the American Red Cross has received the following telegram from John Barton Payne, Washington, D. C.:

In the present roll call the Red Cross faces serious and exceptional demands, calling for the earnest devotion, courage and persistent effort of all Red Cross men and women. We must measure up to the demand and make the roll call a great success. The Red Cross has its own great responsibilities and must meet them.

Rev. David Coombs former rector of St. Paul's Episcopal church gave the sermon at the 11 a. m. service Sunday. Rev. Mr. Coombs is now living at Louisiana, Missouri. He had been registered, for the past week, at the Lawton Inn, where many friends called to see him during his stay in town.

Thomas Fentin and family who have been living at Plainfield for the past year have moved to Putnam.

Mrs. James Broadley has returned from England during the past week and is to take up her residence with her son Joseph, at 245 8th street.

At the dance given by the American Legion in Moosup, Monday evening, the prize fox trot was won by Jessie Currier of Plainfield and Henry Lockwood of Jewett City.

PUTNAM

LARGE CLASS CONFIRMED AT ST. PHILIP'S CHURCH

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, Nov. 13.—Rt. Rev. E. Campion Acheson, D.D., bishop of the Episcopal diocese of Connecticut, at a special service held at St. Philip's church on Grove street last night, administered the rite of confirmation to a class of candidates presented by Rev. E. P. Wright, rector of the church. The little church was crowded by parishioners who gathered for the impressive service. Pointing out that man must be prepared to make the passage of life, Bishop Acheson quoted the slogan of the Eastern Steamship lines, "In summer or winter, by day or night, in storm or in calm, our boats make the passage." Religion, he said, enables one to achieve this requisite of life.

Raymond Tourtellotte, of Putnam Heights, acting as bishop's chaplain, carried the crosier of Bishop Acheson. The staff which is emblematic of the church dignitary's pastoral office was made in England from an oak known to be more than 1,000 years old.

At a special communication of Quinebaug lodge, A. F. & A. M., held at the Masonic temple on Grove street, Thursday evening, a visitation was paid the lodge by M. W. G. M. Elbert L. Darbie, D. D. M. J. Frederick Ash and Rt. Wor. G. Chaplain L. E. Richards. Preceding the communication, a supper was served the officers and lodge members at the Masonic club at 6:30 o'clock.

Chauncey C. "Chan" Talbot, well-known proprietor of the Putnam News Co., and father of Representative Leon A. Talbot, is ill at his home on Mechanics street. Mr. Talbot is suffering from the effects of a slight shock which has paralyzed his right arm and right foot. Mr. Talbot has been in poor health for more than a year.

The police department for the second time this year has painted the parking lines in the business section. On Monday, a crew of workers under the direction of Sergt. A. J. Spencey began the work. The color scheme this time is a white stripe enclosing the parking area. A bright yellow border has been painted on the curb stones.

The city street department has made notable improvements on the south end of Quinebaug avenue. Low sections of the road have been graveled and packed in order to eliminate washouts by winter rains.

The Doane estate in Thompson, one of the town's most beautiful residences of yesteryear, has been sold by Mrs. Julia Doane Dresser of Church street to A. A. Vonsiatsky of Thompson. The deed of transfer was filed in the town land records at the office of C. V. Chase, town clerk, this week.

The wedding of Miss Ilva Moss, daughter of Mrs. Mary Moss of South Main street, and Stanley Crastf, of Chelsea, Mass., took place Saturday afternoon at the First Baptist church on Woodstock avenue. Rev. Henry Hodge, the pastor, officiated at the ceremony at which the double ring service was used. The couple are well known in this city. After a wedding trip they will make their home in Brighton, Mass.

Robert Allard of Pomfret street was installed in office as commander of the Albert J. Breault post, V. F. W., at exercises held at the post's quarters on Front street last Thursday evening. A complement of state officers under the direction of James J. Lee of Willimantic, department junior vice-commander, conducted the installation exercises.

Police continued their search today for the short change artist who duped Eli Peters of the Putnam restaurant for $5 Wednesday evening. The old gag of handing a $20 bill in payment of a cigar purchase and calling for its return when the salesman was unable to "break" the bill and handing a $10 one in its stead was used. Police searched the city for the slicker and advised surrounding communities to be on the alert for his appearance.

CENTRAL VILLAGE

A most exciting football game was played on the P. H. S. grounds when the local team and the team from Warwick, R. I. high school met. The score was made during the second quarter when a Warwick back intercepted a forward pass and ran 75 yards for a touchdown. The local boys, although out weighed, put up a game fight and won 13-0. The Warwick team had husky fellows, but it proved a somewhat one-sided contest.

The Boy Scouts went to Plainfield Wednesday night to meet with the Boy Scouts of that village. Their pilgrimage to the Wolf Den in Pomfret, Tuesday, was much enjoyed.

Miss Mary Egan of East Milton, Mass., has been the guest of Miss Margaret Reid. Miss Egan was last year a member of P. H. S. faculty, but is teaching in Norfolk, Mass., this year.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Edgerton have been at the home of Mrs. Edgerton's parents, Mr. and Mrs. George Greene.

Miss Margaret Reid has been a Providence visitor.

Mrs. Fred Cook has been ill for several days.

Junior Dance

The Junior class of 1932 will have their first social function of the year Friday evening, when they hold a dance at P. H. S. auditorium under the direction of the class supervisor, Miss Wentworth.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Cutler, Mr. and Mrs. L. Howard Cross, William Bradley, Charles McFarland, Mr. and Mrs. John Kendall, Aubrey Tillinghast and Leah Tillinghast were in Danielson, Armistice day.

Mrs. Cora Day and Mrs. Abby Hopkins were in Norwich for Armistice day.

John Turner is employed in Baltic.

Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Carpenter have moved from the Shinners house into one of the Farnsworth Mill company's tenements.

Auto Struck by Freight

About 8 o'clock Monday evening an auto coming from Plainfield was struck by the engine of a freight train as it was nearly over the crossing near the railroad station. Two young men and a young woman were in the car but neither was seriously injured, although the young woman, Miss Plante of Plainfield, was taken to the near-by home of Clarence Reid and Dr. Garvia of Moosup was called. It was a very narrow escape, as a second later would have probably been death to all. The gate man is off duty after 7 o'clock which is the cause of occasional accidents, where there are gates at the crossings.

Miss Ruth Mathewson was in Providence Armistice day.

WAUREGAN

The young people of the Congregational church have organized a society for service and worship with the following officers: Advisor, Miss Ethel Davis; president, Miss Helen Carpenter; secretary, Caroline Williams. Last Sunday evening the subject discussed was "War and Peace," a fine opening address being given by Richard Gardner. Warwick Mercier and Miss Marjorie Filkins were at the piano during the evening.

The South Windham Six-church conference held at Scotland Tuesday was exceptionally well attended. Rev. Paul B. Sanger of Chaplin, delivered a sermon in the morning, and Rev. Arthur H. Wheelock, Willimantic, gave an address in the afternoon. Mrs. Bernard W. Funk, of Scotland, was appointed secretary, to succeed Rev. William Williams. Can You Do Your Housework?

If you are not as well as you want to be, if you are weak, nervous or rundown, give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a fair trial. Take at least three bottles. It will tone up your whole system and help you to eat better, sleep better and feel better.

Mrs. Marie Vriesenga,
2002 Lexington Ave.,
New York, New York.

"My work is keeping a rooming house in New York. I was weak and tired and didn't seem to feel well at all. Some friends told me about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I took it four times a day. It has helped me very much. I feel better in all ways now."

Ask Your Friends

Mrs. Paulina Pascuzzi,
316 Tremont Ave.,
East Orange, New Jersey

"I never had any appetite and I could not sleep well, and I was irregular and often suffered from headaches because of my age. I read a booklet left at my door, and so I took eight bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I have also taken the Herb Medicine. I feel stronger in every way now. I have gained weight and am not nearly so nervous and can do my housework without getting too tired."

Edna Sluraff,
1129 Daly St.,
Philadelphia, Pennsylvania

"I was completely rundown from nursing. I took four bottles of your medicine with very good results. I have been a nurse for twenty years without losing a patient, I am proud to say. I will continue to recommend any of the Lydia E. Pinkham products at any time and you may use my name."

FACTS TO REMEMBER

The source of the meat supply for our markets is situated in our own modern Meat Warehouse. This warehouse is under the most rigid inspection and there is a U. S. Gov't. Inspector at our plant at all times during the processing of all meat that is shipped to our stores. This inspection necessitates cleaning all knives, benches, and any other implement that comes in contact with any of our meat products. This inspection is not compulsory but the A&P willingly stands this extra expense so that the public can be assured of the BEST QUALITY MEATS, handled under the most sanitary conditions.

The Housewife's Duty

is to her home . . .

NOT TO HER GROCER — she owes no grocer a living — she does owe herself and her family the greatest amount of the best food her money can buy. Her only duty when buying food is to her home.

The honest grocer asks no favors. He does not expect charity. He is willing to be judged by the amount of good food he gives for the consumer's dollar.

A & P is a grocer who has already been judged by many consumers. After 71 years in business, it enjoys the patronage of over 5,000,000 thrifty housewives.

So large a following of critical shoppers is the result of a single simple fact — that the public buys where it obtains the most for its money.

RALLY IN STOCK MARKET HAS BEEN CONTINUOUS FOR THREE SESSIONS

NEW YORK, Nov. 13.—(AP)—This was anniversary day in Wall street and the stock market celebrated by extending its advance. Bonds and grains also rallied.

On Nov. 13, 1929, share prices made their "panic lows" in three hours of trading. It so happens that today's highs, on the average, were considerably under those minimums of 1929; but there was some consolation for injured pocketbooks in the fact that the market had rallied in three successive sessions, an accomplishment not duplicated since the middle of August.

The net gains today ranged from 1 to 5 points, which was the extent of yesterday's move in active shares. However, the average improvement of 3.6 points was larger, increasing the week's advance to 8.4 points. The composite closing price of 90 issues was 131.8 compared with 140.2 a year ago.

Covering seemed to give the chief impetus to the continuation of the rally. Traders in utility, chemical and railroad shares showed considerable anxiety; but it was nevertheless obvious that some recent bears were taking a shot at the long side of the market in the belief that the best opportunity for quick profits lay in that direction. Realizing and spotty short selling in the last hour depressed prices from their tops. There was also a brief interval of weakness in the forenoon coincident with another attack on American Telephone and the amusement stocks. Some of the latter closed heavy.

Perhaps it was fitting that on this anniversary day the market should hear that federal reserve brokers' loans had dropped $219,000,000 to the lowest total on record. The aggregate at the close of the week ended Nov. 12, was $2,235,000,000 against the previous minimum of $2,409,000,000 on May 19, 1926. Publication of the figures began with that year.

The deflation in brokers' loans since Sept. 24 amounts to $987,000,000 and the decline has not been interrupted in that period, during which stock prices almost steadily tumbled. All three groups of loans decreased in the past week, but security borrowings from New York city member banks by non-brokers rose $19,000,000, showing that stocks had continued to pass to stronger owners.

News from the copper industry again contributed to the better speculative feeling. Buyers were bidding 10 1-4 cents for the metal, while some dealers quoted from 10 1-2 to 11 cents a pound for 1931 deliveries. Actual business, however, was on the ten cent basis established yesterday. With the curtailment plan apparently nearing completion, it is believed in trade circles that copper prices will move slowly higher until conditions have returned more closely to normal.

Further encouragement was derived from the presence in New York of representatives of several large British investment trusts, who were said to be planning important security purchases for their companies. Some of these concerns have not been interested in Wall street for nearly two years and they then came as sellers rather than as buyers. Foreign buying from various other sources has increased considerably of late.

The return of the bond market to higher levels suggested that some of the recent pessimism had been dissipated. Bonds showed their first gains of the week, with utilities and rails in the lead.

Wheat moved up 3-4 to 1 1-2 cents net on the strength of large export sales in Canada, unfavorable rains in Argentina, and farm board buying. Corn rallied slightly more, reflecting unfavorable weather in the southwest and a firm cash market.

Late liquidation turned early advance in cotton into net losses of 70 cents to $1.10 a bale.

American Telephone's early weakness, which carried it off 3 points, resembled a bear raid. The stock eventually sold as high as 189 3-8 and closed 5-8 net higher at 187 5-8. U. S. Steel rose to 145 7-8 and was up a point at the finish. There were net gains of 1 to 3 in American Can, General Electric, General Motors, Johns Manville, Montgomery Ward, Radio, National Biscuit, and Union Carbide. The coppers were strong, up 1 to 3. Two or three rails rallied as much as 4 points, while Union Pacific held more than 7 of an extreme rise of 8 3-4. North American, Consolidated Gas and Public Service of N. J., gained 3, People's Gas 11, and Western Union 7. Diamond Match soared 18. Fox Film and Loew's lost more than 2. Allied Chemical again crossed 200, rising 3 net.

A heavier foreign exchange list showed leading European rates slightly lower. French cables dipped 1-8.

BOND MARKET

NEW YORK, Nov. 13.—(AP)—Buying inspired by the better tone in the equity share market reversed the trend of bonds today. All sections of the list reflected the buoyant effect of an improvement in sentiment although the volume of business was unchanged.

It was the first session of the week in which a majority of changes in prices had been on the constructive side. After setting a new low for the year twice during the week, the average of 30 bonds advanced 3-10ths of a point.

On a reduced turnover, U. S. government obligations maintained their firm tone. Liberty 1st 4 1-4s and Treasury 3 3-8s of 1943 reached new 1930 peaks, the latter on an advance of 5-32nds, a comparatively large gain.

Demand for railroad issues broadened and while a few failed to participate in the advance, the group was much improved in price. Canadian Pacific 5s, St. Paul adjustment 5s, Denver, Rio Grande and Western 5s, Erie 5s of 1975, International Great Northern 1st 6s, several Missouri Pacific issues, Nickel Plate 4 1-2s C, Pennsylvania 4 1-2s, and St. Louis-San Francisco 4 1-2s and 4s A, were particularly strong.

Best grade utilities were firm, but there was a desultory movement among issues more directly affected by earnings. American & Foreign Power 5s advanced 5-8 and American Telephone issues and Consolidated Gas 5 1-2s were slightly higher. Postal Telegraph 5s sagged 1 point. A flurry of selling inspired by reports martial law was about to be declared in Havana, precipitated Havana Electric 5 1-2s and 5s into new lows for the year. The 5s dipped 8 points.

Most of the stock privilege issues participated in the advance. Atchison 4 1-2s advanced 2 1-4 and Allegheny 5s of 1950, American International 5 1-2s, American Telephone 4 1-2s, Philadelphia & Reading Coal and Iron 6s gained a point or more. General Theatres 6s closed at a new 1930 bottom.

Three issues were particularly prominent in foreign bond trading. German 5 1-2s rallied 1 1-2 points and closed 1-2 net higher, being joined in higher ground by many other German bonds. A strong demand developed for Sao Paulo 7s of 1940 and they rose 5-8. Bulgaria Department 7 1-2s sagged 1 3-8 on the largest turnover on the foreign section, which was firm.

Treasury Balance

WASHINGTON, Nov. 13—(AP)—Treasury receipts for November 11, $3,058,390.78; expenditures $10,627,066.09; balance $126,571,396.55.

THE CURB MARKET

NEW YORK, Nov. 13.—(AP)—The recovery was pressed further in today's curb market, despite the interruptions of occasional selling flurries. The turnover of 720,900 shares was only slightly less than yesterday's.

Electric Bond & Share sold up 2 1-2 points in a large turnover, then lost all but a point of its gain. America Gas & Electric mounted 4 points, and Insull Utility Investment as much. Niagara Hudson sold up 1 1-2 to 12, and closed at 11 1-2. United Light A sold up 3 points, and closed within a point of the top. Central States Electric and Utilities Power & Light sold up about 1. Middle West rose 1, then lost half its gain.

Copper shares continued to work higher, reflecting the determined price stand taken by producers. Newmont gained 3 points, and Noranda and Hudson Bay closed fractionally higher. Oils were irregular. Cities Service sold up a point to 20, and Standard of Nebraska and International Petroleum gained about a point. Indiana advanced 1-2. Gulf and Humble turned dull and eased fractionally. In the natural gas issues, Dixie broke 6 points to 20, but Lone Star and Natural Fuel Gas improved about 1 point each.

In the Industrials, a feature was Anglo-Chilean Nitrate, which surged up 5 3-4 points to 19 3-4. Industrials generally, however, were neglected, and a few closed substantially lower. Deere broke 5 points, and recovered only half its loss. Among issues having a thin market, Morrison Electric sold at 22 1-2, off 9 1-2.

THE FARMER'S TALK TO FARMERS

A FARMER'S CREED

Out of the clutter of newspaper and other clippings which are heaped on my deplorably disorderly desk, I rescued, the other day, the following tentative "Farmer's Creed."

It has been lying there for so long that I've utterly forgotten its source.

Really, however, it doesn't matter nearly so much who says a thing as whether the thing said is worth while and to the point.

Here it is, and I suggest that you give it a sympathetic reading:

"1. I believe in a permanent agriculture, a soil that shall grow richer rather than poorer from year to year.

"2. I believe in hundred-bushel corn and in fifty-bushel wheat, and I shall not be satisfied with anything else.

"3. I believe that the only good weed is a dead weed, and that a clean farm is as important as a clean conscience.

"4. I believe in the farm boy and in the farm girl, the farmer's best crops and the future's best hope.

"5. I believe in a country school that prepares for country life, and a country church that teaches its people to love deeply and live honorably.

"6. I believe in community spirit, in pride in home and neighbors, and I will do my part to make my own community the best in the state.

"7. I am proud to be a farmer and I will try earnestly to be worthy of the name."

If anybody feels like cutting this creed out and pasting it up on his barn or tool-house door or even over the head of his bed. I don't know of any law forbidding it.

Especially do I feel like shouting a good old Methodist "Amen" to the first and sixth paragraphs; that which calls for making the old farm better and better, year by year, and that which pledges loyal help to home, neighbors and the community.

Just think what would happen if every single farmer in your own neighborhood was sincerely, intelligently and indefatigably striving to make that community the best in the state!

This doesn't mean that he would be continually sticking his nose into his neighbors' affairs, or that he would be tiresomely preaching to them about what they ought to do or ought not to do. A community composed of that sort of self-nominated "uplifters" would speedily come near to being the worst in the state, rather than the best.

Instead, it would mean that each farmer would take pride in his own farm and equal pride in those of his neighbors. He would keep his own place tidy and clean, without throwing his waste brush and picked-up cobble-stones over his neighbors' fences. He would be as solicitous for their welfare as for his own, and take as much pride in the resulting gains as if they were all his own.

In other words, he would graft the spirit of the Golden Rule upon the routine of farm practice. Even if there were two or three hopeless Ishmaelites in the community who insisted upon seeing things crooked and doing them back-handed, they would simply serve to set off and illuminate the better farms which surrounded them.

Of course, hard-headed and coarsely practical men will pooh-pooh such a scheme as visionary, impractical, Utopian. Perhaps. Human nature is a rather sorry lot, on the farms as truly as in the cities. But the higher up the target you aim at, the higher your arrow will be apt to reach. Nobody ever shot a lark in the air by aiming at a mud-puddle in the road.

It's better to have ideals even if they're beyond your immediate reach, than to live one's life out as a mere sordid muck-raker and ditch-digger.

Muck is sometimes useful and ditches are occasionally necessary. But only as means to something better. No one regards them as desirable ends in themselves.

Even an angle-worm likes to stick its head up out of the dirt, occasionally. And most men are of a rather higher order than angle-worms. The few who are not probably don't read The Bulletin, so we are not required to consider them.

Then, too, there's that first paragraph. It pledges its votary to a creed and a practice which shall make the steady enrichment of the farm a primary object, rather than the impoverishment of the farm to enrich the farmer.

"This is an idea which works two ways at once. The farmer who deliberately sacrifices temporary gain for permanent advantage may, at the outset, be sneered at by more "practical" men, but in the end he is much more likely to be envied by them.

A very wise king once said: "There is that scattereth and yet increaseth; and there is that withholdeth more than is meet, but it tendeth to poverty."

The farmer who robs his farm may get more money this year, but he is preparing lean years for the future. It's manifestly better to start with small gains and steadily increase them, year by year, than it is to gobble everything within reach the first year and see income decreasing the second and the third and so on.

In farming as in horse-racing, it usually happens that "the more haste the less speed." It's better to scrimp a little in early days than to splurge then and be pinched, later on.

The farmer who stints fertilization and cultivation may save money by reducing expenses for a year or two. But his farm will soon begin to stint its returns and he will be likely to find himself going down hill instead of up hill. It is the farm which is constantly being improved which is most apt to give a steady increase of return.

But there is something more to farming than making money or even getting an income. There is the duty of meeting one's opportunities; of assuring one's achievements; of rendering account for one's stewardship. Factories and shops and stores are temporary devices for helping to make money, to be used as long as they do this; to be discarded as soon as they cease doing it. But a farm remains. The home may be deserted, the farm itself abandoned. Weeds may take the place of hay and brush that of cultivated crops. But the acreage is still there. It is only the opportunity which has been lost.

The mine and the factory are valuable solely for what is taken from them. The farm is valuable mainly for what is put into it. I don't mean fertilizer and tillage and seeds alone; I mean also devotion and loyalty, and industry, and foresight, and planning, and hope, and the irresistible will to win.

The man who limits himself to the making of money helps found banks and stock exchanges; the man who devotes his life to the development of a constantly improving farm helps to create a country and to nourish a nation.

There is no gain in disputing about which is the higher form of life and the worthier ambition. But it cannot be reasonably gainsaid that the man who passes his life in an intelligent and industrious effort to make his farm better every year, to leave it to his heirs worth more than it was when he took it—it cannot reasonably be gainsaid that this is one honorable ambition. It is open to every farmer in the land. Who will say that he measures up to the height of his opportunities and duties if he fails therein?

According to the completed figures of the last census, there are now 6,297,877 farms in the United States. This means a decrease of 150,466 in the last ten years, 30,363 of which decrease was in the six New England states.

Yet those six New England states every year buy from elsewhere more than ten times as many agricultural products as could have been grown on the 30,000 abandoned farms. Why?

The trite common answer is that "they can be produced cheaper elsewhere." It may be accepted as fairly certain that they are produced cheaper elsewhere. But that doesn't prove that they can't be just as cheaply produced in New England.—There is a wide difference, sometimes, between what is and what "can" be.

There may have been 30,000 separate and distinct reasons why those 30,000 farms were abandoned. Some of the reasons may have been and probably were valid and undeniable. Death doubtless caused some; old age and illness caused some; the inability to get adequate help at the very time when the city idle were howling the heavens black over their "unemployment" caused some.

And some were caused because the owners lacked grit or gumption; because they failed in foresight or industry; because they "got cold feet;" because, in plain English, they didn't measure up to their opportunities or their duties.

Many had let their farms "run down" until they had become unproductive. Whereupon they blamed the government or the markets or somebody else on the other side of the way for the results of their own neglect. "The times were out of joint," and they lacked the vision or the energy to set them right.

Leaving out of consideration the remoter areas of the northern border, the New England states constitute one huge market. They are sown thickly with cities and manufacturing villages, every one of which is a buyers' market. It seems absurdly unreasonable to suppose that those markets can be served cheaply, or more profitably by growers thousands of miles away, with big transportation costs to pay, than many of them could be by the once productive but now waste lands right at their doors.

It is more than possible, it is highly probable that they can't be served by the former methods of farm production. They don't call any more for hay and flint corn and oats and clover. But they want vegetables and meats and fruits, etc., that, if produced on New England farms, could be delivered to them certainly at less transportation cost than similar wares grown in far distant states.

Are we prepared to admit that Yankee farmers have lost the keenness of vision and the shrewdness of perception and the adaptability to changing circumstances which once characterised their race?

I'm not. Are you?

THE FARMER.

NEW YORK, Nov. 13.—(AP)—New life insurance production in October dropped 1.31 per cent below the corresponding month last year, bringing the cumulative total of new business under the 1929 figures for the first time since January, the Association of Life Insurance Presidents reports. The aggregate of all classes of new insurance for October was $914,888,000, a decrease of 1.31 per cent from $1,052,360,000 for the like month last year. The total of all classes written during the first ten months this year was $10,487,780,000, a decrease of 1.2 per cent from $10,609,887,000 for the like period of 1929.

Frederick Beers, president of the National Biscuit Co., today confirmed reports that National Biscuit is negotiating for the purchase of the business of Wheatsworth, Inc., manufacturers of biscuits and whole wheat flour. He declined, however, to express any opinion as to when a definite announcement might be expected.

The gold statement of the Federal Reserve Bank of New York, for the week ended Nov. 12, shows imports of $8,000,000 from Brazil and $105,000 chiefly from other Latin-American countries. There were no exports.

CHICAGO GRAIN MARKET

CHICAGO, Nov. 13.—(AP)—Purchasing on a big scale developed in the wheat market today, and prices went as much as 5c a bushel higher than Monday's bottom figures. Improvement of stock exchange quotations gave help to the buying side of the wheat market, and there was active closing of so-called "spread" transactions in wheat between Chicago and other markets, largely as a result of notice that government-sponsored bodies would take delivery of 10,000,000 bushels on December wheat contracts. Reports of heavy rains in Argentina, renewing fears of widespread damage from rust tended also to lift wheat values here.

Closing quotations on wheat were unsettled, 3-8a1 3-4c a bushel higher than yesterday's finish. Corn closed at 1 1-4a1 7-8c advance, oats 1-4a7-8 up, and provisions unchanged to 15c down.

COTTON

NEW YORK, Nov. 13.—(AP)—Futures closed easy, 14 to 22 points lower; spot quiet; middling 11.00.

MONEY

NEW YORK, Nov. 13.—(AP)—Call money steady, 2 per cent all day. Time loans easy, 60 days, 2a2 1-4; 3-4 months, 2a2 1-2; 5-6 months, 2 3-4 per cent. Prime commercial paper, 3 3-4a3. Bankers' acceptances, unchanged.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Broadway Theatre

Acclaimed as one of the most imposing, dramatic and entertaining pictures ever produced by Pathe, "Her Man," a colorful story of the Havana underworld, comes to the Warner Bros., Broadway theatre Saturday for an engagement of four days.

Directed by Tay Garnett, "Her Man" deals with the regeneration of a girl from "the wrong side of the island" and in the course of this reformation there is presented a series of episodes that are said to be the most thrilling that have been pictured since the sound era was inaugurated. Helen Twelvetrees plays Frankie and Ricardo Cortez essays the character of Johnnie. The production serves to introduce to the motion picture public the stage star, Marjorie Rambeau. Phillips Holmes, whose performance in "Devil's Holiday" was hailed as one of the best of the season, plays the roving sailor lad who rescues Frankie from degradation.

One of the much talked of features of "Her Man" is the climax which is reached in a sensational underworld battle, said to exceed in action and thrills even the famous fight of "The Spoilers." The story of "Her Man" was written by Mr. Garnett and Howard Higgin. The dialogue and adaptation was the work of Tom Buckingham.

Following the business meeting a fine oyster supper was served under direction of George Downes. During the supper entertainment was furnished by Leach's orchestra, and a special program was presented by Frank O'Rouke, of New Haven. Mr. O'Rouke is frequently heard over station WJAR. Alexander Dorrity, Plainfield, rendered several solos. Messrs. Smith, Avery, Farrell, Harrower and Doyle were the speakers of the evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Addison Tracy, Mrs. Gertrude Tracy and Harry Tracy of Providence were guests of Dr. Erwin Tracy, in New Haven, Sunday.

Sympathy of all in the village is being extended to Arthur Milligan, in the death of his father, J. H. Milligan, of Danielson.

The court was disgusted by the failure of the jury to reach a decision after many hours of arguing. "I am deeply disappointed and I discharge you without thanks," he said.

"You can't discharge me," fired back one of the jurymen. "I was hired by that man there," and he pointed to the attorney for the defense.—The Pathfinder.

YOUNG CROOK ATTEMPTS THREE NIGHT ROBBERIES AT NEW LONDON

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Nov. 13—A youthful crook attempted three robberies this evening, displaying a lack of fearlessness of detection. He was successful in entering two stores, but did not obtain plunder. A third attempt was made and but for the fact that the proprietor of the store was in the building, plunder might have been obtained there. The crook, who is about 21, went to the rear of the stores of Harrigan Bros. butchers, 200 Bank street, and Louis Goldberg, tailor, 206. A ladder, evidently stolen from city property, for the letters "N. L. W. W." New London Water Works, were burned into the wood, was placed against the buildings. When the thief saw Goldberg in the store, he wisely gave his attention to the store of Harrigan brothers. He opened a window, made possible by the glass being broken, and entered. A search for loot did not reward the crook and he left by means of the cellar entrance. He was heard by occupants residing over the store, who opened a window in time to see the youth flee and disappear in the darkness. The police were notified and Detective Sergeant Nelson Smith investigated, finding that the grain store of Bartholomew McCarthy, 194 Bank street, had also been entered, but nothing was taken. Two hours later Sergeant Patrick Murphy observed a youth lurking between automobiles on city property south of the customs house but when the fellow realized that he was watched, he fled to the New Haven railroad tracks and disappeared. The youth answered the description of the crook seen fleeing from the stores.

JEWETT CITY DRIVER APPEALS FROM $25 FINE

Melvin Barr, of Jewett City, was in the North Stonington town court yesterday, charged with reckless driving and was fined $25 and costs. Barr filed notice of an appeal and furnished a surety on his bond to insure his presence at the next term of the court of common pleas.

Barr was driving his automobile in North Stonington about three weeks ago and it hit a horse owned by George C. Brown. The animal sustained such injuries that it was shot to end its suffering. Brown attempted to obtain compensation from Barr for the loss of the horse and when he failed to do so, he made complaint to the North Stonington authorities, with the result that a warrant for the driver's arrest was issued. Barr was arrested several days ago by state police.

THE SCHOOL BOARD HEARS REPORT BY DR. GANEY

The board of school visitors held a meeting of two hours duration this afternoon with all the members in attendance. Dr. Ganey reported the condition of toilets in one school as horrible and told of the result of continuing them in that condition. He moved that the condition be remedied and the board adopted his idea with unanimity. The doctor was not sparing in his condemnation of conditions as he found them.

The question was debated whether a child, whose parents had moved from the city and left the child in the care of a relative, should be charged tuition. It was decided that no charge should be made. That opinion came from the director of law of the city and from the state board of education.

The board decided to abandon the Miller building on Bank street as an opportunity school and to move the pupils to the Jennings school, pupils crowded out there to go to the other schools for their education. The city has had the Miller building under lease and that contract will now be given up by the city. Jane H. Hickey resigned as a teacher in the public schools and her resignation was accepted. Rules for the government of the schools were discussed and then laid aside for decision at a later meeting. It was voted to allow leave of absence of five days on account of illness to all teachers who have served the city five years; for teachers who have served ten years, ten days' leave will be allowed, and absence of fifteen days will be allowed for service of fifteen years or more.

There was a large attendance at the meeting of Union lodge, F. and A. M., in the lodge rooms, Union street this evening, when Past Master's night was observed.

The officers of the Sons of Veterans were installed at the regular meeting of the order, held tonight in the Bacon block, State street.

Morris Koss, of East Lyme, was arrested yesterday by State Police Officer John Smith, charged with reckless driving, upon complaint of Ruby Parker, also of East Lyme. The driver will be given a hearing in the East Lyme justice court Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock.

Asa Chappell, formerly of New London, now residing in Springfield, Mass., is spending a few days in this city renewing acquaintances.

BURIAL IN NORWICH OF CHARLES B. HOTCHKISS

The funeral of Charles B. Hotchkiss was held this afternoon at 2 o'clock at his residence, 86 Lewis street, and was attended by many mourners. The services were conducted by Rev. J. Romeyn Danforth, pastor of the First Church of Christ. The bearers were John, Warren and Edward Hotchkiss, Edward Foley, Ernest Plummer and Thomas Maher. Burial was in Maplewood cemetery, Norwich.

BULLET EXTRACTED FROM LEG OF MOOSUP BOY

Edward Swiner, 15, of Moosup, was shot by a stray bullet, presumably from the gun of a hunter, yesterday afternoon and the boy is now a patient at Lawrence Memorial hospital, where his condition is said to be most favorable. The boy was walking about the yard of his home when he was struck by the bullet, which entered his left leg. The youth was given medical treatment at home and then was brought to the New London hospital. This morning the bullet was extracted.

Stepped Into Elevator Shaft

Elias Morse, of 30 Colman street, employed by the Hendel Furniture company, Bank street, was painfully injured late yesterday afternoon when he fell through an elevator shaft at his place of employment. He suffered injuries to his back and chest and is a patient at Lawrence Memorial hospital. Morse was working on the second floor when he unconsciously stepped into the opening and dropped a distance of about 10 feet.

H. J. Messick, submarine base, was in court yesterday, being charged with reckless driving. The complaint was amended to that of speeding, to which Messick pleaded guilty and was fined $10 and costs. Messick was arrested by State Police Officer Donald Brown.

Funeral Of Infant Daughter

Helen Louise Dyer, aged 19 days, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward S. Dyer, died last night at Lawrence Memorial hospital. The funeral was held this afternoon at 2 o'clock at 15 Masonic street, the services being conducted by Rev. George R. Atha, pastor of Groton Heights Baptist church. Burial was in Cedar Grove cemetery.

Michael Ladas, proprietor of a lodging house, 81 Bank street, made complaint to the police at 1 o'clock this morning that one of his rooms had been entered by a thief and a pair of field glasses stolen. The room was entered by means of an open rear window, the glasses being all the loot taken.

But one case was tried in the police court this morning, something unusual. Henry Foster, 36, colored, a laborer residing at 25 Douglass street, was charged with vagrancy. The case was continued to Saturday next. Foster was arrested last night by Patrolmen Braxton Hill and Clarence Wells.

OFFER $3,000 REWARD FOR RECOVERY OF BODY

Following the recovery of the fishing sloop owned by Anthony Jacobson, Fishers Island lobster man, who was drowned at the North Hill fishing grounds Saturday, residents of Fishers Island have offered a reward of $3,000 for the recovery of the body. The sloop was floated yesterday by Fishers Island men, who had trawled for the boat ever since it went down, but no trace of Jacobson's body was found. Because of the body not being found in the boat the reward was offered.

Caroline Perette, 47 Summer street, a patient at Home Memorial hospital, was discharged today.

The two-family residence at 12 Buell street, Groton, owned by the R. S. Davidson Marine Co., and occupied by Edward Dale and Murle Henderson and their families, was badly damaged by fire of an unknown origin last night. It was an hour after the firemen combatted the flames that they were subdued and then not until the entire upper part of the structure had been destroyed. The fire when discovered was burning rapidly and was in the attic and roof. An alarm was sent in from Box 13, which was responded to by Pioneer Hose company. When the firemen arrived the upper part of the building was a mass of flames and it was only after volumes of water had been turned into the house that the fire was quelled. Early this morning the fire broke out anew and another alarm was sent in, but this time the firemen quickly extinguished the flames. It is estimated that the damage will exceed $3,000.

BROTHER OF CHAS. REILLY OFFERS REWARD THURSDAY

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Nov. 13.—Three days having passed since Charles Reilly, 11 Perry street, disappeared from his home, after the threat to commit suicide, all hope of the assistant engineer of the steam yacht Narada being found alive has been abandoned. A search is still in progress in an effort to find the man's body. Reilly's brother, Thomas Reilly, chief engineer of the yacht, today offered a reward for any information that would lead to the finding of the body, dead or alive. Since the disappearance of Reilly, Mrs. Reilly and her youngest son, a youth of about 14, have gone to reside with a relative. The search for the body of Reilly started Tuesday noon and continued throughout the remainder of the day, all day yesterday and again today. The scouring of the woodland for miles around will be resumed tomorrow and will be continued several days. Although Reilly, when he left home shortly before noon Tuesday, carried a rope, which would indicate that he intended to end his life by hanging, there is a possibility that the man may have drowned himself. The woods in the vicinity of Ocean avenue were thoroughly searched Tuesday and Wednesday, without the score or more New London and state police and members of the crew of the Narada and U. S. coast guard obtaining any clue to the missing man. Today the search was extended further to the westward, in the woods that border the tracks of the railroad. Reilly's despondency, which caused him to threaten to destroy himself, is undoubtedly the result of his eldest son, William R. Reilly, having been arrested recently at New Haven on a charge of theft of $3,500 worth of effects of students at Yale. The father brooded over the act of his son and on the day that the youth was to have been tried in the New Haven city court Reilly disappeared. The case Tuesday was continued, but it is believed it will be disposed of when called next week.

That Reilly has actually committed suicide is doubted by many, but the longer that Reilly's whereabouts are not known or his body found, gives every indication that the missing engineer has done away with himself. However, this evening, Mrs. Herbert H. Lenad, Station 14 1-2, Waterford, reported to the police that she was making the report for a neighbor, Charles Morgan, that the latter, in making a trip to Niantic about 7:30 o'clock last evening, had observed a man near the Niantic river bridge who answered the description of Reilly. The man was apparently loitering there and did not heed passersby sufficiently to raise his eyes. When Morgan was on his way back home sometime later the same man was near the bridge. Morgan, who did not know that Reilly was missing, said that the man wore overalls and jumper, also a cap similar to that worn by engineers, black crown with patent leather visor. Morgan's description as to size tallied closely with that of Reilly. The report was turned over to the state police. Officers patrolling the highways, particularly the Boston Post road and the officers stationed at the Westbrook barracks, have been instructed to maintain a lookout for Reilly.

NORWICH DEBATERS EACH GET DECISION

An assemblage of over 200, Wednesday evening, attended the November meeting of Lisbon Community club, when there was a debate between Judge John H. Barnes, of Norwich, and Attorney Charles V. James, the question being Old Age Pension Claims. The undivided attention accorded the speakers was evidence of the interest of the debate. The judges, Rev. J. W. Reynolds, Frank Mell and Richard Krauss, in rendering their decision found that several ballots were necessary, it finally being agreed that Mr. James for the negative had scored the more points, while Judge Barnes for the affirmative had delivered the finer speech. The number given by Prof. J. Herbert Rich, violinist, of Norwich, and one of his Lisbon pupils, Charles Helmboldt, demonstrated the skill of the teacher and the ability of his young pupil. A dance, on one of the most beautiful floors to be found anywhere in the state, was an important part of the program. A Greeneville orchestra furnished delightful music. The lunch of sandwiches, coffee, sweet russet cider, right from the press, was the donation of the president, Harry L. Hull. ANNOUNCEMENTS

Palace Theatre

The picture that gangdom dared Hollywood to film, the Doorway to Hell, the only picture in the history of the industry to be held for three weeks at the New York Strand, the most vivid inside story yet to be revealed of the doings of the people who live by their wits and nerves, will start at the Palace theatre for four days tomorrow and run through Tuesday.

This melodramatic story of modern crime that has grown to such gigantic proportions since the advent of prohibition paints a realistic picture of the lives of those who live outside the law. An all-star cast enacts the leading roles in "The Doorway to Hell," written by Rowland Brown.

Lewis Ayars, star of Common Clay and All Quiet on the Western Front, portrays a reckless gang leader, young, handsome, and courageous, who by force rises to become a powerful figure of the underworld—a racketeer of the first magnitude, only to meet the vengeance of the gang. Dorothy Mathews plays the feminine lead as a daughter of gangland who marries a mob leader for ulterior motives. Charles Judels, Leon Janney, Robert Elliott, James Cagney, Kenneth Thomson, Jerry Mandy and Noel Madison complete the cast. Archie Mayo directed "The Doorway to Hell."

"Scene from "The Doorway To Hell" A Warner Bros. Production.

DRIVE TO STOP $60,000 DAMAGE BY RATS IN COUNTY IN YEAR

"If everyone harboring rats in New London county will cooperate in the campaign on November 25th," said County Agent Walter T. Clark Thursday evening, "the untold damage by rats will soon end." According to the U. S. biological survey estimates, there are at least three or four times as many rats as people on farms, so that means an annual loss in New London county of at least $60,000, since rats destroy at least $2 worth of food and property each year. Rats feed on all kinds of animal and vegetable matter. They attack crops while growing, during the harvest, in storage, and during transit, and in the mill, and in the store, and in the home. They pollute ten times as much as they eat. It is estimated that in the U. S. rats damage corn in storage alone to the extent of $7,000,000 a year.

Perhaps the most common complaint of the farm against rats is that resulting from the loss to chickens and eggs, this type of destruction being more conspicuous than the slow steady drain on grain supplies. It is quite common to have 75 to 100 chickens taken in one night by rats. There is one record of over 400 chickens thus destroyed.

The rat is the most destructive mammalian pest known to man. They have no place in New London county. On many a farm, if the grain eaten and wasted could be sold, the profits would more than pay all the farmers' taxes. Rats have no useful place in the present state of civilization.

To get rid of these pests, the New London county farm bureau in cooperation with the U. S. biological survey will put on the biggest drive against rats ever staged in the county. Remember the date of November 25 ofr that is the day people can go to their town distributors and get their bait.

The list of town committeemen where order cards may be obtained and who are to distribute the bait is as follows:

Bozrah—H. E. Beard & Son, Leffingwell, Frank Lathrop, Yantic. Colchester—A. W. Canney, Westchester town clerk's office. E. Lyme—Arthur Beebe, state farm. Franklin—Milton Beckwith, grain store. She is the widow of Fitch L. Allen and since her husband's death has spent much of her time with her son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. William MacLane, in California. Until 13 years ago Mrs. Allen and other members of her family were esteemed residents of Town street. She visited in Norwich the last time about five years ago. While here this time Mrs. Allen will visit relatives and friends, although she will be located chiefly at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Williams.

From Norwich Town, those attending the Six Church conference at Plainfield, Wednesday, included Mrs. William H. Whiteman, Mrs. Andrew Gardner, Mrs. Allen Kinney, Mr. and Mrs. George Geer and Mrs. Josephine Parker and guests, Mrs. Herman D. Gager, Mrs. Frederick Race and Otto Miller, also Dr. and Mrs. Charles H. Lamb. Rev. William C. Prentiss, the retiring pastor of the Plainfield church had many sincere expressions of regret bestowed upon him by the clergy and other members of the conference that he is retiring from the Six-Church conference, having accepted a pastorate at Brookfield, Mass. Rev. Mr. Prentiss has been located at the Plainfield church about nine years and his kind deeds and thoughtfulness for others in illness or distress, regardless of creed or nationality, was spoken of in commendatory words by several of his brother clergymen before this conference Wednesday.

Piles Go Quick

Without Salves or Cutting

Thousands of Pile sufferers have learned that quick and permanent relief can only be accomplished with an internal medicine. Neither salves or cutting can remove the cause.

Bad circulation of the blood in the lower bowel causes piles. The veins are flabby, the bowel walls weak—the parts almost dead. To end Piles an internal medicine must be used to stimulate the circulation and strengthen the affected parts.

Dr. J. S. Leonhardt was the first to discover a real internal Pile remedy. He called his prescription HEM-ROID, and prescribed it for 1000 patients with the marvelous record of success in 960 cases, and then decided every Pile sufferer should be able to get HEM-ROID from their own druggist with a rigid money-back guarantee.

Dr. Leonhardt's prescription has a wonderful record of success right in this city and Lee and Osgood invites every Pile sufferer to try HEM-ROID and gaurantees to refund the purchase price if it does not end all Pile misery.

ARRANGING THANKSGIVING DINNER FOR NEWSBOYS

A report of progress was made by the committee in charge of the arrangements for the newsboys' Thanksgiving dinner at the weekly meeting of the Norwich Lions' club Thursday noon at the Wauregan hotel. The dinner is to be served by the club to the boys on Tuesday, November 25th.

The speaker was Melvin Werth, manager of the Wauregan hotel, who addressed the gathering on the telephone system and service in general at the hotel. There was considerable favorable comment by the members on the success of the Armistice day celebration. It was the consensus that the observance was one of the best ever held in the city. Vice President Jean Kieffer presided at the meeting in the absence of the president, Louis M. Crandall. Dr. Kopland K. Markoff was the song leader and Fred Geer presided at the piano.

MOTOR DRIVERS' EXAMINATIONS DETECT EYESIGHT DEFECTS

Recent examinations given to applicants for motor vehicle operators' licenses in Connecticut show that about 15 per cent of all those applying wear or need eye-glasses, according to records of the state motor vehicle department. Only about 52 per cent of all appear to have perfect eyesight. About 1 per cent are refused licenses because of poor vision. Eight per cent are given restricted licenses, which permit them to drive only when wearing spectacles. Many applicants have been made aware of minor defects of vision. In a majority of cases these defects are corrected by the use of eye-glasses or some other means, and after re-examination the applicant is licensed to drive.

27TH ANNUAL SMOKER BY NORWICH MEN IN N. Y.

The 27th annual smoker of the Norwich Society of New York was held Monday evening at the New York Athletic club, through the courtesy of President Howard C. Russ. The following members, numbering nearly 50, were present:

Arthur Norton, Charles F. Noyes, Frank Lester, Alfred L. Aiken, Edward H. Miller, James H. Albertson, Marco S. Parker, Edward J. Crawford, William F. Converse, Joseph E. Shea, William P. Crawford, F. Stowell Gilbert, Dr. Louis Lahn, Samuel Sternfield, Earl B. Conant, Louis R. Dressler, Wallace Falvey, William T. McNamara, Ernest L. Baldwin, Louis M. Crandall, J. W. Farrell, Howard C. Russ, Francis P. Bent, Herman Alofsin, William B. Klein, Royal B. Klein, L. F. Klein, Louis M. Alofsin, Vine H. Smith, Joseph D. Herr, H. R. Raphael, Charles A. Beach, John R. Powelson, Arthur Coote (and son), Peter D. Burns, T. K. James, Harry T. Hamilton, Kenneth M. Muir, Horace Tracy, Charles A. Terry, Dr. James A. Somers, Max Foley, O. Chester Johnson, Byron Carl Wilcox, Albert C. Norman, John C. Brooks.

President Russ presided over the dinner, this being his first opportunity of officiating since his election last spring.

The president referred to letters which had been received from former President J. Olin Howe and Vice President Charles A. Hurlburt, regretting their inability to attend the smoker because of absence from the city.

Each member and guest found as a pleasant surprise, donated by ex-President William B. Klein, a Fleischman yeast cake, the product of Standard Brands, with which institution Mr Klein has for many years been associated.

Alfred L. Aiken was introduced as the first speaker, a gradute of the Norwich Free Academy and of Yale, and as one of the foremost insurance men of the country. Mr. Aiken, in the capacity of vice president of the New York Life Insurance company, was primarily responsible for the construction of the magnificent new home office of his company built on the site of the old Madison Square Garden, which is acknowledged to be the finest insurance building in the world, and one of the most beautiful structures in the metropolis.

Mr. Aiken held the undivided interest of the members while he related instance after instance, replete with detail which was almost uncanny, of attempts which have been made by various individuals to defraud his company. The machinations of those who perpetrated these frauds were infinite, and as evolved by Mr. Aiken sounded more like excerpts from one of Van Dine's detective stories than actual records of fraud which the insurance company has had occasion to run down in its usual routine of business. One point stood out very clearly from the speaker's remarks, and that was that when the company suspects fraud, no stone is left unturned to unearth it, even if the company pays the claim in full and years must elapse before the culprit is brought to justice.

The second speaker of the evening was Francis P. Bent, one of the founders of the Norwich Society of New York, for several years an alderman of the city of New York, and the manager of ex-Mayor Hylan's campaign. From his experience as an examiner of real estate for the board of transportation, Mr. Bent showed himself possessed of a vast amount of information concerning "subways," which was the subject of his address. An interesting illustration of the cost of the rolling stock on the subways was drawn by the statement that when you stand on a platform and see four ten-car trains go by, you see $1,000,000 worth of equipment flash in front of you. There is one unit of the present system where 60 trains an hour pass a given point during the peak hour. Mr. Brent also stressed the fact that payment for a large percentage of the new subways being built by the city is being made from the sale of five-year notes. Heretofore, the custom was to issue long term bonds for these improvements, resulting in the city expending a tremendous sum of money for interest charges running over a long term of years. The speaker suggested that we be not alarmed about the honesty of the city officials, by and large, regardless of the scandals of which we hear and read just before elections. He stated that New York was more Simon-pure than either Chicago or Philadelphia.

Charles A. Terry, a former president of the society, was called on for a few remarks and he told the members that he had been interested in running down the origin of after-dinner speaking. He had found that the first relic of such an art can be traced to Adam, who is reputed to have said: "The woman thou gavest me tempted me and I did eat." Mr. Terry paid a warm tribute to Dr. Hutchinson, who was the principal of the Academy back in the '70s.

To show that fraud is likely to creep into most any line of business, and that one should keep on constant guard against it, Charles F. Noyes told of an instance which recently came to his attention. A man presumably e property owner in Brooklyn, secured a mortgage of $40,000 on a piece of improved property belonging to another, leaving the concern which loaned him the money—without an adequate investigation—holding the bag.

Louis M. Crandall, president of the Lions club, of Norwich, spoke briefly, bringing a message from the old home town. Mr. Crandall's feeling was that one of the destinies of Norwich was to develop the minds and brains of her sons so that they might go out into the world and hit the high spots, so to speak, no matter what line of endeavor they choose.

Brief remarks were made by Wallace Falvey and Edward J. Crwford.

APPLICATION GRANTED FOR OUTDOOR GOLF PERMIT

Decision has been announced by the joint zoning board for the city and town of Norwich granting the application of Anna K. Connelli for a permit to construct a miniature golf course on her property abutting 198 West Thames street. There was no opposition when the board held a hearing on the application on Wednesday.

The applicant is to put in an outdoor miniature golf course, which will be the first outdoor course of that kind in Norwich, and a sthe district kind in Norwich, and as the district obliged, to take an appeal before the board in order to get the permit.

Mr. Belcher, it is anticipated, will speak upon a topic of particular interest and enthusiasm and besides him there will be two other speakers, one upon industry and the other upon a topic of interest to everyone.

HOPE FOR CONTINUATION OF LOW TAX RATES LESSENS

With Prospects of a Slight Treasury Deficit, Chairman Snoot of the Senate Finance Committee Announces Opposition to a Renewal of the Emergency Income Tax Reduction—President Hoover Sees No Occasion For Alarm in the Prospective Deficit Facing the Government For the Fiscal Year

WASHINGTON, Nov. 14.— (AP) — Hopes for continuation of the lower income tax rates for another year lessened today as President Hoover noted a prospective slight treasury deficit and Chairman Smoot of the senate finance committee announced opposition to a renewal of the emergency reduction.

The president saw no alarm in the prospective deficit facing the government at the close of this fiscal year and he did not close the door against another tax cut but his gloom over the financial outlook coupled with the attitude of Senator Smoot was regarded at the capital as significant.

Unless congress takes affirmative action at the short session next month to continue the reduced tax rates put into effect a year ago as an emergency measure, the permanent and higher scale of rates enacted two years ago goes back into effect for income taxes to be paid next year.

What course congress pursues to the tax schedules is dependent entirely on the recommendation of the administration. Last summer after treasury experts had predicted small chance for a continuation of the lower tax rates, President Hoover and Secretary Mellon both expressed confidence that the emergency rates could be continued another year.

The president said:

"We have deferred giving any final consideration to the estimates that we will need to put up to congress until the last moment because we want the maximum experience with income. We have not as yet received the figures as to the amount we will ask congress for for the expedition of public works.

"There are other matters, some of which may overrun our income by a comparatively small percentage and as we have had surpluses over many years, we probably can stand a small deficit over one year without disarranging the stability of the government."

Senator Smoot, who speaks with authority on fiscal affairs, asserted:

"We cannot have a continuation of the emergency tax reduction without having a deficit. The American people will not stand for the government raising additional money to meet its expenses while we continue the lower tax rates. I am opposed to a continuation of the lower schedules in view of conditions."

WORRY CAUSE OF SUICIDE OF REGINALD P. TRACY

MERIDEN, Nov. 14.—(AP)—Worried by the low prices being offered for the stock of his company, Reginald P. Tracy, president and general manager of Manning-Bowman & Co., electrical appliance manufacturers, and former Olympia star, today shot himself.

His body was found in a playhouse in the rear of his large home here shortly after noon. He left a note explaining his act, but members of the family refused to make its contents public.

He is reported to have been worried over the decline of the assets of his company during the current depression. This concern, bought by Tracy and associates in 1926, reorganized and reincorporated, had prospered from the first, with no-par value stock selling, during the day's of the company's growth, at around $18. It declined, first, to $12. Several weeks ago, a block of 1,000 shares is reported to have crossed the New York curb market at $3, while generally current sales have placed the stock at $5 per share.

His associates reported that Tracy had shown considerable worry since the report of the curb sales.

In 1906, Tracy, a student and track star of Cornell university, was an entrant in track events at the Olympic games. He was born in New York state about 45 years ago, and, on leaving Cornell, entered the employ of the Western Electric Co. in Boston. He came here about 12 years ago and has been active in civic and social life.

He leaves a widow and three children.

SEEKING COMPROMISE ON MUSCLE SHOALS MEASURE

WASHINGTON, Nov. 14.— (AP) — Differences between President Hoover and some of his republican leaders in the senate over the Norris measure for government operation of the Muscle Shoals, Ala., power and nitrate plant remained to be settled tonight before the threat of an extra session of congress next spring is dissipated.

Senator McNary, of Oregon, the assistant republican leader, is standing firm for the government operation bill which is in conflict with the house measure for private operation. McNary is chairman of the conferees on this legislation.

A compromise between the senate and house is being sought. Senator Norris, republican, Nebraska, author of the senate's government operation measure, already has offered a compromise whereby the power plant at Muscle Shoals would be under government operation and control and the nitrate plant available to private lease. The house conferees so far have refused this.

PREMIER HAMAGUCHI OF JAPAN HAS GOOD CHANCE FOR LIFE

TOKYO, Nov. 14.—(AP)—Critically wounded early today by a supposedly demented or misguided patriot, Premier Hamaguchi tonight was thought to have a good chance for life if blood poisoning did not develop.

Physicians said a few hours would determine whether peritonitis would result from a bullet which pierced the abdomen and remained in the left thigh. Stoically bearing the pain of removal by surgeons of a small portion of pierced intestine, the premier, who is 60 and bears the nation's fond title of "warrior for peace," made light of his injury and inquired solicitously concerning the welfare of a sick friend.

During the day the premier received three blood transfusions.

WINTER WEATHER WEST OF ROCKY MOUNTAINS

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 14.—(AP)—To the cadence of falling snowflakes in many sections, winter came tripping to the west today to whisk away the last vestige of Indian summer and replace it with varied temperatures that spell winter for coast or mountain state alike.

From Denver to the Pacific coast and from Canada to Mexico, particularly in the highlands, snow fell, and in the lowlands along the coast there was frost or rain.

GOV. ROOSEVELT ADDRESSES NAT'L GRANGE CONVENTION

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Nov. 14—(AP)—Extension of good roads, reduction of the spread between what the farmer gets for his product and what it brings in the market and further work for revision of the code looking toward modern town and county government, were pledged today by Governor Franklin D. Roosevelt in an address before the 64th annual convention of the National Grange. Twenty thousand delegates were in the city today.

At the close of his address, Roosevelt was inducted into the seventh or highest degree of the grange in a special ceremony. Nearly 15,000 men and women were given the degree tonight in colorful rites marking the high light of the conclave.

State aid has benefited the New York farmer in increasing his purchasing power and decreasing overhead $24,000,000 by legislation reducing taxes, school aid and the state paying 35 per cent of the cost of building bridges, Roosevelt said. He made no reference to national issues

SHIPS RUSHING TO AID OF SINKING GREEK STEAMER

MAGALLANES, Chile, Nov. 14.—(AP)—Three ships were rushing through storm-tossed seas tonight to aid the sinking Greek steamer Verrocarras, which went on the rocks yesterday at Cape Upright in Bay El Defonso.

Radio messages from the stricken vessel said all members of the crew were alive but were in urgent need of assistance, with great waves breaking over the ship and making the launching of lifeboats impossible.

The steamer Araucano, 170 miles away, and the Chiloe are steaming for the Yerrocarras, the name of which is also given as Gerrocarras.

All parts of the Straits of Magellan were in the grip of a fierce gale today.

EIGHT BODIES RECOVERED FROM LYONS AVALANCHE

LYONS, France, Nov. 14.—(AP)—The bodies of two women, crushed beyond recognition, were lifted today from the ruins of one of the 12 houses destroyed yesterday by a landslide along the slopes of the Fourviere hill. It brought the number of bodies recovered to eight, but as the work of excavation among the debris proceeded, it appeared that the number of dead might exceed optimistic estimates.

Digging in the ruins must go on for several days longer, for it is probable that nearly 100 bodies are still buried.

ROBBER GETS DIAMONDS TO THE VALUE OF $200,000

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 14.—(AP)—A robber held up the M. Reingold Co., wholesale jewelers, in the financial district today and escaped with unset diamonds believed to total $200,000 in value.

The robber walked into the office of the president, M. Reingold, knocked him unconscious and gagged and bound him with adhesive tape.

Reingold's secretary said she heard no noise, and had been unaware of the robbery.

Series Of Labor Riots In Center Of Madrid

Four Men Were Killed, a Dozen Seriously Wounded and 50 Others Injured—Rioters Were Routed

MADRID, Nov. 14.— (AP) —With a suddenness which left the city aghast, a series of labor riots exploded in the center of the business section today and within half an hour four men had been killed, a dozen seriously wounded and 50 others injured.

Thousands of workmen poured into the streets, augmenting a crowd which had gathered for funeral services for four workers who perished yesterday in a building collapse. The demonstration began as a protest against the erection of flimsy buildings which endangered the lives of workmen, but it developed quickly into a vicious battle.

Mounted police charged the crowd as the cry "Viva Revolucion", was raised, and as the rioters flung stones at the officers; sabers were swung freely. Merchants hastened to raise iron shutters and lock their doors as the mob stoned shops and offices.

Then, as quickly as it had begun, the fight was over and the rioters were routed.

The trouble came just as the city had settled into contemplation of more peaceful days to come, following the king's endorsement, two days ago, of plans for the first parliamentary elections Spain has had in sevin years.

When the excitement had subsided the funeral services which had preceded the riot were continued and there was no further disturbance at the cemetery, where police guard had been established.

Tonight, however, strong patrols were in the streets although the authorities did not expect a recurrence of the disorders.

W. C. T. U. WILL FIGHT REPEAL OF NATIONAL PROHIBITION

HOUSTON, Tex., Nov. 14.—(AP) — The Women's Christian Temperance union will stand firm against all attempts at repeal of national prohibition and hopes through education to obtain "willing obedience and orderly enforcement," Mrs. Ella A. Bool,e president, said in addressing the 56th annual convention of the organization tonight.

The W. C. T. U. leader asserted the American people would never support a repeal program.

Plans for a rally by dry organizations in Washington coincident with the convening of congress Dec. 1 to "show the dry members of congress that there is a lot of dry strength and to hearten them" were discussed today by the executive committee prior to the first general convention session.

Greetings to the W. C. T. U. members were received from President Hoover. In a telegram to Mrs. Boole he expressed his "profound sense of the value of their work both in behalf of higher ideals of life and public service and aid of law enforcement."

CHILE HAS NO WORRIES, POLITICAL OR ECONOMIC

SANTIAGO, Chile, Nov. 14. — (AP)— President Ibanez, in an interview, pictures Chile as a unified nation with no major worries of a political or economic nature.

"In spite of the world-wide business depression, which has affected a number of American countries," he said, "Chile has continued her normal course and her prosperity is growing."

This, he said, was because his government had taken proper, though strict, means to avoid the effects of the depression. He pointed out that the government was planning a large cut in the cost of running the governmental departments next year, making possible a considerable reduction in the budget.

POLICE GUARDING RUSSIAN DELEGATION AT GENEVA

GENEVA, Nov. 14.—(AP)—Police supervision over the Russian delegation to the preparatory disarmament conference was reinforced today as a result of an anonymous letter, received by the delegation, warning them of an alleged assassination plot.

The writer of the letter, which was in Russian, claimed to have overheard a conversation in a cafe on the subject. He did not describe the persons concerned or give any details which could assist the police.

The police were inclined to regard the letter as the work of a practical joker and the Russians themselves professed to attach no importance to it, but the Swiss police have always adopted special precautions for guarding the soviet delegations in this country since the assassination in 1923 of Vaslav Vorovsky, who was attending the Lausanne conference then in session.

Soldiers Patrolling Streets Of Havana

Challenging All Suspicious Persons and Breaking Up Any [illegible]pts At Gatherin[illegible]

[illegible] Nov. 14.— (AP) —Cuba [illegible]etly its second day of martial law decreed yesterday by President [illegible]achado after three days of rioting [illegible]he streets, challenging all suspi[illegible]ith heavily armed soldiers patrol[illegible]g the streets, challenging all suspicious persons and breaking up any attempts at gatherings, the streets of the Cuban metropolis lost their deserted appearance and business was resumed in full.

The government announced tonight that reports of a large death toll throughout the island since the trouble began were unfounded, as a check showed that only seven had died since the trouble began at Santiago Monday and the number of those injured was believed not to exceed 50. Property damage was described as minor, confined chiefly to broken windows and light bulbs.

Dr. Rafael Sanchez Aballi, secretary of communications, said tonight that parents over Cuba were starting their children back to school, reassured by the presence of military supervisors in all provinces.

These supervisors have taken over police authority everywhere, although actual military law is confined to Havana and its environs.

The government also announced that martial law probably would be lifted within a few days. Spokesmen said a campaign against communists, charged with responsibility for the recent disorders, soon would be launched.

They declared, too, that the stern tactics employed to check disturbances had served as a lesson to communists, nationalists and unruly students.

The newspapers El Pais and Diario De La Marina, which suspended yesterday rather than submit to governmental censorship, did not publish today. Count Del Rivero, president of the latter paper, is in New York, undergoing medical treatment. In a message sent here today regarding the allegations that communists were responsible for the current troubles, he emphasized that his paper never had been associated with any radical activity but had always been the "mouthpiece of the sound, conservative Cuban elements."

FAVORS DEM. WARFARE ON REPUBLICAN POLICIES

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Nov. 14.—(AP)—Senator Hugo Black, democrat, Alabama, issued a statement today, saying "the sooner and more aggressively democrats wage uncompromising warfare on republican governmental policies that have brought distress to America, the more worthy does our party prove of the trust of the people."

Asked if the statement was intended as a repudiation of the pledge of legislative co-operation made several days ago by seven democratic leaders, Senator Black said it was intended, "in the light of the discussion of the 'co-operation' offer," as an expression of his "conviction that the results of the election x x x show that the people want quick and effective action from congress in repudiation of republican policies condemned at the polls."

GENERAL STRIKE IN PERU BROUGHT TO END

LIMA, Peru, Nov. 14.—(AP)—A semblance of calm existed tonight in the Cerro De Pasco mining area, where fifteen persons, including two Americans, were killed in labor riots Wednesday, but martial law continued and the mines remained idle.

At Callao, where a twenty-four-hour general strike in sympathy with the miners extended yesterday, normal transportation was restored, and in Lima there was no recurrence of the mild excitement which attended yesterday's transportation strike.

A general strike which tied up Lima's transportation facilities ended this morning and industry returned to normal. The general workers council had called the strike in sympathy with the mine workers in the Cerro De Pasco fields.

WOULD FORCE DRY ISSUE BEFORE CONGRESS THIS TERM

NEW YORK, Nov. 14.—(AP)—A demand for prompt congressional action on prohibition was made tonight in a statement by Representative Loring M. Black, democrat, of Brooklyn. He declared himself in favor of a filibuster to force a special session on "modification for economic relief," if necessary.

Modification of the Volstead act, he said, "affords the one expeditious means of economic relief."

Black saw indications "that strenuous effort is being made to prevent action on prohibition until December, 1931" in "statements from Washington that President Hoover wants to avoid a special session of congress and that the Wickersham commission will not make recommendations at the opening of congress in December."

ENGINE TROUBLE CAUSES DO-X TO SPEND NIGHT ON SEA

As the Huge Flying Boat, in Flight From England to Bordeaux, France, Neared the French Coast, Some of Her 12 Engines Began Working Badly—The Craft Alighted on the Ocean and Skimmed Down the Coast to a Sheltered Berth to Await Daylight

BORDEAUX, France, Nov. 14. —(AP)—The largest flying boat in the world, the German DO-X, bobbed tonight on a calm sea between the fortified island of Re and the city of La Rochelle, interrupted after a trying day in which it left England for Bordeaux on another phase of its projected flight to the United States.

Late tonight the huge ship reached this point and threw out anchor after traveling on the surface along the coastline for 50 or more miles. There it awaited, comfortably, the coming of daylight.

When the DO-X made the French coast en route from England this afternoon some of her 12 engines began to work badly and she lost speed, requiring two hours to fly from Cherbourg to Ushant and 20 minutes from there to Douarnenez. The DO-X held her course, however, until she reached Les Barges, a small coastal point near Sables D'Olonne.

By that time, it is understood, four motors were giving trouble. It was 5:50 p. m. Night was falling fast, and a dense sea mist, which had been dispelled by the bright winter sun early this morning, was again creeping over the waters.

At the speed which the plane was flying the DO-X could not hope to reach Bordeaux until late at night and the flight would have been attended by a certain risk in the darkness and fog. The captain decided to taxi along the coast for a way, since the ship could make a respectable speed on the surface even though it could not do so well in the air with crippled motors, and then ride out the night at anchor some place.

In addition, French authorities had arranged for refueling the DO-X at the small port of St. Nazaire De Charente, four miles west of Rochefort, and it was decided to head for that point. Confusion of this little town with the great port of St. Nazaire at the mouth of the Loire farther north was responsible for a report that the DO-X had landed at St. Nazaire.

Hence, with all these considerations the big plane came down to the surface just off Les Barges and taxied gracefully over the calm sea, as there was no wind.

Thereafter she skimmed down the coast, the drone of her engines heard by people ashore but her lights invisible through the mist and darkness, to a point between the island of Re and the city of La Rochelle.

There, in the shelter of the island where French convicts spend their last night in France before being transported to the penal settlements off the South American coast, the DO-X cast anchor to ride out the night.

It is understood that in the morning the flying boat will go to St. Nazaire De Charente, a short distance further south, and there take on fuel and possibly adjust the crippled engines.

The DO-X's adventures furnished a hectic day not only for those on board but for those on land watching its progress.

Even this morning, when the big ship left Calshot air station in England, several false starts were made before it could be lifted from the water. This was caused partly by a heavy fog which veiled the course and even prevented some of the passengers from reaching Calshot in time. Robert Hartmann, Lady Grace Drummond-Hay, newspaper correspondent, and another reporter were left behind, the DO-X thus taking off with only 24 persons aboard

Thereafter the progress of the huge seaplane was difficult to follow. The plane's wireless was so infrequently picked up that it was believed the apparatus must not be working, and a confusion of reports poured in.

TO TAKE OFF FOR BORDEAUX EARLY THIS MORNING

BORDEAUX, France, Nov. 14.—(AP)—The German seaplane DO-X, which taxied down the coast to a point off La Rochelle tonight after landing on the sea near Les Barges while en route from England to Bordeaux, will take off for this city early tomorrow morning.

After the big German seaplane had anchored tonight between the Island of Re and the city of LaRochelle, boats took off from the city in answer to signals from the plane and took three members of the crew to St. Nazaire De Charente, where they made arrangements to ship 500 gallons of gasoline and 25 of oil as early as possible in the morning. These stores were provided by the French government.

It is understood that the captain of the DO-X intends to make Bordeaux which is only 120 miles distant, in time for a mid-day reception and will leave Sunday morning for Corunna, Spain, the next point on the itinerary to Lisbon.

"MATRIMONIAL INSURANCE" PRONOUNCED A LOTTERY

FORT WORTH, Tex., Nov. 14.—(AP)—The "matrimonial insurance" racket which sprang up over the southwest several months ago, attracting the dollars of thousands of persons induced to gamble on marriage possibilities, has run afoul the postal authorities.

Termed "insurance" by the promoters, the scheme is branded a lottery in violation of the federal laws by postal officials.

Six men alleged to have sponsored the sale of the "insurance" have been arrested here charged with conducting mail lotteries and are at liberty under $5,000 bond. They are: R. C. Parrish, and A. W. Hutson of Fort Worth; W. G. Hutson and M. O. Robinson of Lubbock, Tex., and Kansas City; D. S. Turner of Lubbock and M. D. Gardner of Dallas.

Post office inspectors said the member joining a matrimonial association took out a policy, for example amounting to $125. For it he is to pay, say $15, in $5 monthly instalments. If he marries at the end of six months he is paid the $125. If he marries before that time he forfeits the $15.

MISSING HIGH SCHOOL GIRL RETURNS HOME

BELMONT, Mass., Nov. 14.—(AP)—Margaret Martell, 14, Belmont high school student who disappeared yesterday and for whom a search throughout New England had been conducted, returned home tonight.

The girl and her brother Harold, 12 had played truant from school yesterday and Harold returned home to tell his parents he had left his sister riding in an automobile with [illegible] who had bought them candy and given them a ride.

Margaret said it was through fear she had not returned last night. She said after her brother left her the autoist, whom she knew only as Jack, took her for a ride up the north shore and then to a theatre in Waltham. He left her in Waltham late yesterday afternoon and gave her a small amount of money. She feared to go home and returned to Boston, where she went to the Cathedral of the Holy Cross and slept in a pew all night. She walked the streets today and finally gathered enough courage to go home.

Margaret's parents appealed to the police late last night and an alarm was sent throughout New England and into New York state to be on the watch for the girl.

Made Pastor at Unionville

Another former curate at the local church has been ordained by Bishop Nilan to be pastor of St. Mary's church, Unionville. Born at New Haven, April 15, 1884, Rev. John A. Sullivan received his early schooling in that city. He completed his classical studies at St. Thomas' seminary, Hartford, and made his courses in philosophy and theology at the University at Tarnow in Austria, where he acquired a mastery of the Slav and Polish tongues. His ordination took place at Tarnow June 29, 1907. He served as curate at St. Thomas' church, Southington, from 1907 to 1914, looking especially to the spiritual needs of the Polish Catholics residing there. Subsequently Father Sullivan filled curacies at the Immaculate Conception church, Waterbury, St. Andrew's, Colchester, and St. Joseph's, Willimantic. In the spring of 1921 he was advanced to the pastorate of St. Bridget's, Moodus. His predecessor at Unionville, the late Father Tiernan, had also previously been rector of the Moodus parish.

Stafford Springs

An automobile, owned and operated by Daniel Greene, of Stafford, overturned coming down the Hollow road late Thursday evening. The night was very foggy and glaring lights from a car traveling in the opposite direction confused the driver so that Mr. Greene lost control of his car which ran up on a bank and overturned. The car was wrecked and a young man from Willington, who was in the Greene car, received a scalp wound. Greene escaped without personal injury. The accident is being investigated by State Trooper Hill.

BLACK HILL

NUTMEGS ABROAD FIND CONN. FRIENDS IN FLORIDA

Writing from Gainsville, Florida, Everett E. Brown, of Black Hill, says: "Coming down the Dixie highway we couldn't help a thrill, when, before crossing the bridge over a river of considerable size, a sign said "Swanee River" and we realized that at last we were "way down upon the Swanee river" of which we had sung so many times. A few feet farther we stopped at a filling station and I remarked that the river was quite noted in song. The man replied "Yessah, and the song was written right near here!"

Our stay in Gainesville has been especially interesting in many ways

A Florida University

Gainesville is the seat of the Florida State university. The physical plant of the university is now valued at more than five million dollars and includes 953 acres of land and a fine set of buildings. The university embraces a number of colleges: The College of Agriculture and Engineering, College of Arts and Sciences, College of Commerce and Journalism, College of Law. Here is located the State Experiment Station, headed by Dr. Wilmon Newell, famous among other achievements for his recent work in fighting the Mediterranean fly, which was such a menace to citrus fruits. The state plant inspection board is under his direction.

Here is the maintenance division of state highways, also the state hospital for epileptics and feeble minded.

On Dixie Highway

Gainesville is located on the Dixie highway which is I believe also U. S. Highway No. 41, the shortest line from the Great Lakes to the Florida keys. The college has a force of 350 professors and attaches and 2,354 students and is yet the youngest of the state university.

A Connecticut Bugaboo

Yet some of our so-called Connecticut legislators have held up their hands in holy horror because as they claimed, some of the friends of the college at Storrs were secretly trying to make it a university, and forced a sort of gentlemen's agreement to hold the number of students down to 500. Possibly they might be surprised to learn that the citizens of Florida seem actually proud of the fact that they have a university. Perhaps, some of us who are not too old, may live long enough to see Connecticut become progressive.

Call On Dr. Sanborn

Monday, I drove out to the university and had a most delightful call with Dr. N. W. Sanborn, whom many in Connecticut poultry circles know as a poultry expert. I met Dr. Sanborn years ago when he used to come down from his home in Massachusetts and talk at our state conventions. His strain of Rhode Island Reds were quite famous.

Once of Central Village

But I had one delightful surprise when I met the doctor and found that in his early days he practiced medicine at Central Village and lived in the Shumard house nearly opposite Fitch Carey. This was when Jennie Cary (Mrs. Fred Tillinghast) was quite young. It was when the freshet nearly destroyed the grist mill run by Henry French.

Judge Warner His Teacher

Young Lawyer Edgar M. Warner was located in Central Village then and was the teacher of Dr. Sanborn's class in Sunday school. This was after I had left home and was living south, consequently did not know the Sanborns. Well, after Dr. Sanborn and I compared poultry notes and other notes and swapped stories, he took me around the other departments and I met a number of very interesting men.

The doctor had invited Mrs. Brown and I to take dinner with them, but this did not fit in with previous arrangements, so later in the day Mrs. Sanborn and the doctor called on us at the hotel for more than an hour and maybe our tongues didn't fly! So many old acquaintances to ask about—some gone; others still on deck. Mrs. Maggie Lewis was one of the first inquired about. Agnes Summons (Vaughn), Sessions Adams, Hattie Stark, and her brother, the Mathewsons. Well, just go through the C. Village directory and see who is left who lived there at the time of the freshet!

There may be those in C. Village interested to know that Henry French's two daughters are married and living in Florida near Gainesville and Dade City. I hope to see them before I leave the state.

Tung Oil Industry

A new industry, tung oil, is now attracting much interest about here. Tung oil comes from the nuts of the tung tree and for 100 years has come from China. It is used in the manufacture of high grade paint, varnishes, cements and various waterproofing mixtures. It is greatly superior to linseed oil, as it is not affected by hot water as linseed oil is; also yield per acre is far greater. The supply coming from China is in very crude form, and paint men like the U. S. product better.

Planting Tung Trees

Benjamin Moore Co., the noted paint men, have planted 1,800 acres of tung trees near here. There are from three to seven nuts in a husk about the size of English walnut husks. There have been experimental plantings since 1905, when Dr. David Industry brought in the first nuts. Industry brought in the firs tnuts. There are now some 500 growers, with over 4,000 acres.

Well, I think you are sufficiently oiled now, when you go to bed and sleep on linoleum you are walking over tung oil.

VOLUNTOWN

Friday evening a dance was held in Union hall. While every one in the large crowd in attendance was having an enjoyable time, shortly before the close of the affair, a number of young men started a little affair of their own, not on the evening's program, which was continued outside the hall. Constable Nelson Grenier was called and as a result seven young men were presented before Justice of the Peace George B. Sheldon, Saturday morning, charged with breach of the peace. All pleaded guilty and were fined $3 and costs of $10.55, making a total of $13.55 each, which was paid. All were warned that another appearance on this charge would incur a more severe penalty. Thomas McDonald, grand juror, prosecuted the cases.

At a late hour Saturday evening some motorist in a hurry tried to make Kaufmann's corner, on the Westerly road, but, instead got over a little too far and smashed up a perfectly good guard rail erected by the state at that point to prevent cars going into a ditch. Mr. Kaufmann heard the crash and going out to investigate found the guard rail smashed, but the car had disappeared toward Westerly.

The Raininite sewing club held its weekly meeting at the home of Mrs. Elmer Baton and still the name proves very appropriate.

At a road race in Bristol, R. I., Armistice day, in which national star runners, Clarence DeMar, James Hennigan and others were contestants, John P. McDonald, former Voluntown boy, was official referee.

A number of local people were guests at the eight church conference held at the Scotland church Tuesday. At the six church conference to which the Hanover church belongs, held at Plainfield Wednesday, the church was represented by nineteen persons.

The fields belonging to the Airlie Mills company, upon which Frank Babeck raised corn for filling his silos this last season, have been fertilized and are undergoing fall plowing in order to avert the ravages of the corn borer next season.

Alva Sims has been busily occupied in rejuvenating an old hennery situated upon the place belonging to his grandmother. Another young lad, Russell Lancy, has been assisting him in his mechanical operations and now that it is ready for occupancy, he has a nice lot of Rhode Island Reds installed in the plant.

The meetinsg of the Story Hour circle were resumed this week, also those of the Daughters of the Covenant, at the Parsonage by the Pines Friday afternoon and evening, respectively.

DANIELSON

TWO PROVIDENCE WOMEN FIGURE IN AUTO CRASH

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, Nov. 14.—Mrs. Florence Reynolds of Providence and her daughter, Miss Mary C. Reynolds, were lucky to escape serious injury, or even death, early this afternoon, when the big roadster Mrs. Reynolds was operating went out of control and turned over on its side, out on the state highway between Brooklyn and Hampton, about a quarter of a mile west of Stetson's Four Corners. As it was, Mrs. Reynolds escaped with cuts about the face, a minor injury to one leg, some bruises and a general shaking up. Miss Reynolds escaped with nothing more damaging than a thrill. Mrs. Reynolds was given treatment at the office of Dr. Warren A. Tanner in Danielson. She is the wife of William H. Reynolds, Providence, owner of the car. The machine was badly damaged on its left side, the windshield was broken and the top crushed.

Increase in School Children

Despite this and that, Killingly shows an increase of 63 in the number of children of school age listed in the annual enumeration recently completed here over the figures for last year. The total this year is 2,150. Of these, 1,077 are in Danielson, 52 in Killingly Center, 22 in the Mashentuck district, 219 at Dayville, 346 at Goodyear, 112 in Attawaugan, 104 at Ballouville, 16 in the Tucker district, 66 at East Killingly, 41 in the Valley district, 18 in the Sparks district, 49 at South Killingly and 28 in the Horse Hill district. The major increases this year were shown in Danielson, Attawaugan and in the Valley district.

Fined for Game Law Violation

Before Justice Edward Deller in Ashford this afternoon, Earl Mrakovich, 17, of Union, and Arthur Deschand, 19, of Eastford were each fined $10 and costs, a total in each case of $23.60 for violation of the game laws. Deputy game wardens operating under the orders of County Game Warden Thomas Daniels of Plainfield arrested the youths last night. Mrakovich and Deschand were riding about in a car the former was operating, while Deschand had a high-powered .32-calibre rifle, and a powerful electric searchlight, such as is being used by some hereabouts in jack-lighting for deer. The youths, represented by Attorney Irving H. Miron of Putnam, pleaded nollo to the charges filed against them.

A few of those good people who like to do nice things for others talked here today about buying Christmas presents for kiddies that likely will be without them the coming Yuletide unless something is done about it outside the kiddies' homes. It was agreed that the presents need not be expensive. Scores of little gifts for children are available in stores here at anywhere from 10 to 25 cents. The difficulty the suggesters are facing right now, and they have their hands on their money, is to find out who the deserving tots are. Information as to this will be received and compiled by the writer of this column, and the assurance given, on the strength of promised support, that the youngsters who otherwise would have a bleak Christmas will be remembered. Communications may be addressed to The Bulletin, Danielson. It may be added that anyone caring to share in this act of grace and good-will will indicate the fact.

Free—a cake of Palmolive soap, with a tube of Colgate's toothpaste, all for 25 cents. Mose the Druggist, the Rexall store.—adv.

Out of Wauregan comes the information that the gatehouse over the canal supplying water for power at the mills of the Wauregan company is practically rebuilt. The old gatehouse was destroyed by fire last summer while repairs and renovations were being made. The replacement is in line with modern ideas for such structures, and a very considerable improvement over the destroyed building. The Danielson fire department responded to a call to fight the gatehouse fire, but met with so many difficulties that it did not get into action as promptly as the local firemen desired, the troubles being largely mechanical and local.

A little epic in advertising has to do with the experience of a local man who inserted, the past week-end, a For Sale advertisement for Pommeranian puppies in this paper. The advertisement was intended to read $30 each for the fine little dogs, but through the tricks that type is subject to, the doggies were announced as being vended at $3 when the announcement appeared. And then came a flock of orders! The advertiser was rung out of bed by his telephone as early as 5:30 the morning the adv. appeared, and got an order, at $3.00. All day long came additional calls. It all worked out right, however. The price was corrected in the adv., and the local man sold three of the puppies at $30 each. All of which, of course, is pointed at the moral: "If you don't want to do any business, don't advertise!" Especially in The Bulletin, which has the only complete eastern Connecticut circulation.

One hesitates to be at all critical of the service rendered here by the Southern New England Telephone Co., it is so uniformly high class, but it may be suggested in the most gracious manner possible that more and better circuits between Danielson and Norwich would be a most desirable improvement, for which there is a demand.

This is true, and it happened in Danielson this morning: Two girls, one wearing a brilliant red skirt and coat, the other garbed in vivid green, happened along, going where they were going. A youth, his mind untramelled by unemployment or worry of any sort and clicking beautifully, looked the girls over, as boys will. His appraisal finished, he casually remarked: "The Stop and Go Sisters!"

Next Tuesday at 1:30 social welfare workers to the number of upwards of 30 will sit down to a luncheon at Paco lodge. They will be representative of community efforts to do serviceable things for deserving persons throughout Windham and New London counties. Following the lunch period, there will be a series of talks by workers in the area mentioned.

The reaction was sure to set in. It was exclusively announced in this republican newspaper this morning, in this column, that the democrats of Killingly have their plans well advanced, practically completed, to form a Democratic club here. That announcement started something, time will tell how much. Nevertheless, it has started talk of forming a Republican club, and if that plan should go through, there should be plenty of political action hereabouts in the next campaign.

County Game Warden Thomas Daniels is functioning up to his usual standard of efficiency, after having been quite seriously ill the past ten days. In verification of this it may be related that Walter Fields, who lives somewhere in the vicinity of Brooklyn and Wauregan, has been in the court of Justice Coit in Canterbury and has been fined $5 and costs, a total of $16.10, for hunting without a license to do so.

Just received—fine assortment of new and rare plants. Franklin Crosby, florist.—adv.

Tuesday afternoon members of the W. C. T. U. will meet with Mrs. Kent A. Darbie at her home on Broad street.

Sunday will be observed as Federation day in the Congregational, Baptist and Methodist Episcopal churches here. These churches are members of the Danielson Federation of Churches, and the sermons of the pastors will have to do with the aims and accomplishments of the Federation.

On this day, more or less reminiscent of Indian summer, flocks of geese were reported from the eastern part of the town as on their southward flight. Other flocks have been reported as going south since mid-October.

Members of Mary A. Livermore tent, a patriotic organization of descendants of Civil war veterans, will hold a regular assembly next Friday evening in G. A. R. hall.

Next Tuesday afternoon members of the Fortnightly club are to meet with Mrs. Henry Atwood of Broad street.

When the standing committee of the Westfield Congregational church assembles in special meeting next Wednesday evening in the church parlor a budget for the coming year will be presented by the finance committee, and plans for the Every Member canvass will be discussed.

Mrs. James Monohan and Miss Alice Monohan, both of Providence, were visitors with relatives and friends here today. They formerly were residents here.

Again today Red Cross workers were covering their assigned areas in Danielson and receiving enrollments of those who desire to be members of the local chapter for another year. The roll call gives promise of being a very good success here.

STATE LEGION COMMANDER WARNS AGAINST COMMUNISM IN ADDRESS

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, Nov. 14—The power of organization, the threat of communism and the American Legion's work of rehabilitation, were subjects touched upon in an interesting and inspiring manner by Edward L. Newmaker, commander of the American Legion department of Connecticut, in an address given before a large assemblage of legionnaires and auxiliary members, town and city officials and veterans of the G. A. R., attending the installation banquet of Anslem Mayotte post, No. 13, which was held Thursday evening at the Putnam Inn.

The American Legion, he said, is representative of the nation's citizenry of today. Because of the enormous strength it represents, and its policy of refusing to adhere to the principles of any political body, the appeals and requests of the legion are always recognized by the legislative branches of the state and national governments. Commander Newmarker outlined the successful negotiations of the legion with Connecticut legislatures and pointed to many of the bills which were passed, all of which were of unselfish nature, when the logic of the veterans organization was presented. In congress the American Legion is always heard, "and heard right," the state official stated, when commenting on the power of the society in a national scope.

The speaker was lavish with his praise of President Hoover for his vetoing of the soldier's pension bill, which he said was a piece of legislation engineered by a small disgruntled group seeking to raid the coffers of the United States treasury for their own selfish interests.

"The American Legion does not want the pension, but merely wants to see that every soldier of the A. E. F., facing serious financial straits brought on through ill health or economic reverses, is taken care of through state or federal aid, as the case may be," said Mr. Newmarker.

Turning to the subject of the sudden growth of a foreign political party in the United States, Mr. Newmarker attacked communism and stressed the importance of America to safeguard the rights of American liberty by instilling American patriotism into the children of communistic sympathizers who he said, "are by birth, Americans." To his knowledge, he said that on November 4th, communistic ballotts were cast in nearly every town in the state and in New York city alone, one quotation said that 700,000 of these ballots were found after votes were counted. The number, he said fortunately, is small and of no serious consequence when compared to the vast number of high minded people of the land, but the situation in New York at least, is far from being pleasant and now is the time to begin the stamping out of this group of agitators largely responsible for the breeding of universal discontent and uneasiness.

"Communism will not go far in America, as long as the laws of the nation are sound and as long as every man is getting a square deal in the courts. But the children of communism must be brought out of the environment where these weird theories that breed discontent for law are held. With Americanism instilled in the younger generation, the possibility of further spread of this group of undesirables will have been thwarted," Mr. Newmarker said in conclusion.

The meeting was opened by retiring Commander Arthur C. Leith, acting as toastmaster. Following a delicious dinner, Commander Keith introduced Mayor Charles A. Richard, who delivered a brief address of welcome and extended the greetings of the city to the visiting legionnaires and their ladies. He complimented the ex-service men for their splendid work in connection with widows and disabled veterans relief and for their fine community spirit and concluded by urging every member of the American expeditionary force to become affiliated with the American Legion.

Following Mayor Richard's address, Mrs. Mazie D. Potter, president of the auxiliary introduced an excellent programme of entertainment furnished by Mrs. Myra Frink of Brooklyn and Misses Grace Veigard and Irene Bruce, Putnam young women who delighted the audience with piano and vocal selections.

Mrs. Frink was exceptionally entertaining with her monologue skits.

The next period was devoted to the installing in office of the newly elected officers of the legion post and auxiliary. Commander Newmarker summoned the staff of post officers to the head table and administered the oath of office to them. Carl E. Weeks is the succeeding commander; James J. Charron, adjutant, Harry Gifford, sergeant at arms and Benjamin Simmons, chaplain. Leon M. Farrin, vice commander and Whitman Danielson, finance officer, were unable to be present and therefore will take office at a later date.

Mrs. Florence Erbe of Southington, state president of the auxiliary department installed newly elected officers of the local auxiliary. The ladies, garbed in the regalia, consisting of blue and buff tint overseas hats, bearing the legion insignia and capes of blue, walked to the head table and took the oath as it was administered by Mrs. Erbe.

The official staff is headed by Mrs. Potter as president; Mrs. Sarah Gifford, first vice president; Mrs. Florence Shaw, second vice president; Mrs. Jessie McIntyre, chaplain; Mrs. Minnie Macdonald, secretary, Mrs. Anna C. Jarvis, treasurer; Mrs. Marion Robillard, historian; Miss Evelyn Shaw, sergeant at arms.

Commander Weeks in a brief talk said that the responsibilities invested with him were numerous and that in order to discharge them properly the co-operation of the entire post would be necessary. He said he was elated at the renewed spirit of the organization and deeply appreciated the expression of confidence given him by the membership.

The next speaker was Anson Buchanon, charter member of the A. G. Warner post, G. A. R., the membership of which has dwindled to less than a handful. Rising from his seat Mr. Buchanon, spoke in behalf of the seven remaining veterans of the Civil war, three of whom were present, proudly displaying the insignia of their great organization which is fading with the years. In his speech, Mr. Buchanon recalled the years to 1885, when the Civil war veterans post was organized. Mr. Buchanon was its first commander. "It is now 65 years since the Civil war was ended," Mr. Buchanon said, "just think a moment and see what that means. We three old fellows, (pointing to Comrades Wesley Lewis and Richard Gibney) served three years before any other person in the room was born, perhaps. I'm 88 years old and still kicking around and admiring the post war work of our illustrious sons represented here tonight. In behalf of my comrades, I congratulate you gentlemen," the soldier of yesterday said as he retired to his seat amid the din of applause.

Miss Katherine Byrne, vice chairman of the state central republican committee and Mrs. Helen MacFarland of Southington, president of the 4th district auxiliary also gave brief talks. The singing of the national anthem by the entire body brought the interesting and well balanced programme to a close.

JEWETT CITY

SUCCESSFUL TRY-OUT OF NEW LIGHTING SYSTEM

(Special to The Bulletin)

JEWETT CITY, Nov. 14—This evening at 5:03, Warden Edmond J. Jodoin, pressed the button that lighted the borough's new Great White Way, and presto! Main street from David Hale Fanning park at Park square, to the Quinebaug viaduct approach, was illuminated to near daylight brilliancy. The borough electrical commission, L. G. Buckingham, Jacob Weschler and Louis Morey, with members of the board of the borough government, and Supt. E. S. Hiscox of the light and power system were present, to note the success of this new improvement in the local illuminating plans. There are 24 lamps of 500 candle power, with the poles set in stagger formation. To complete the plan, 12 new poles were raised at points where it became necessary. The fixtures are of the flambeau type, selected because of their combined strength and beauty. A time clock is to be installed, which, operating on a daylight schedule will automatically switch on the power at twilight, turn off half the lamps at 11 p. m., and douse the entire line at sunrise. As one of the outstanding improvements during Warden Jodoin's administration, it is largely due to his activity that this evidence of advancement has been achieved. The work has all been done by the borough linemen.

Electric energy will be shut off in the borough of Jewett City on Sunday, Nov. 16, from 8 o'clock, a. m., to 8:30 a. m., and from one o'clock until 1:30 o'clock, p. m., in order to make necessary repairs. The Connecticut Light and Power Co., Danielson District.—Adv.

NO STATE PIED PIPER COULD KILL BOROUGH RATS

(Special to The Bulletin)

JEWETT CITY, Nov. 14—Many boroughites, with feelings not unmixed with disappointment, read in Friday's Bulletin about the big rat extermination drive which is to take place Nov. 25th. Those who are interested in the speedy repose of borough rodents, looked down the list in vain to find notice of a place in Jewett City, where one could be provided with the doctored bait. It is believed that no common concoction would ever be effective with the local breed. These home-town species, think nothing of handling three languages fluently, they carry lanterns at night, and long sticks with which to spring the traps, while they eat the bait. And such things as rough-on-rats—they can tell it a mile away, and even carry antidotes if one should eat a bit by mistake. And more, as the following story will tell, they stand in with the local dogs and cats.

A man who owns a chicken farm up in the north end of the town, bought a wonderful rat dog, which he told about and highly praised to a borough friend. It is said that last week, this man went up to see the dog which he had heard so much about. Approaching the place he saw two big gray boys scamper down the cellar stairs, while two more as big as rabbits peeked out from under the chicken coop. Meanwhile the dog lay curled up asleep on the door step. The farmkeeper came out to greet his friend, who at once told him what he had just seen, "Oh, well!" replied the chicken keeper, "you see, them's our rats! The dog wouldn't touch them."

Findings Not Always Keepings!

Two women have had the very unpleasant experience this week of having lost their pocket books. They also have about lost their faith in the honesty of mankind as well. For both pocketbooks contained their names and addresses on driving licences, cards and letters. Absolutely no excuse for not being returned to the owners! One dosen't need to be superstitious to be convinced that cash gotten in this dishonest way will not bring any good luck to its finder.

PUTNAM

DIRECT CALLS TO STATE POLICE ARE NOW POSSIBLE

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, Nov. 14—At exactly four o'clock this afternoon telephone testmen in the test rooms of the exchange offices at Putnam and Danielson "cut-in" the telephone switchboard at the state police barracks at Danielson, into the Putnam division, completing the final details of an important project of communication that has been underway for several weeks.

By virtue of the new arrangement, the service and law enforcement facilities of the Danielson barracks is literally brought to Putnam, for anyone residing within the territory embracing the Putnam exchange, merely by giving the local operator the number "376," may in the course of a few seconds be directly connected with the police station. No toll charge is made, since the service is part of the local exchange system.

The first call over the new wire was made at 4:15 o'clock this afternoon, by the local Bulletin correspondent who talked with Lieut. Ross V. Urquhart and was given a resume of the day's activities of the state policemen in this section of the county.

Lieut. Urquhart in commenting on the new service said that the circuit is an instrument that will be indispensable to law enforcement in the large area in the northeastern part of the county which is patrolled by the personnel under his command. The police executive said that he hoped that the public which it will serve, will not hesitate to use it for without the immediate co-operation of the law abiding, can such an organization function to the fullest extent. Lieut. Urquhart is particularly anxious to have the cooperation of the people of the rural districts where the state police department devotes the greatest portion of its time and effort in the undoing of crime.

Communities embracing the Putnam telephone district are: Thompson, Woodstock, East Putnam, Pomfret, Abington, Eastford, Pheonixville, Putman Heights that section near West Glocester, R. I., on the Putnam-Providence road.

Chauncey C. Talbot of Mechanics street, who was stricken with a paralytic shock on Tuesday, was reported as being slightly improved today. Mr. Talbot is proprietor of the Putnam News company.

Miss Anna G. Murphy of Farrows street, is spending the week end with relatives in Providence.

A harvest supper was served Thursday evening at the summer camp of St. Mary's Boy Scout organization, the event being attended by scout commissioners and scoutmasters. The supper was served in the mess hall of the camp administration building. The camp is located on the shores of Laurel pond in West Woodstock.

With one of her most intensive campaigns at an end, Miss Katherine Byrne, vice chairman of the republican state central committee and dean of Connecticut's women political leaders has returned to her home on Seward street, for a much needed rest.

John Perry of Farrows street, for many years a resident of this city, died this morning in the Day Kimball hospital, following a prolonged illness. Mr. Perry was about 45 years of age.

Arthur Hughes, general chairman of the roll call being made for the Putnam chapter American Red Cross, said today that the committee hopes to complete the drive within a week.

Whitman Danielson, vice president of the Citizens National bank is confined to his home on Putnam heights suffering from a slight illness.

Unconfirmed reports to the effect that the Waterman Worsted company, new owners of the Devonshire mills at Goffs Falls, N. H., are to remove only a portion of their manufacturing apparatus in the Pomfret street plant to New Hampshire and are to continue operations in this city, are current. No official comment on the rumors has come from the local or New York offices of the concern. According to authenticated reports, the firm intends to begin operations at Goffs Falls plant on or about January 1, 1931.

LISBON

When the November meeting of the Community club was held at Community hall Wednesday evening, a debate on Old Age Pensions by Judge J. H. Barnes, affirmative, and Attorney C. V. James, negative, was closely followed by the large audience. The judges, Rev. W. J. Reynolds, Frank Mell and Richard Krauss, decided that Judge Barnes made the better speech but the greater number of points was made by Attorney James. The debate was enjoyed and gave rise to a discussion. There were two violin selections by Herbert Rich and his pupil, Charles Helmboldt, Mrs. Jesse Phillips accompanying on the piano. It was voted to hold the next meeting a week later than the usual time—which will be Dec. 17—and to have a Christmas tree and entertainment. Norwich, Saturday, Nov. 15, 1930

THE MAYOR'S UNEMPLOYMENT APPEAL

In another column Mayor Robbins has issued a proclamation in which he appeals to every citizen of Norwich to offer all possible aid in providing work for those who seek and need employment.

It is in keeping with the efforts which are being made generally, but the mayor lays stress upon the fact that it isn't charity which those out of work are seeking but a chance to work, and he rightly urges those who are in need of workmen or who have plans for repairs or construction a little later to consider the advisability of having such work done now in order that those out of work may have the benefit of such employment at a time when they are in need of funds for necessities and during a season of the year when cold weather adds to the burdens.

"Have that job done now," is the slogan which the mayor puts forth. It is timely and to the point. It suggests to many, who have been wondering what they might do to help the situation, a way in which they may cooperate in reducing the distress at this particular time. Work that can and is going to be done in the near future might well be done now. Such is in keeping with projects which are being carried out by cities and states and even the federal government. It is possible that such work as the mayor has in mind may not provide full-time employment, but the point to be considered is that it will contribute to the needed relief, and every little helps. With the many rising to the occasion, with the respective neighborhoods making an effort to take care of those known to need employment there can be a tiding over of a period in a manner that will mean the rendition of real "humanitarian service."

Norwich has every reason for giving serious thought and generous support to the appeal which has been made by the mayor. There is involved a grand opportunity to put into operation the Golden Rule and watch the gratifying results that will accrue therefrom. And when it comes to meeting such a situation, Norwich is seldom appealed to in vain.

WHERE ERRORS ARE COMMON

Here, there and everywhere, there is a checking up of the vote that was cast last week, in an effort to find out how nearly correct the voting was and to determine whether those declared elected by narrow margins actually received a plurality. There are districts where recounts have been ordered because of the belief that errors have entered into the results so freely as to create a false outcome.

Declaring that "we need voting machines," the Springfield Union, commenting on the progress of the recount in that part of Massachusetts, sets forth that "errors were found in every ward and in almost every precinct, ranging from one vote in ward 8 to 54 in ward 6. In ward 3 there was an error of 27 votes and in ward 5 an error of 30. . . . In one precinct a block of 46 votes cast for one of the candidates was credited to his opponent."

What is being revealed in the recount in Springfield and other Massachusetts cities is only what has been repeatedly disclosed in greater or less degree where the method of voting by ballot is continued. It has come to be expected to such an extent that wherever there is a close vote there is immediate suspicion that the count is not correct, and an early recount is sought.

In the opinion of the Union, the time has come for Springfield to get its eyes opened. It is, of course, a situation which reveals the existing method of voting in that city and district at its worst and puts it in such contrast with the advantages afforded by the voting machines that there is little difficulty in bringing to attention the desirability of substituting machines for ballots.

With machines furnishing accuracy, with machines providing quick returns, with machines preventing a bundle of ballots being counted for the wrong man, with machines registering the vote as the voter desires, and with machines eliminating the necessity of a recount, there is no comparison between the two methods of voting. Norwich recognizes every election the advantages of the voting machines and wisdom that was displayed years ago in installing the mechanical method of voting.

DEMOCRATIC ASSURANCE

It is realized, of course, that the members of congress who were elected last week, with the exception of those who were elected to fill vacancies or to fill out unexpired terms, will not take their seats until December, 1931.

It would be possible, however, for them to be brought into action through the calling of a special session of congress months ahead of that regularly scheduled. The necessity for such a special session might be determined by the present congress. It is entirely possible for the present congress to so delay action on important appropriation bills and legislation which ought to be enacted at the coming short session as to force the calling of a special session. By such a method, the new congress could be put into action soon after the present one concludes its work.

For the present congress to indulge in any such conduct would not be in keeping with the national requirements. The country ought not to be subjected to any such political scheme. It is a time when every effort should be bent toward the getting of necessary bills out of the way and speeding up whatever legislation is considered necessary in order to hasten the return of good conditions.

It is cooperation to this end that has been promised by the democratic committee of seven. Assurance has been further given by Senator Robinson, democratic senate leader, that this promise will be carried out. This must be taken to mean that, even though there are certain of the democratic senators who stand out prominently in party circles and who are not to be pledged by the committee or the minority leader, there are enough upon whom dependence can be placed to make good the promise.

Just where the line would be drawn between giving support and withholding it might be decidedly uncertain. Still, there is need for just such cooperation as promised, if due consideration is given to national welfare and if it is placed before party concern. In fact, it is perfectly apparent that more would be gained by the party in such an attitude than in trying to stand on a policy of obstruction.

CAPE COD CANAL

Since the government has acquired the Cape Cod canal, and even before that time, repeated instances of the limitations of the waterway have been brought to attention. The need of deepening and broadening the canal has been regarded as of much importance in order to get the full benefit of that short cut for navigation along the coast.

Already the government is being urged to regard the present as the time for hastening action in regard to such additional development. The desire to have red tape cut is in keeping with the need for giving employment at this time, even though it is recognized that action by congress will be necessary before anything can be done. The project must have its approval and it must vote the necessary money for such work.

That such may be made ready for passage at the coming session is the desire of the advocates for early action. It is not improbable that there are many instances where similar propositions can be advanced with good reason back of them in the way of providing employment. But with the canal there is an additional point to be taken into consideration. The president of the Eastern Steamship Lines, Inc., is responsible for the statement that his company stands ready to build two steamers at a cost of $7,000,000, but would like to have assurance from the government that the canal will be widened so that the new boats can safely negotiate it.

Thus it appears that, if the canal work can be speeded up, contracts will be let that will insure additional and continued work in the shipyards. That would mean reducing unemployment in a variety of directions and in just such a manner as would bring about valuable restoration of business. The canal development now seems to offer one way of helping the situation, although there is no probability that it could be undertaken for months at the best.

OCEAN AIR MAIL

Announcement to the effect that there is to be an air mail line across the Atlantic will cause no surprise, lest it be over the fact that it is to be established within another year instead of several years from now.

Aviators have been making eastward flights across the Atlantic without stops for years. Most all who have actually set out have succeeded. Flying westward has not met with as favorable results, but the idea of having the mail line make use of the Azores and Bermuda as bases indicates that there is a determination to decrease the hazards as much as possible.

The projected line appears to be a stepping stone to what is expected to develop into a more extensive use of the air for crossing the ocean. When it starts on as safe lines as possible, it is being patterened after the transcontinental lines, which have experienced great expansion since the day when the first mail was carried through the air.

It was inevitable that the day would come when the airplane, or the seaplane, would be brought into use for such service. That the government is disposed to give its encouragement to such an enterprise is in keeping with what it has done with the same sort of service in this country. Large appropriations have been made for the provision of such service and the speeding up of the transportation of mails from coast to coast and to intermediate points, and never before was it possible to get mail handled so speedily as it is today because of the air mail carriers. That this will, in time, be said of the movement of mail matter across the Atlantic is to be expected. It will mark one more step in the progress of aviation. It is a step in transportation service which cannot be stopped.

THE MAN WHO TALKS

It is perfectly amazing what a flood of light modern science has thrown on many things we ought to know but which we did not until the modern era was ushered in. It is sufficient to point merely to anthropology to establish this fact. Of course that word means the science of man. Some experts along this line are so proficient that they can not only tell the occupation a man follows, but his character, his disposition, his strength and his weaknesses. Some detectives are so skilled in this science that they feel justified in arresting men at sight because they can read a man's character at a glance, simply because of their general appearance, whether they are clad in rags and begging on the street, or whether they are dressed in evening clothes and attending some fashionable function. The stories of Conan Doyle have the backing of science.

The 121st annual meeting of the American Board of Foreign missions was recently held in Madison, Wis. If one supposes it was just a dry and uninteresting statement of facts he is seriously mistaken and certainly is not acquainted with the work. It stated with great emphasis that we live "in the day of a new motive for world Christianity. It was clearly brought out at this gathering that no civilization that has yet been attained is wholly Christian in all its phases. This does not apply to such nations as China and India alone, but to our much vaunted United States and to much of the continent of Europe. I quote the following sentence from the printed report: "The war, world-wide unemployment, and other tragic revelations of social failure have brought home to our generation the humbling and sobering fact that no civilization yet attained is dominantly or truly Christian in all the phases of its life.

While we are forced to accept these unpleasant facts apparent in our present Christianity, let us be careful and not underrate the wonderful things that evidently have been inspired by the genius of Christianity. Beyond all question it has been the trend of our Christian religion to foster everything that tends to the betterment of humanity. It has never been afraid to turn a thing down simply because it was new. It's ear is ever open to the proclamations of science. It is ever ready to investigate what science sets forth. We can all easily see what great obligation Christianity is under to science, and how much science owes to the spirit of Christianity. Now the former through its miracles of communication and transportation has been a mighty factor in helping Christianity to come into contact with the pagan nations. Science is the bond that joins the heathen with the civilized world.

We have long since gotten over the bigoted idea that the religious faiths of the Africans, Hindus and Chinese "are nothing but a vast tissue of falsehoods.' This was generally the belief of occidental nations before they really understood what there beliefs stood for. While they cannot for a moment be compared with the Christian faith for moral grandeur still they are not "a vast tissue of falsehoods." Nor our missionaries by a more intimate approach to the subtleties of the Oriental intellect are gaining greater respect for its moral and spiritual ideas. By careful examination the heathen are learning the superior qualities of our Christian faith and that it is better adapted for the regeneration of mankind than their own. The kindly manner in which our missionaries have approached the peoples of the Orient has had, and is having, marked effect.

Another Armistice day has come—and gone. What effect has the celebration of this day upon stabilizing political conditions? Did the observance of last Tuesday have apparently any market effect on international relations? Of course it is too soon to answer, but was the trend in the right direction? The tabulated results will answer that question. But we know beyond all question that when a halt was called in the World war conflict the belligerant nations took a long breath which was a sigh of relief, and the entire civilized world hoped and prayed that "wars and rumors of wars" would be heard no more. When the peace treaty was signed it was hoped that it had sounded the death knell of all wars and possibly it has. There is no civilized nation that would dare to proclaim war against another nation today without greater cause than is now apparent.

Had there been no Armistice day—which gave the exhausted nations a breathing spell in which they had time to realize how exhausted the major part of Europe had become—at a later day in all human probability there would have been no Kellogg-Briand pact which stipulated that under no circumstances should any civilized nation resort to war as a means of settling any international dispute. Now this was a perfectly logical step to the feeling that was aroused when a weakened and discouraged world cried out for a halt. It was in this halt that the maddened nations regained their senses and began to inquire of one another what was it all about. A question that, after the lapse of twelve years, has not yet been satisfactorilly answered. Ever since that great day in November, 1918, we have been thanking God that the war stopped when it did!

Far back in the age of apostolic times there was recognized man's obligation to established political authority. In one of his letters to the bretheren the Apostle Peter gives this advice: "Honor all men. Love the brotherhood. Fear God. Honor the king." If we were to tranalate this last sentence into a modern equivalent, it would not be "honor the king," but "be a good citizen." The reason for this is that the king is a scarce article compared with former times, and is getting more so year by year. In Peter's age and in most of the ages since, the king was about the only ruler known. This, of course, was before the general age of democracy. Peter recognized that obedience to a ruler was necessary if the state was to escape anarchy. But today the hereditary monarch is passing. The people are more and more becoming the ruling authority in the state. They rule through representation hence the words "honor the king" would certainly mean here in America, "be a good citizen!"

There is one beautiful passage of scripture out of which the idler has succeeded in creating a "fool's paradise!" That much abused passage runs as follows: "Consider the lilies of the field, how they grow; they toil not, neither do they spin; and yet even Solomon, in all his glory, was not arrayed like one of these. Wherefore, if God so clothe the grass of the field, which today is, and tomorrow is cast into the oven, shall He not much more clothe you, O ye of little faith?" With this passage the idler makes a great blunder in supposing that lilies are idle and inactive. Quite the contrary, plants are most industrious, and lilies store in their complex bulbs a great part of the nourishment of one year to quicken the growth of the next.

TYLER IS HEIR TO WEATHER PROPHET'S ROBE ONCE WORN BY LUCAS AND JOHNSON

With the passing of autumn, Connecticut usually produces from somewhere a weather prophet who foretells what kind of winter is at hand for the people of this state. This year the first of the profession to be heard from is Jim Tyler of Middlebury. Tyler declares that we are in for 24 snow storms.

"From January on, you may be on the lookout for plenty of snow and real cold weather," he says. "We haven't had walnuts in any amount for several years. This year there was an abundance of them and this is the surest indication of a hard winter. Instead of worrying about the election the squirrels were fretting about their winter's supplies and that's why they have been working overtime.

"Fur bearing animals have thicker coats of fur this year. There never was hard times that we didn't have a tough winter. Even the bark on the trees this fall shows that it's to be a severe winter. Stock up your bins, folks, with potatoes, turnips and don't forget your coal."

It has now been some years since Norwich has included a resident gifted with powers of meteorological divination. Around the turn of the century there was a colored man named Jackson living on Laurel Hill who was never averse to giving his opinion on the subject; but he died a dozen or 15 years ago. The most recent local prophet to be written up in The Bulletin was Herbert W. Lucas, whose powers were thus described in the issue of Oct. 22, 1919:

Lucas's 5 Years as Weather Prophet

The mantle of the late Horace Johnson of Haddam, whose weather prophecies had state-wide repute for many years, seems to have fallen upon Herbert W. Lucas of the Central building, 43 Broadway. For the past five years he has been making weather prognostications with signal accuracy, as the results show, for he has kept tally between his predictions and the actual weather conditions that show the two have run very close together.

Starting as far back as the winters of 1914 and 1915, his predictions came through all right; and ever since then he has kept the figures and statistics to prove his claims to foretelling the seasons. Some of these comparisons he gives as follows:

On Dec. 11, 1916, Mr. Lucas predicted a cold winter with quite a lot of snow. This came true as up to March 22 there was a severe winter and quite a fall of snow on that date.

On Oct. 30, 1917, he warned that we ought to prepare for a very stormy, windy, cold winter, a regular old-fashioned New England winter. On Nov. 24 he followed this with the word that boys could get out their skates and sleds on Thanksgiving day, and sure enough they did, with the ice three and one-half inches thick and snow enough for sliding on Broadway hill and other places.

Right along through the winter the weather played into his hands. On Dec. 14 ten inches of snow fell; on the 15th the ice harvest began, 12 inches thick and better. All the ice houses were filled by Christmas. These are his temperature records for that winter:

Friday, Dec. 28—Zero.
Saturday, Dec. 29—3 below zero.
Sunday, Dec. 30—17 below zero.
Monday, Dec. 31—13 below zero.
Tuesday, Jan. 1—8 below zero.
Wednesday, Jan. 2—9 below zero.
Thursday, Jan. 3—7 below zero.

Predictions Came True

December and January of that winter were the coldest in the history of the weather bureau, which was established in 1871. He predicted that February would be the worst month of the winter. The record bears him out. The month had only eight clear days to its credit, and but eight days on which there was not some rain or snow, with a mean temperature of 25.5 degrees above zero, which is 2.8 degrees below the average temperature for the last 40 years. There was a total precipitation of 6.31 inches, which is 2.44 inches above the normal for 40 years. The total snowfall was 34.7 and altogether that month of February would seem to deserve being called the worst month of its name for many years.

Weather Prophet Lucas predicted on April 3, 1918, that the coming summer would be hot and dry. June 1 and June 2 were the hottest in 40 years for those dates, 100 and 101 in the shade. July 20, 21, 22 and 23 were the hottest in the weather bureau's history, and Aug. 6 and Aug. 8 were 105 in the shade. So much for the heat; but it was also a very dry summer just as Mr. Lucas predicted.

Very many of the predictions by this Norwich weather prophet have been published in The Bulletin. On Oct. 21, 1918, he predicted that the fall would be late and that the winter would be late in setting in and would be mild with little ice. It is not so hard to recall our almost iceless season last winter.

On Nov. 24th he predicted that Thanksgiving day would be fair. It was moderately cool with part sunshine and partly cloudy, but a fine day nevertheless. Christmas day the temperature stood at 60 and on New Year's day the same.

Hit It Right Again

On June 1, 1919, he predicted that we would have very changeable temperatures with sudden changes from hot to cool and a dry summer with temperature running high and low. Again he hit it right in many respects. Some days the change ran as high as 50 degrees from hot to cool and cool to hot. The weather was very dry up to July 20th as farmers in many localities reported many vegetables burned during the drought and wells were getting low; but after that we had a lot of rain.

He states that very early in the summer he predicted an early fall; but weather prophets suffer some setbacks, and he admits he made a mistake and also in the dry summer he predicted. He did predict that October would be quite warm and it has been so far. He still holds to his predictions of a fairly cold winter with quite a lot of snow and ice with quite sudden changes of temperature.

He looks for a good ice crop this winter.

The following sketch of Horace Johnson, referred to in the foregoing article, appeared in The Bulletin of May 6, 1910:

N. S. Gilbert And Horace Johnson

Whenever Horace Johnson of Middle Haddam comes out with one of his periodical weather predictions, he has no more attentive follower who watches closely how near the forecast comes to the facts than Nathan S. Gilbert, senior member of the furniture house of N. S. Gilbert & Sons. Mr. Gilbert, whose 95th birthday is approaching on July 16, became acquainted with Horace at Block Island, where they have both stopped at the Adrian house.

Since knowing the Connecticut weather seer, Mr. Gilbert has kept a close eye on his predictions, so that it was with considerable satisfaction that he noted how closely the Middle Haddam man had hit the last two considerable weather disturbances.

Mr. Johnson becomes 86 next Friday. He is of English descent and ancient lineage. The emigrant ancestor was John Johnson, who came to America in the fleet with Winthrop and settled in Roxbury, Mass., in 1631.

Horace Johnson is a son of Henry Johnson and Mary Whitemore, both of whom were born in Middletown. He was the eighth of a family of nine children, and was born in Middle Haddam, May 13, 1824. Until he reached the age of 16 his only educational advantages were obtained at the district school.

On leaving school he went to Hartford and entered the store of Catlin & Spencer at a salary of $150 a year. He had an innate fondness for mathematics, and after working hours it was his practice to study by the light of candles purchased from his scanty earnings.

Mr. Johnson remained with Catlin & Spencer for seven years, and at the end of his engagement there his salary had been increased to $500 a year. With money saved he began his first speculation in needles. He made enough out of this venture to buy a house, and since then he has continued investments in real estate and has erected 17 buildings in the city of Hartford alone. For many years he conducted a business in second-hand goods and was a general auctioneer in Hartford.

In Civil war times he invested in a steamer plying between New York and Savannah, which at one time was used as a despatch boat by General Sherman. He relates his satisfaction that at one time he was the only civilian traveling on a train with President Lincoln.

Studied Meteorology Half-Century

For more than half a century he has made a study of meteorology and has gained more than local renown as a forecaster in weather conditions, his predictions being generally quoted by the press throughout the state.

Mr. Johnson was first brought prominently before the public when he predicted the great blizzard of 1888. Mr. Johnson owns property on the west side of the river in what is known as the "Straits," and has often contemplated the erection of an observatory to carry on his studies.

Mr. Johnson takes great pride in his town and village and has in contemplation many changes and improvements. He has considered opening up and giving to the village the tract of land in front of his residence for a library, church or public building.

Some years ago he offered to the state a tract of land of about 200 to 300 acres on the top of Cobalt mountain for an observatory, if the state would accept it for that purpose, but it was finally rejected. He has said that he will give this tract to the state for a deer and forest reservation, for he considers that it is time that we did something for the protection of deer. He appears very enthusiastic over the subject and has in mind other similar donations if this is accepted, for he owns considerable land in and around the village of Middle Haddam. A feldspar mine has recently been opened, and it is producing some of the best mineral in the state, which is located on his property.

Connecticut Valley Interests

Mr. Johnson takes great pride in the historic interests of the Connecticut valley, and speaks of the generations his family has lived in the vicinity, he being born in the house in which he now lives. He says the view from his village is the finest in the United States, excepting nothing. One can look for miles up the Connecticut river and see its many windings at this section, and it would be hard to find a finer view than the one from the hills surrounding this village.

Mr. Johnson has made it a point to secure historic relics and furniture, having a private collection which would be hard to duplicate. He has a number of rare pieces of furniture, among them a sofa he says belonged to Governor Pond, a mirror which was originally owned by Governor Jewell's mother, a settee out of the old state house, a pair of tongholders which belonged originally to Commodore McDonough, etc.

He also has a pair of door handles which he says were on the coach of General Jackson; a pair of knee buckles owned by General Lafayette; perfect drum sticks picked off the field at Antietam; guns from Harper's Ferry; Chinese gods (which he says he does not worship), and many curious seashells, some of immense size and rare.

Mr. Johnson died Jan. 20, 1917.

Other weather prophets hereabout include Olney Harrison of Moosup, whose predictions, made in the 1890's, were none too accurate, and C. B. Montgomery ("Cloud Digger") of Central Village, who died in March, 1928.

A Washington Bystander

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, Nov. 14—Possibly because of the many women appearing on New York ballots last election day the league for more women in public office seemed to center its activities in that state.

There were nine women candidates in New York for congress alone.

Illinois, with its two women candidates for the senate, stood next, with New Jersey third, having a woman candidate for each house of congress.

No other state had more than one woman aspirant to enter Washington public life, although there were four such candidates for the senate and 19 for the house, all told, before the voters on election day.

Public 'Lethargy'

The trio of gubernatorial candidates in New York were queried by the LMWPO along before election as to their willingness to appoint a "reasonable number" of women to public office if elected.

The league admitted that it was probably not so much due to opposition by appointing officials that so few women get political jobs as to "a lethargy of the public mind and among the women themselves."

With nine women for congress alone in that state, the lethargy of New York's womenhood was not very notable.

The Bystander wondered just how many women do figure importantly in the government set-up in Washington. Ready to his hand was a directory of the 71st congress.

That book contains more condensed information about who's which in Washington than its title suggests.

Not only are all senators, representatives, their committee clerks and private secretaries, the staff of each house, of the capitol building and its flanking office structures, the congressional library, supreme court and so on listed in detail; but every executive department, independent bureau or government commission has a similar place in the book.

Ambassadors, ministers, consuls all over the world, and even the accredited members of the press gallery get mention. It's a remarkable summary of Washington personalities, going down to include the private secretaries of the big bugs.

Not So Many

Checking this list over—and it runs to many hundreds of names—the Bystander found about 130 women—that was all. Perhaps half are private secretaries.

So not more than 75 or 80 women hold high enough rank in the government set-up to get their names in this official directory.

It looks as though the LMWPO should center its fire on Uncle Sam. He is slow about giving his nieces an equal break on jobs with his nephews, despite the league's notation that "women have had the franchise more than a decade and cast almost one-half the vote."

SUNDAY MORNING TALK

The Name of Jesus

The Lord is the hearer of prayer. There should be waiting on Him, not only in the assembly of His people, not only with the attitude of reverent regard in the forms of religion, but as the Psalmist puts it: Truly my soul waiteth upon God, for salvation, for protection. He is to be sought, and what ever the trouble of our lives, we thus get stability.

What can we ask? The fulfillment of the exceeding great and precious promises, but what plea can we present weak and sinful as we are? The name that is above every name—the name of Jesus. The name that meets every need for this life and the one to come. The name that never disappoints one who understands our every need as no other can. The one who fills every loyal heart with gay.

YOUR HEALTH

Special Diets

By Beaumont S. Cornell, M. D., Fort Wayne.

(From Gorgas Memorial Institute)

There are several diseases in which modified diets are either necessary or advisable. In constitutional weakness, increased amounts of fattening food are advised; in adiposity, a reduced intake, wisely planned; in colitis (inflammation of the colon) the so-called "smooth" diet is best; in gall bladder disease, decrease in fat substances is indicated; in hyperthyrodism and high blood pressure, "non-stimulating" foods; and in certain types of heart disease, the "dry diet," (less fluids) is advised.

It will be noted that fortunately none of these special diets need lack any essential food principal, so that the body need not suffer from deprivation of vitamins. In all the foregoing instances, some subtractions from the diet are more or less desirable. In Bright's disease and diabetes a subtraction is really necessary, of protein in the first instance, and carbohydrate in the second; not the categorical withdrawal of these principals, but merely a reduction, the degree of which is experimentally determined in each case. Such a dietary modification increases the life-span of the patient. In deficiency diseases, however, certain additions to the diet are imperative to prevent death; for example, pernicious anemia, scurvy and beriberi.

The new science of food has undertaken the task of offering mankind a menu of safety which will prolong life and maintain youthfulness. Briefly outlined, it consists of protein—to sustain tissue wear; carbohydrate and fat—for energy purposes; and an abundance of "protective" food substances, contained chiefly in green and leafy vegetables, raw fruit and dairy products. Milk furnishes elements not duplicated by any other food and one quart a day is often required. Glandular organs (liver, kidneys, sweet-breads, etc.) contain especially valuable proteins and their use explains the strength and productivity of meat-eating wild animals. This may be regarded as a "normal" diet, any departure from which requires definite reasons.

The human race at present knows a very great deal about what kinds of foods it should eat. This collective knowledge has been unconsciously garnered through the varied experience of centuries. The food customs of any given race merit the approval signified by the continued existence of that race. The past ages have shown man by a blind process of elimination the one important food precept—safety in variety, danger in specialization.

The modern study of food has wisely placed great stress on this idea of variety. Outstanding scholars in this field uphold in a broad sense, the dateless and habitual knowledge of the race as a whole. If ever there has been a grand experiment, conducted by myriads upon themselves as subjects, it is this ancient, trial-and-error enquiry by our ancestors and ourselves.

An special diet should be decided by a physician. A "normal" diet is generally best. Because the race has spent a million years learning what to eat, any individual presumes upon the biological intelligence of the race if, without real and imperative reasons, he deflects radically from what is racially approved.

A HISTORY OF CONNECTICUT INDUSTRY

Released by Manufacturers Association of Connecticut

American Woolen Company, Moosup Mills, Moosup

In 1810, a party of Rhode Island capitalists, among whom was William Almy, attended the Blodgett estate sale at Moosup, Conn., for the purpose of locating a suitable site for a manufacturing plant. But not until 1816 were any definite steps taken. After three years of developing and improving the necessary facilities, a six-set mill was started for the manufacture of broadcloth, under Mr. Almy's supervision.

At the death of William Almy, in 1840, his nephew, Sampson Almy, became heir and assumed the management of the mill. In 1853, many improvements were made for the manufacture of both woolen and cotton cloth. After managing both mills for several years, Sampson Almy leased the woolen department to William Russell, under whose management further improvements were made in the machinery, including the establishment of a plant for dyeing woolen yarns. At the death of William Russell, in 1856, Mr. Vagurburn continued to run the mill.

In 1859 Mr. Almy again leased the woolen department, this time to Mr. Dellebar, who manufactured cassimeres and army cloth. Mr. Dellebar was succeeded in 1864 by the Connecticut Woolen company, but owing to some misunderstanding the lease was revoked. After remaining idle some years the lease was secured by Sanderson & Crow, who manufactured fancy cassimeres. They were obliged to discontinue in 1873, owing to the business depression of that year. Operations were, however, resumed the following year under the management of A. Whipple; but in June, 1875, the entire woolen mill and a part of the cotton mill were destroyed by fire.

Not until the death of Sampson Almy were any steps taken to sell or rebuild the property. In 1879 David Aldrich and Edwin Milner, of the firm of Aldrich & Milner woolen manufacturers of Plainville, R. I., bought the entire estate and at one time built a mill on the old site for the manufacture of fancy cassimeres. At the death of Mr. Aldrich, in 1889, the firm was changed to Milner & Co.

In 1891 the Glens Falls Worsted mills were built by Mr. Milner for the purpose of supplying yarn for the woolen mill.

In May, 1899, both the woolen and worsted mills became connected with the American Woolen company, and are known as the Moosup mills.

Both mills are substantial stone structures, deriving their power from the Moosup river, having a fall at both plants of 17 feet, in addition to which each mill is provided with an engine capable of running the entire plant. The woolen or cloth mill has 85 broad looms and accessory machinery for the manufacture of woolen and worsted cloths.

The worsted or yarn mill has three sets of drawing and 5,448 spindles with accessory machinery for the manufacture of fine worsted yarn, which is, in part, consumed by the cloth mill.

The mills have ample storehouse accommodations and neat and comfortable cottages for the employes while the Providence and Willimantic branch of the New York, New Haven, and Hartford railroad nearby provides excellent freight facilities.

The plant at Moosup, known as the cloth mill, includes two manufacturing buildings, with additions, storehouses and office buildings.

The officers of the American Woolen company, owner of the Moosup mills are:

Andrew G. Pierce, president; Wheaton Kittredge, vice president; Parry C. Wiggin, vice president and comptroller; Wm. H. Dwelly, treasurer and clerk; Willard A. Currier, assistant treasurer; Fred G. Sherman assistant clerk; Moses Pendleton general manager.

DEATHS IN CONNECTICUT WERE 18,282 IN 1929

The department of commerce announces that there were 18,282 deaths in Connecticut during 1929 as compared with 17,938 in 1928.

No death rates for 1929 have been computed because any rates based on population estimates made at this time would be unreliable and would have to be materially revised as soon as the 1930 census figures become available.

Significant increases in the mortality from disease in the state are for diarrhea and enteritis among children under 2 years of age, which caused 252 deaths in 1929 as compared with 133 in 1928, the number almost doubled for persons over 2 years of age (rising from 39 in 1928 to 63 in 1929), for influenza (from 394 deaths in 1928 to 543 in 1929), and lethargic encephalitis (from 21 to 29 deaths). Other diseases which increased the mortality somewhat are diseases of the heart, cancer and other malignant tumors, meningitis (nonepidemic), meningococcus meningitis, and congenital malformations.

Considering decreases in proportion to the number of deaths, the greatest were for whooping cough (from 107 deaths in 1928 to 43 in 1929), acute anterior poliomyelitis (from 14 deaths in 1928 to 7 in 1929), diphtheria (from 85 to 61), and measles (from 70 to 51), followed by nephritis, tuberculosis of the respiratory system, and cerebral hemorrhage.

Of the accidental and undefined external causes, the greatest increases were from automobile accidents, accidental burns, and accidents by other vehicles. These increases were offset somewhat by decreases in railroad accidents, accidental shooting and other external causes.

Continuous increases in disease were from cancer and other malignant tumors (from 1,668 in 1926 to 1,902 in 1929), and diseases of the heart (3,522 in 1926 to 3,931 in 1929). These were offset to some extent by continuous decreases in scarlet fever (from 36 in 1926 to 13 in 1929), and tuberculosis of the meninges, central nervous system (from 69 in 1926 to 39 in 1929).

WITHDRAWAL IN APPEAL IN COMPENSATION CLAIM

The appeal taken by the Travelers Insurance Co., as insurer for the city of Norwich water department has been withdrawn from the superior court, according to papers filed with Clerk John H. Walker. The appeal was taken from a decision of Compensation Commissioner Albert J. Bailey of this city in allowing compensation to Miss Annie M. O'Neil, of 99 Lafayette street, whom the commissioner found was a dependent of John Donohue, a cousin. Donohue, an employe of the city water department, dropped dead on July 7 last, while engaged in digging a ditch at East Great Plain.

With the appeal vacated, Miss O'Neil will now receive compensation at the rate of $10.77 a week for a period not to exceed 312 weeks, besides being allowed $200 for funeral expenses.

The insurance company disputed the claim on the ground that Donohue did not die from injuries resulting out of and in the course of his employment.

DAN F. DRISCOLL'S SON MAKES GOOD IN DENTISTRY

Waterbury papers note that Dr. Edward P. Driscoll has opened dental offices in that city and recount the preparation and experience which the young man has had in his chosen profession. He is the older of the two sons of Daniel F. Driscoll, a once prominent baseball player of Norwich, and Isabelle Murphy, a native of Montville. Dr. Driscoll was born in New Haven, was graduated from the high school there, then from Georgetown University, where he remained as a member of the faculty for three years. He also gained valuable experience in the Gallinger Municipal hospital, Washington, before coming to Waterbury where he has been head of the dental clinic at St. Mary's hospital for nine months. He was bacteriologist at Georgetown Infirmary for a year.

The successful young dentist is a nephew of Patrolman Timothy J. Driscoll, of East Cliff street., also of John W. Burke, of Elmwood avenue, Norwich.

NEW HAVEN R. R. NET $5.85 FOR TEN MONTHS

Earnings of the New Haven railroad for October are estimated at 90 cents a share on the common stock, making net for the ten months of the year equivalent to approximately $5.85 a share on the common, according to a statement by J. J. Pelley, president of the company.

Earnings thus far in the current year are only 15 cents below the annual dividend requirements of the common stock. In the corresponding period of last year the New Haven had a net income of $17,525,671, or $9.02 a share, against $12,184,495, or $5.45 a share, in the first ten months of 1928.

"Gross for October," Mr. Pelley declared, "totaled about $10,000,000, a decline of about $3,000,000 from 1929. Approximately $550,000 of the decrease in gross is due to inclusion of that amount of non-recurring income in October, 1929, for back mail pay and a greater division of loop traffic.

"October traffic," he continued, "was the heaviest of any month this year except May and showed an increase in loadings of 10,136 cars over the preceding month. The decrease in loadings from a year ago was 23.2 per cent in October, against 23.9 per cent for September and 23.2 per cent for August."

November traffic on the New Haven is showing about the same decline from last year as October, he said. Last year the road had a good final quarter, and business for the first few months of the current year was also good. It is expected that for the full year of 1930 earnings will be between $7 and $8 a share on the common stock.

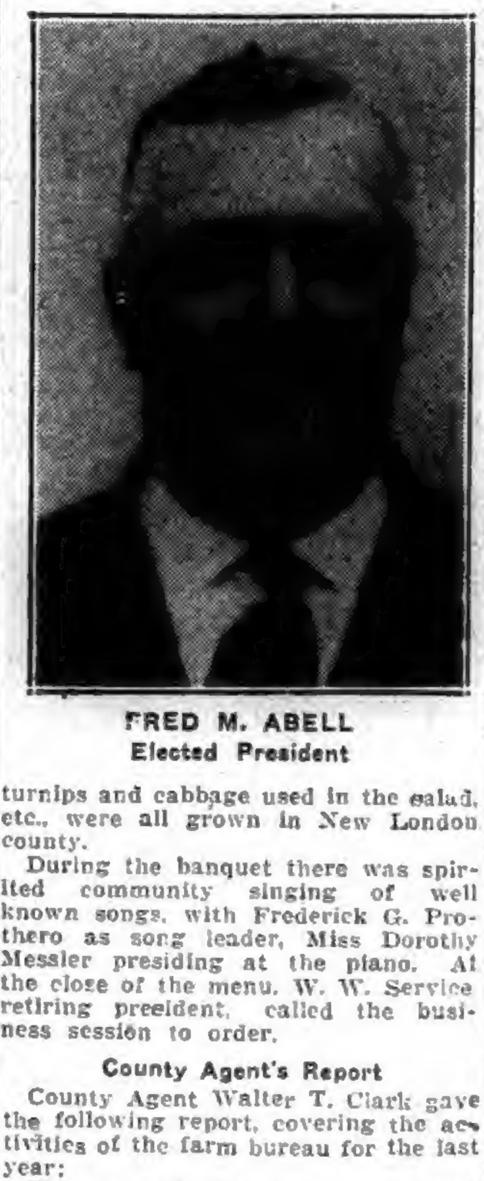
FARM BUREAU REPORTS ITS MOST ACTIVE YEAR; ELECTS OFFICERS

Fred M. Abell of Lebanon was Friday evening elected president of the New London County Farm bureau at the bureau's annual meeting at the Masonic temple. Nearly 350 members of the bureau, men and women, representing every town in New London county attended the meeting which was preceeded by a banquet at 7 o'clock. As far as possible New London county grown products were used in the roast turkey menu, prepared by Mrs. William Walker and her assistants. The turkey, potatoes, turnips and cabbage used in the salad, etc., were all grown in New London county.



FRED M. ABELL
Elected President

During the banquet there was spirited community singing of well known songs, with Frederick G. Prothero as song leader, Miss Dorothy Messler presiding at the piano. At the close of the menu, W. W. Service retiring president, called the business session to order.

County Agent's Report

County Agent Walter T. Clark gave the following report, covering the activities of the farm bureau for the last year:

The year 1930 has been one of the outstanding years in the history of the New London County Farm bureau. To start with our membership has been the largest we have ever had but more than this the interest in all farm bureau activities has been greater than at any time during the past eight years, at least. Interest in these activities by the farm folks has also created interest in farm bureau activities on the part of the urban population who seem to be taking notice more than ever in what the bureau is doing. This tends to bring a better understanding between the county and city.

The agricultural programme for New London county has been built as far as possible upon the economic needs of the agriculture of the county.

The principal agricultural industry of the county, of course, is dairying and its related projects such as crops and farm management, so of course, the largest amount of time was spent upon these.

There has been a very striking increase in the pasture improvement and alfalfa programmes during the past year. When not few, but many, farmers improve pasture in several acre units it is a good indication that they really see the value in such a program.

Alfalfa, I believe has gone beyond the experimental stage in New London county for we have several dairy farmers who are increasing their acreage by five and ten acre units each year. They find it no more difficult than raising grass hays and much more profitable. During the past year in order to do all this pasture improvement and alfalfa growing it is estimated that around 129 cars of lime were shipped into the county. There was the largest alfalfa pasture tour ever held in the county.

The outsanding dairy prospect has been the starting of the proven sire programme which is a long time programme and will mean much to the dairy industry of New London county.

Our poultry programme has been a continuation of the Grow, Healthy Chix programme in a varified way and also related to that closely was the "More eggs per bird programme." Along with this last there were 70,000 birds inoculated for chicken pox.

We had an exceptionally fine poultry tour to Windham county when more than 150 from the county attended.

The New London county fruit programme was aimed at growing better quality with reference to controlling insects and disease. The telephone spray service according to the growers themselves was the most valuable service they have yet had. Thirty-two growers received this service.

The vegetable industry in the county, although small compared with some of the most important projects in our agricultural programme and perhaps received undue amount of attention is marketing. We have worked with the E. C. P. P. in building up the membership in New London county. There seems to be more interest in this organization than there has ever been.

Perhaps one of the best means of getting our dairy programme across is with the C. M. P. A. Their fall and spring meetings have been good places to tell of our programme.

There have been other minor projects such as forestry, rural engineering which have received attention, especially forestry.

Our 1931 dairy crops and farm management programme will be based entirely on facts gathered by a recent dairy survey from which the programmes will be formulated by a group of representative New London county farmers.

At this time I wish to thank all directors and local people who have aided in promoting the agricultural programme and making the past year a banner one for New London County Farm bureau. There is no reason why the coming year should not be even greater than the past one.

Club Agent's Report

A report of the activities of the boys and girls clubs in New London county was given by the club agent, Randolph W. Whaples. He said in his report:

Before saying anything about the agricultural clubs in the county I will mention a few of the general 4-H club activities that our club members have taken part in during the past year.

A few of the more important of these activities are as follows:

County radio program in which forty members took part. Program of general club work for Women's City club. Senior 4-H club members conference held at Storrs. Junior short course held at Storrs. New London county camp held at Avery Pond, Preston. County club exhibit held at No. Stonington Grange fair. County 4-H club round-up. National club camp. International Leader training school, Camp Vail.

Handicraft—Handicraft work was tried for the first time this year. We believe there is a place for it in our programme and will probably increase this project during 1931.

Sheep—This project has increased during the year. We have replaced two scrub bucks with purebreds and have doubled our membership in this project. We will probably go ahead slowly as we do not feel that this is the time to push it.

Garden—While we enrolled 125 members in garden club work we do not feel at all satisfied with the garden club project due to the fact that all of it is not organized on a club basis and as a result we do not have a close enough contact through local leaders with the work. This being true we find it exceedingly difficult to get project reports from the members. Nevertheless we had larger and better vegetable and flower exhibits this year than ever before. Our demonstration teams placed first and second in state contest while members taking part in state judging contest placed second, third and fourth.

Dairy—Dairy project shows an increase of two clubs over last year. Several boys in the seven clubs have bought better stock. We held our regular state judging trip to select our county team. The judging team members were young and inexperienced and did not place very high in state competition. Our demonstration team placed second in the state contest.

Poultry—At the present time we have about 140 poultry club members; this is quite an increase over last year. We have put more emphasis on poultry than any other agricultural project. Last spring our club members bought about 8,000 accredited chicks. During the year we have had 100 members in the junior egg laying contest, Michael Hracyk of Montville was the winner of this contest with an average of 211 eggs per bird.

Raymond Allen of Hanover was recently judged the outstanding poultry club boy in the state so far as economic production of poultry products is concerned and as a result wins a free trip to the International 4-H Club Congress at Chicago. Paul Holdridge of Ledyard stood second to Raymond.

Seventy-five boys have improved their poultry houses this year. Several of the members have been following the eight point grow healthy chix programme and as a result have lowered their chic mortality. We feel that if the boys get good stock to start with, follow the eight point grow healthy chix programme, put the pullets in improved houses, manage them well during the year, they should get more eggs per bird—more eggs per bird means more cash returns per bird which in turn means better satisfied and more enthusiastic club members.

If we have made any progress in club work in the county this year it is due to the efforts of our local leaders, interested parents and ambitious boys and girls.

Home Demonstration Report

The home demonstration agent, Miss Ruth T. Russell, covered, briefly, the activities in her department of the farm year for 1930, saying:

Our home demonstration programme for the past year has been carried on in 26 groups and has covered subjects asked for by the women in their groups.

In our food work we made use of one commercial demonstrator and this with our regular food programme which emphasizes the use of much vegetable and fruit has, we hope, helped toward a better understanding of food and its relation to health and as a result we hope that healthier menus have been served to the families of New London county.

For our health work Miss Macdon-

INJURIES IN FALL FATAL TO G. HERBERT RICH

G. Herbert Rich, widely known violinist, died at the W. W. Backus hospital shortly before 2:30 o'clock Friday morning as the result of injuries sustained when he fell down the elevator shaft at the Central building, Broadway, two hours previous. Death, according to Dr. C. C. Gildersleeve, medical examiner, was caused by multiple injuries.

Mr. Rich, who had entertained a group of friends in his apartment on the top floor of the Central building, escorted his guests to the elevator, intending to take them to the ground floor. Having borrowed the key to the elevator doors, he unlocked the doors, and, believing that the elevator was at that level, where he had left it earlier in the evening, stepped into the shaft and fell to the ground floor, landing on top of the elevator.

An emergency call was sent to the police department and several officers responded immediately. Officer Edward Burns went down the shaft from the second story, via the elevator cable, and raised the injured man to Officer Joseph Farrell, who pulled him up to the second floor. Officer Patrick F. Shahan and others placed him in the police stretcher and he was rushed to the Backus hospital in the police patrol.

Mr. Rich was semi-conscious when taken from the shaft but became unconscious shortly afterwards and sank rapidly, death claiming him shortly before 2:30 o'clock at the hospital.

In the meantime a call for help was sent by telephone to the central fire station and Squad A and Deputy Chief Dennis J. Brennan responded.

Mr. Rich was born in Norwich, Dec 8, 1851, the son of George W. and Frances Schinger Rich. With the exception of a short time spent in New London and several years in Baltimore, Md., Mr. Rich had always made his home in this city. Early in life his musical talent was developed and his study of the violin brought him recognition as one of the most accomplished violinists of the city. For many years he appeared with theatre orchestras here, often as the feature soloist whose playing was a delight to appreciative music lovers of the city. In Baltimore, too, his musical ability was recognized and he became one of the leading musicians of that city. He showed ability also as a composer, was a well known teacher of the violin and a member of the Musicians' union.

In Norwich, Dec. 7, 1906, he was united in marriage with Levina Bruette, Rev. Lester L. West of the Second Congregational church performing the ceremony. Surviving are his widow and one son, Herbert L. Rich. Mr. Rich was highly respected by his numerous friends and acquaintances, who were deeply shocked to hear of his tragic death.

MISS JESSIE GIBSON ENDS 34 YEARS AT COUNTY HOME

After 34 years with the New London County Home for Children at Norwich, the past 21 years as matron and superintendent, Miss Jessie Gibson concluded her term of faithful and efficient service there Wednesday, Nov. 12. Her resignation was tendered to the county commissioners July 1. For two weeks she is visiting her brother, Eugene Gibson, of the P. & M. store, at his home at Trading Cove, before leaving to reside with her sister, Mrs. C. E. Jones, 88 Beaufort street, Providence, R. I.

Miss Gibson was appointed matron to succeed Mrs. Brown, who moved to Central Village, the appointment having been made through the late County Commissioner Gilbert L. Hewitt of Norwich and John T. Batty of Mystic. She has cared for a body of boys and girls averaging from 60 to 102 in number and of ages varying from 4 to 15. Not only has she trained her charges to become useful and efficient, but she has been most particular to see that they have had the proper training religiously. Every Sunday they were sent either to St. Mary's Catholic church or the Central Baptist Sunday school, while each week Sisters of Mercy from St. Mary's convent have gone to the home to give the Catholic children instruction in their religion.

Miss Gibson has ever worked in harmony with the three teachers in the day school at the home. Many of the pupils have gone on to higher institutions of learning and a very good proportion of the total has turned out successful and useful citizens and residents of this and other towns. In public places, at their outings to the shore and elsewhere, the body of children under the supervision of Miss Gibson and her four assistants invariably won attention, so well behaved, quiet and obedient did they prove. Miss Gibson has been a woman of a few words, but the children sensed from the first that when she spoke it meant obedience on their part. The children have been kept healthy and happy, well fed and well cared for, in a remarkable degree, the matron's work earning the warmest commendation from successive boards of county commissioners, local visitors and state officials.

Her successor, Dr. Eveline Dickinson, from New York, has begun her duties at the recently completed new home on Laurel Hill road, Norwich.

SCOUTMASTERS' ROUND TABLE TO HEAR REV. ABBOTT

According to the local scout headquarters, the fourth session of the training course will be held next Wednesday evening at room 215 Thayer building, with Rev. A. H. Abbott as the principal speaker. Mr. Abbott will discuss with the scouters some phase of the Boy Scout program with which he is most familiar.

A feature of this meeting will be a regular session of the Scoutmaster's round table with Will Collins presiding. Among the important matters to be discussed by the round table will be the building of a cabin for winter use. Surveyed maps of the new site will be shown the men and a tentative sketch of a developed camp with mess hall, parade ground, eight tent houses, athletic field, etc., will be discussed.

Robert W. Perkins, donor of the use of the land to the scouts, President H. D. Larrabee and members of the Boy Scout board are desirous that work proceed as quickly as possible on the camp and have promised to give every encouragement to the scouts and scouters in their efforts to put up shelters on the land.

The fourth session of the training course although first planned to have been an observation meeting of a scout troop in Hartford has been changed to the Norwich meeting because it has been found that no Hartford troop suitable for observation meets on Wednesday evening. According to the scout executive the observation meeting will be held later on in the course and at New London.

C. Y. James is also scheduled to appear Wednesday night for a five to ten minute talk on "The Work of the Troop Organization Committee." Among other speakers who are scheduled to appear later in the course are Rev. J. J. Reilly, Scout Executive Gerald Higgins, and Scout Executive Fred Burdick.

The training course is opened to any man in Norwich interested in boys.

SCOUTS RECEIVE RESPONSE TO CALL FOR LUMBER

In answer to the call for gifts of lumber and windows and other things usable in the construction of a cabin, Dr. W. T. Browne and Mrs. Browne responded by giving to the Boy Scouts several solid doors, windows, pipes and lumber. The scouts will greatly appreciate learning of other materials which can be used in the construction of a cabin. Flooring, roofing, and lumber is still needed.

SCOUTS ARE ASKED TO DISTRIBUTE FOOD

A quantity of food has been turned in to the local scout office for distribution and scouts are asked to turn in the names of poor families or to come to the local headquarters and get the food and take it to families in need of food.

Every scout is asked to either bring a scythe, axe or hoe. The scouts will spend an hour in cutting the road through to the river. The remainder of the afternoon will be spent in games and exploring the far end of the camp.

Scouts are urged to bring their cameras along. For the first scout to catch a face to face picture of a deer a Boy Scout camera will be awarded and for the scout turning in the best dozen photos properly mounted, a Christmas Scout camera will be awarded.

According to the scout executive, the two large boats will be removed from Camp Wakenah next week and will be taken to the new camp site.

Dr. R. R. Agnew has challenged the scouts and scoutmasters to build a cabin 12 by 20 before the winter cold comes. According to Dr. Agnew many of the materials for the cabin already have been promised and more will doubtless be forthcoming as soon as Norwich Boy Scouts friends realize that old lumber roofing, etc., is needed to build the cabin.

Time permitting, the scouts will again perform the ever thrilling adventure of fording the river to explore the land on the opposite shore. Fording the river requires careful selection of the best spot to jump from rock to rock. Too often a scout finds himself two-thirds of the way across the river which is very shallow when he is forced to return to find a better rock path.

The new site has been surveyed and tentative plans call for the building of a cabin, a boat house and a lean-to at the earliest convenience of the scout men and scouts.

CANZONERI KNOCKS OUT SINGER IN FIRST TO WIN LIGHTWEIGHT TITLE

By Edward J. Neil
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

MADISON SQUARE GARDEN, NEW YORK, Nov. 14—(AP)—Quicker than he won the crown, quicker almost than the eye could follow, Young Al Singer was stripped of his lightweigth title tonight by Tony Canzoneri, brisk little Italian who started his fantastic fight career as a bootblack in the streets of New Orleans.

Singer, hailed as the new Benny Leonard when he crushed Sammy Mandell in a single round last August to mount the 135-pound throne, lasted only two real punches and one minute and six seconds against the attack of the former featherweight champion. Tony nailed the sleek Jewish lad with one left hook to the chin, whanged him again, and the battle was over in the first round of what started out to be a fifteen round match.

The "viewers with alarm" became very busy the minute Singer hit the floor, as busy as they were when Mandell, a pale, lifeless ghost of himself, was battered into senselessness by Singer in something over two minutes last summer. The crowd of about 16,000 rose and booed, howling Singer from the ring. Though they cheered the exit of Canzoneri, the new king. Heads have been waggling over rumors for days and there were reports of a betting coup when Singer entered the ring a 2½ to 1 favorite.

As for the fight itself there was so little action as to be hardly understandable. Singer, apparently in splendid shape, sidled from his corner to Tony, a grinning miniature of Babe Ruth from shoulders to the top of his kinkly hair, danced toward him. They met in the center of the ring, sparred cautiously. Fell into a clinch, and pounded each others ribs in desultory fashion. They boxed in the open again without landing a blow, fell together, and once more swung apart.

The big crowd, almost a capacity throng, waited tensely for something to happen. Then when it seemed certain that nothing was going to break through the cautiousness for awhile at least, the roof of Singer's championship castle suddenly smashed right down upon his head.

Canzoneri drew back from a clinch, crouched, and swung a round-house left hook to the jaw. It landed flush on the side of Singer's head, the first genuine punch of the fight. Al staggered forward pulled himself together, bobbed under the next left hook, but took the the third squarely on the button. He flopped down on his face, came to one knee, apparently recovered at the count of seven, and then flopped over, on his back. He wound up on the ledge outside the ring ropes and pulled himself to his feet there long after Johnny McAvoy, the referee had counted him out. The crowd sat stunned for a moment, started a cheer and wound up booing lustily.

The knockout of Singer, amazing as was its suddenness, probably means the end of the flashy youngster's big league fighting career, although he is only 21. The Jewish youngster soared with amazing suddenness to the top but a questionable bit of judgment sent him into a battle with Jimmy McLarnin, the Vancouver welterweight hitter, a few months after he conquered Mandell. McLarnin knocked him out and the effects of the beating he took that night seem still to be lingering with Singer.

The knockout marked the third time in lightweight history that the title has changed hands in the first round. Joe Gans, the immortal, knocked out Frankie Erne in less than a minute in Fort Erie, N. Y., about 25 years ago and Singer wiped out Mandell in a round last summer. The victory for Canzoneri, barrel-chested little Italian, brought the title back to the race that has dominated the throne room of the lightweights since Benny Leonard stepped out of the picture several years ago. Rocky Kansas, who whipped a tournament champion, Jimmy Goodrich, was an Italian and Mandell, a conqueror of Kansas, also hailed from the land of the Alps.

Canzoneri's lack of support tonight was due entirely to his poor showing in recent bouts. He lost a decision in a title go with Mandell, was beaten by Billy Petrolle, and badly whipped by Jackie Kid Berg. Tony, who is just won the featherweight championship in a match with Benny Bass in February of 1928 and then lost the title a few months later to Andre Routis, of France. He is one of the most pleasing performers in this ring, a busy, pleasant, two-fisted workman, whose chief trouble has been in saving something for the latter rounds after punching his way out front early in his major battles.

Singer had a slight advantage in the weights, scaling 134 to Canzoneri's 132.

HARVARD TO GO AFTER GAME WITH HOLY CROSS

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Nov. 14—(AP)—The banged and battered Harvard football team, defeated three times and tied in its last four starts, will throw everything it has to defeat the Holy Cross Crusaders here tomorrow in the 15th meeting between the Crimson and Purple.

Tradition and the Crusaders' record to date demand a hard fought and well played game. Every available Harvard regular will be in the starting lineup against the light but shifty McEwan coached players, who have enjoyed some success this season with Warner methods They appear to have a much better running attack than Harvard, which bowed to Army, Dartmouth and Michigan because it did not possess a reliable power play to use deep in enemy territory.

It is likely that Arnold Horween has changed much of Harvard's offense since the Michigan defeat and he will probably try most of his new stuff against Holy Cross. Both teams worked out on their own practice gridirons today, the Crimson going through a final drill. Holy Cross is not due in Cambridge until just before game time.

SEVEN AGGIE PLAYERS MAKE FINAL APPEARANCE

(Special to The Bulletin.)

STORRS, Nov. 14.—Seven members of the Connecticut Aggie football squad will don their orange jerseys for the last time tomorrow when the Aggies wind up their gridiron season here with Rhode Island State College.

Sam Harger of Hartford, has played as regular varsity fullback for the last three years and was captain and fullback of the freshman eleven in 1927. Weighing more than 190 pounds, this husky youth has proven himself a consistent ground-gainer since his Weaver high school days. Herman Libutzke is another senior from Hartford and as a guard has been outstanding as a strong point in the Aggie line since his freshman days.

Jim Moore and Jim Williams are two seniors from Norwich, who have been invaluable as members of the Nutmeg eleven. Moore has been a tower of strength in the line, serving as regular center last year and the first part of this season until he was shifted to the position of left guard in the Coast Guard game. Williams, after playing as quarterback of the Norwich Free Academy eleven for four years has proven himself a decided asset to the Aggie backfield. Light and shifty, he will long be remembered for the flashy work as a ball carrier.

Charley Murphy of Putnam as a halfback and captain of this year's aggregation has shown himself to be a combination of speed and brains. When he leads the team for the last time tomorrow, he will show himself to be one of the Aggies' greatest threats against Rhode Island. He has been outstanding as a receiver of passes.

"Rusty" Glennon of New Haven, is another senior who will play his final game tomorrow. Until recently when he was shifted to center he alternated with Harger in the position of fullback. As center he has shown himself to be a bulwark in the line.

"Pat" Storrs is a local youth who, by virtue of his weight and strength, has been outstanding as a regular guard and will be a mainstay in the Aggie line in his final game tomorrow.

Today's practice consisted mainly of a light signal drill. The starting lineup for tomorrow will be:

Juringuis le, Storrs lt, Moore clg, Glennon c, Yesukiewicz rg, Hakanson rt, Eddy re, DeRosa qb, Zararella lhb, Murphy rhb, Harger fb.

STEVENS RETAINED AS HEAD COACH AT YALE

NEW HAVEN, Nov. 14.—(AP)— The Yale A. A. tonight announced that Dr. Marvin A. Stevens, better known to football followers as Mal Stevens, has been re-engaged as head football coach at Yale for next year.

To many the announcement came somewhat as a surprise, since the Eli mentor, who is completing his third year as head coach at Yale, had been reported as planning to abandon football at the end of the present season to devote his entire time to the practice of medicine.

Coach Stevens was placed in charge of Yale football in 1928 as successor to Tad Jones. At the time he was given a three-year contract. The present contract is for one year.

The Yale coach played on Yale's crack football team of 1923 which was captained by Bill Mallory. He was graduated from Yale university in 1925 and from the Yale Medical school four years later.

Another championship has changed hands in a manner not entirely to the satisfaction of the fight faithful. Tony Canzoneri, former New Orleans bootblack, today wears the lightweight crown which he toppled from the brow of Al Singer in a little over a minute last night. Singer had worn the crown a little over three months The quick manner in which the title changed hands left the crowd stunned and not a little suspicious that the bout was in the bag. While no one would say in so many words that there was a dark gentleman in the fire-wood many quoted the odds of 2 1-2 to 1 on Singer with a knowing wink.

Singer looke dthe pink of perfection in the ring and his sudden knockout was one of the surprises of the season. From his showing against Mandell last August and the poor showing of Canzoneri in recent bouts had installed Singer as the top-heavy favorite. McLarnin's quick kayo of Singer only recently may have had its psychological effect on Singer in tonight's bout. But even at that it seems as though Singer should have made a much better showing than he did. As is customary in all bouts there is the wail of "fixed bout" from those who picked 'em wrong.

Today, the Academy tackles Stonington and local supporters of the old school, or what's left of them, are anxious to see if the boys have improved under the augmented coaching system. During the latter part of the week Paul Bitgood, former football star and college coach, has been assisting Head Coach Whitney with the team. Bitgood has been devoting his attention to the line where strength has been sorely needed.

With Yale playing at Princeton today many of the local football followers will trek to Storrs to get a glimpse of Ken Goff, one of the country's outstanding backfield men. Goff should run wild against the Aggies who are not up to their standard this year. And then again it maybe a case of where a weak team rises to unsuspected heights and pulls the David and Goliath act. We shall see.

Volleyball gets its start this afternoon at the local Y. M. C. A. with the locals clashing with the Ansonia team. Volleyball, though not popular with the mass, is quite some game and is going over big in other cities. A look in at the game this afternoon should be worthwhile.

LYMAN HARRIERS WIN FROM AGGIE FRESHMEN

The Lyman high cross-country team won its second meet this week, by defeating the Connecticut Aggie freshmen over a three mile course at Storrs, yesterday. Howard, of the Lebanon team, finished first, followed by Williams and Gibennan of the freshman team in second and third places respectively. Greenbero, Lebanon runner, finished fourth, with Spellacy and Bartizek, both Lebanon runners, in fifth and sixth positions. The last man to count for Lyman was N. Manning, who finished eighth.

Time 17:33. Timer Dietrich. Scorer Hinckley.

ACADEMY MEETS STONINGTON HERE TODAY IN SECOND LAST GAME

The Academy's football team will meet Stonington high this afternoon at the campus in the eighth of its nine-game schedule, hoping for a turn in the fortunes that have decreed five straight setbacks to the Wilcats after they had won the first two games on the schedule.

Today's conference battle, the fourth of the five on the local schedule, and, although Westerly, by virtue of its victory over Stonington Armistice day, copped the title for the second straight year, there will be some slight consolation for the other five teams in the circuit to finish in the runner-up position. At present the Academy stands just a hairs-breadth ahead of the last place Chapman Tech team. Wildcats having two points against Tech's one, but by winning the remaining two games, the locals can increase their points to six and just horn in on second place ahead of Windham, which has closed its conference campaign and has five points. Stonington has three points with one game to go, so that the best Coach Smith's lads can get is five points, which would just tie Windham.

The present conference standing:

	W	L	T	Pts.
Westerly	4	0	0	8
Windham	2	2	1	5
Bulkeley	1	1	1	3
Stonington	0	1	3	3
N. F. A.	1	2	0	2
Chapman Tech	0	2	1	1

The Academy has been making an extensive drive during the week in a final effort to make something of the dying campaign. Paul Bitgood, former Conn. Aggie star, who also attended Springfield college, and is the present physical director at the school, has been assisting Coach Whitney with the team during the week in an attempt to register victories over Stonington and Bulkeley, which would leave the final tally at four victories and five defeats. The Academy should outweigh Stonington slightly today, but Stonington has been holding its own all season against heavier clubs, as shown by its record of only two defeats, one by two points at the hands of South Kingstown and the other by one touchdown from Westerly.

Word comes from Stonington that they expect victory today as a means of revenge for the 6-0 setback last year in Stonington. Last year's Academy season closely resembles the present one, for after getting away to a good start, the Wildcats hit the doldrums until the last two games when they beat Stonington and Bulkeley and finished with three wins and six losses. Maybe the team has enough of a kick left yet to make both the Bear and Tiger jump through the loop again this year. The game will start at 2.30.

At New London today, Bulkeley and Chapman Tech will be engaged in their annual tussle for the city championship. This game is also a conference affair. Windham is closing its season with Manchester this afternoon at Recreation park, in Windham's objective game.

SONNENBERG THROWS STASIAK TWICE IN TWO MINUTES

HARTFORD, Nov. 14.—(AP) — Gus Sonnenberg, claimant of the world heavyweight wrestling championship, successfully defended his title tonight, winning two out of three falls from Stanley Stasiak, of Boston. Stasiak won the first fall in 28.53. Sonnenberg won the second fall in 40 seconds and the third in one minute, 40 seconds. Sonnenberg won both his falls with flying tackles.

Jack Ganson, Lithuanian champion, threw Leo Hyatt in 33:16, using a leg split and Fred Bruno, of Hartford, won a referee's decision over Paul Adams, of Boston, after 30 minutes of wrestling. Eddie Shayboo, navy matman, won from Billy Brooks, of Hartford, with a scissors and bar lock in 16:30.

C. expects to add another to its already long list of victories. TWO IMPORTANT GAMES ON TODAY'S EASTERN GRIDIRON PROGRAMME

By Ted Vosburgh

NEW YORK, Nov. 14—(AP)—The first battle of the season between football forces of the east and far west will share interest on the eastern front tomorrow with a series of colorful rivalries headed by the 54th annual clash between the Tiger of Princeton and the Bulldoy of Yale.

Slip Madigan's big team from little St. Mary's college of Oakland, Calif., will carry the standard of the Pacific coast into action against one of the east's most powerful teams at the Polo grounds where the galloping Gaels will attempt to hand Fordham its first defeat since 1928.

In another major intersectional struggle in eastern territory, the Pennsylvania eleven that ran afoul of the Notre Dame whirlwind a week ago will collide with Georgia Tech at Philadelphia while the Navy entertains one of the best teams in all the southwest when it takes on Southern Methodist at Baltimore.

All three of these games are in the "toss-up" class but in most of the duels between traditional rivals there is a district favorite.

In the case of Yale and Princeton the margin is overwhelming in favor of the Bulldog in view of the Tigers' dismal record of four defeats, one tie and one victory over a small college foe.

The general feeling is that Yale will win about as it pleases, probably using its ace quarterback, Albie Booth, only sparingly with an eye to the big test with Harvard the following week.

In spite of this the game is expected to draw a crowd of 50,000 to Palmer stadium at Princeton, where many dyed-in-the-wool Tiger fans hope to see the orange and black work a football miracle at the expense of the blue by way of a fitting valedictory for the retiring coach, Bill Roper.

Dartmouth, invading Ithaca for its 14th game with Cornell since 1900, also will be favored although not by any one-sided margin.

Syracuse will be decidedly the underdog as the Orange entertains Colgate for the 32nd time since these up-state New York rivals first meet in 1891. But Coach Vic Hanson has been pointing for this game all season and if he can imbue his charges with some of the fighting spirit that marked his own playing days Syracuse supporters foresee a chance of an upset.

Harvard's hard-luck team, after losing hair-line decisions to Dartmouth, Army and Michigan, expects to get back on the winning road against Coach John J. McEwan's Holy Cross array, although not without a real struggle.

Columbia, low in man-power and with its one star player, Ralph Hewitt, apparently destined to be out of the game with injuries, is given only the slimmest of outside chances against Brown at Providence.

Georgetown, although not the favorite, has jinxed New York university before and may do it again at the Yankee stadium, having steadied in recent weeks and felled the strong Michigan State and Boston college teams.

Lehigh team fresh from its first victory on record over Princeton tackles a dangerous Rutgers eleven built around the spectacular Grossman, in a game that has many years of tradition behind it.

Among the intersectional contests are the Army's anticipated "breather" with Kentucky Wesleyan at West Point; a game between Villanova and Oglethorpe, two of the best small college teams of the east and south, at Villanova, Pa., and on foreign fields the attempts of Penn State to stop Iowa and of Pittsburgh to repeat its victory of last year over Ohio State.

Other games worth seeing are the Amherst-Williams tussle for "Little Three" honors at Amherst and in Pennsylvania the struggles between Temple and Lafayette, Washington-Jefferson and Bucknell and Geneva and Duquesne.

Such games as Union-Hamilton, Wesleyan-Bowdoin, Springfield-New Hampshire and Muhlenberg-Gettysburg carry plenty of regional appeal.

Western Maryland, unbeaten and untied, expects no trouble in keeping its slate clean against Mt. St. Mary's at Westminster, Md.

Laurel Hill Bulldogs Victorious

The Laurel Hill Bulldogs defeated the Laurel Hill school in a hard game Friday afternoon by the score of 6-0. The Laurel Hill Bulldogs' lineup is: Aubrey, le; Genett, lt; Connell, lg; c, Polaskie; Duane, rg; Fraser, rt; Hoelck, re; Waters, qb; Lane, lhb; Henchey, rhb; Evens, fb.

Aubrey made the touchdown for the winners. The only pass completed was caught by Henchey. W. Chapman and K. Chapman starred for the losers. Evans and Lane starred for the winners.

WINDHAM CLASHES WITH SO. MANCHESTER TODAY

(Special to The Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, Nov. 14.—Windham high school will engage South Manchester high in its swan song game of the local football season at Recreation park Saturday afternoon. The game is scheduled for 2:15 o'clock and it is expected that the biggest crowd of the year will be on hand. The visiting team will have the backing of about 200 rooters. The outcome of this battle will determine the success of the local team and with this issue at stake Manchester will do well to beware. A win over Norwich Free Academy plus one over Manchester will spell success in large letters for the Crimson and Blue and the bid is good, for Windham will enter the fray with its strongest lineup, including the return of Nick Twerdy and Brick Jordan, regular linesmen, who have been out of the past few games with injuries. Coach Thomas A. Callaghan appeared confident today and predictions ran high for victory by touchdowns.

LONDOS THROWS MANISH IN UNOFFICIAL TITLE BOUT

Philadelphia, Nov. 14—(AP)— Jim Londos, St. Louis claimant of the world's heavyweight wrestling championship, threw George Manish, of New York, in 42 minutes, 46 seconds, in the windup at the Arena tonight. Londos used a crotch hold and Japanese headlock to pin the challenger's shoulders to the mat.

Ray Steele, California, downed Nick Valcoff, New York, with a double elbow hold in 23 minutes, 12 seconds; Dr. Ralph Wilson, Philadelphia, threw Paul Harper, Texas, in 14 minutes, 7 seconds with a flying tackle, and Rudy Dusek, Omaha, and Pat O'Shocker, Salt Lake City, wrestled 30 minutes to a draw decision.

NOTRE DAME-ALL STARS GAME ON SUNDAY, DEC. 14

NEW YORK, Nov. 14.—(AP)—The benefit football game between the Notre Dame all stars, led by Knute Rockne, and the New York Giants of the National Football league, will be played here Sunday, Dec. 14, instead of on Dec. 13, it was announced tonight.

The game was set back one day to make room for the meeting between the Army and Navy. Rockne has agreed to the shift in date and said he would get his team together for practice at South Bend a week before the contest.

WESTERLY LOSES FIRST GAME OF THE SEASON

(Special to The Bulletin)

APPONAUG, R. I., Nov. 14.—Westerly high football team lost its first game in eight starts here this afternoon when Warwick high pushed over a touchdown and converted the extra point in the first quarter and was able thereafter to hold some serious Westerly threats in check, the score being 7 to 0. The score came as the result of a long pass which brought the ball up to within the shadow of the goal and it was immediately rushed over.

Westerly, which had played a hard game Tuesday with Stonington, still possesses one of the best records in both Rhode Island and eastern Connecticut and hopes to win its remaining two games with Chapman Tech on Friday, Nov. 21, and Stonington again Thanksgiving, and finish with the very good mark of nine victories and one defeat. Today's defeat was probably a case of too much football in one week.

This team had been pointing to an undefeated season for only the second time in the history of the school. The other occasion was in the 1917 campaign when ten games were copped.

OCKFORDS MEET BEARS IN CRUCIAL GAME SUNDAY

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Nov. 14.— Sunday afternoon, at Mercer field, the climax of the local football season will be reached when the Ockfords, one of the leading semi-pro clubs in the state, tackle the Coast Guard Bears, top-notch service organization, for the city championship. The game, which starts at 2:30 o'clock, is expected to draw the capacity audience of the season.

In the line-up of the undefeated Ockfords, who have won five and tied three games, are four Norwich boys who have contributed much to the success of the club. They are Big Boy Moores, center; Jim Gay, end; Frank Herberts, halfback, and Butch Mileski, guard.

O'Brien Kayoes Forester

BRIDGEPORT, Nov. 14.—(AP)—Irish Jimmy O'Brien, 148, of Bridgeport, won by a technical knockout over Eddie Forester, 141, of Paterson, N. J., in the seventh round here tonight in the feature bout of the Puritan A. A. Forester badly injured his right hand.

In the semi-final, Frankie Oben, 139, New York, outpointed Willie Lewis, 1[illegible], Stamford in eight rounds. Billy Bridges, 135, Norwalk, defeated Jimmy Scott, 137, Bridgeport, in another eight rounder. Lou Piquette, 126, Bridgeport, won by a decision over Joe DeAndrea, Stamford, 126, in a four rounder, and Billy Sunard, 136, Portchester, outpointed Joe Monte, 136, New York, in another four rounder.

ARMY AND NAVY DECIDE ON DEC 13 AS DATE FOR BENEFIT GRID GAME

NEW YORK, Nov. 14.—(AP)—After a lapse of three years, the football elevens of Army and Navy will meet again in a post-season charity game for the benefit of the army of the unemployed. The match will take place Dec. 13, probably before a crowd of 80,000 in the Yankee stadium here, but it will mark no change in the difference of opinion between the two service schools that led to the break in relations in 1927.

With their fingers crossed as to the future, Army athletic officials met at West Point today to consider a counter-proposal from Navy that the game the Cadets suggested officially yesterday be staged Dec. 13 instead of Dec. 6.

Immediately after the conference, Major General William R. Smith, superintendent of the Military academy, announced that Army was willing to play the post-season game in New York on Dec. 13 despite conflict with the Cadets' semester examination. Navy expressed itself yesterday as willing to play either on Nov. 29 or Dec. 13, refusing the Dec. 6 date because of the game with Pennsylvania that day.

General Smith telegraphed Army's acceptance to Rear Admiral S. S. Robison, superintendent of the Naval academy at Annapolis, and all roads immediately converged on Washington and Annapolis. Major Philip Fleming, Army's graduate manager, flew from West Point to Mitchel field here and transferred to a fast plane for Washington. Navy sent Commander Frederick G. Reinicke, graduate manager of athletics, to meet him there and if possible bring him to Annapolis for a conference and visit that would last through the Midshipmen's game tomorrow with Southern Methodist. Grover Whalen, former New York police commissioner and chairman of the committee that will sponsor the game on behalf of the Salvation Army, also was on hand to discuss details.

The conditions under which Army agreed to play Navy call for ignoring the question of eligibility that brought about the break in relations three years ago and insist that the charity game shall not be interpreted as a resumption of any but temporary relations, without bearing on negotiations in the future. Neither Army nor Navy has receded from previous stands on the question of former college players competing on service elevens.

The match, if the usual price of $5 is charged for seats, would bring in about $400,000 for the relief of the unemployed. Choice seats probably will be scaled higher. The game will be the 31st between the schools. Army has won 15, Navy 12, and three were tied. Army won the last contest in 1927, 14 to 9.

While the healing of the breach is only temporary, the game will bring about resumption of a rivalry that began in 1890. A break occurred between 1894 and 1898, inclusive, because of differences of opinion. There were no games during the war years of 1917 and 1918.

MANY CASES DISPOSED OF IN WESTERLY THIRD DISTRICT COURT

(Special to The Bulletin)

WESTERLY, Nov. 14—In the Friday morning session of third district court Judge Oliver H. Williams disposed of court matters as follows:

Criminal Docket

Raymond C. Vars of Watch Hill and Westerly was before the court, having been apprehended by Trooper Sherwood F. F. Healey of the Hope Valley barracks of the Rhode Island department of state police on Oct. 21st when in the town of Richmond, R. I., he was charged with the operation of an automobile on the Nooseneck Hill road at a rate of speed greater than reasonable and proper. The state trooper testified that from the Wyoming blinker light for a distance of a mile and a half about midnight he had operated at a clocked speed of from 55 to 60 miles per hour and at another stretch at the same rate. Also at the brow of the hill near Tefft's Hill he had passed a truck. The defendant pleaded guilty. "It must be so," said the defendant about the charge of passing the truck.

Judge Williams said the case presented an unusual situation, for the average operator usually described the state police as "a band of crooks, who were framing somebody, or else the plea of nolle contendere was entered. The fine is $35 and costs."

Harry L. Gossal'n, 102 Bowen street, Neponset, Mass., summoned into court by Corp. Albert L. Taylor of the Hope Valley barracks for speeding on the Nooseneck Hill road, in the towns of Richmond and Exeter, R. I., failed to make court appearance a second time and the case was continued.

Murray Diamond, 14 Samoset street Roxbury, Mass., given a court summons for speeding on the Nooseneck Hill road by Trooper Sherwood F. Healey, also failed to appear in court on second call and his case was continued.

Civil Docket

Louis Silverstein vs. Joe Stedman. Marked ready.

Clyde Mills, Inc., vs. Joe Stedman. Continued one week.

Feldman Bros. vs. William and Mary Riddell. Assigned for trial on next Friday.

Boston Lightning Rod Co. vs. Gaetano Grispino. Continued one week.

Massachusetts Bonding and Indemnity Co. vs. Lawrence H. Hepworth, continued two weeks.

Trial Calendar

Civil action was heard in the case of Robina Wills vs. Arthur A. Guarino, carpenter, to recover in the amount paid to complete the construction of a house, 20 feet by 20 feet and 14 feet in heighth of second story. The plaintiff was to furnish the material and the respondent the labor. For the plaintiff Attorney John Ferguson declared that an agreement had entered into whereby the house was to have been originally built and finished for occupancy on Aug. 15th, the labor costs to be $200. Subsequently the defendant had claimed that $88 more was the added labor cost necessary to finish the house if he should do the work. Mrs. Wills made a final payment of $19 which brought the labor costs up to $250 and the respondent then quit the job. Charles Langworthy, who had worked with Mr. Guarino, was then secured by Mrs. Wills and paid the sum of $60 for the completion of the work. The suit was brought by Mrs. Wills to recover this amount of $60.

At the conclusion of the lengthy hearing Judge Williams declared, "without comment" that he found for the plaintiff to recover in the sum of $60 and costs.

Mrs. Wills testified that Guarino had plans with which to do the work after she had agreed for the labor costs to have been $200. Later she had agreed to the payment of an added $50 but no more. When the respondent quite the first floor had not been laid and there was considerable finishing work to do around the windows which were only nailed in. Her husband, Henry Wills, also testified that he was present when the plans were exchanged but did not hear the price agreement.

Charles Langworthy testified that he had completed the work of finishing the house of five rooms and had overheard Guarino state that $250 was the amount for labor.

The respondent Arthur A. Guarino, a carpenter for 10 years, on the witness stand said that he had said the labor costs would be "$200 and 'a little bit more'." With the last $19 payment he had quit as the amount to make up the $88 had not been paid. Westerly Building Inspector Thomas Wills on the witness stand told of the plans filed on July 10th for a house 20 feet by 20 feet. Charles Langworthy was recalled to the stand to show that $388 had been paid as actual labor costs on the house.

Davis, former member of the Rhode Island general assembly and Westerly member of the republican state central committee on Thursday night was given a summons to appear on Monday morning next at the regular session of Groton town court on a charge of leaving the scene of an accident. He was apprehended in Pawcatuck by Patrolman Robert Robinson of the Stonington town police at the request of the state police of the Groton barracks. Returning from New York city in his Buick coupe Mr. Davis was reported as having scraped a car in passing up Fort Hill. The Groton driver of the other automobile reported to police in Mystic that he was unable to overtake Mr. Davis, who said that he observed that the other car did not stop and thought the matter trivial. The Mystic police reported the matter to state police and Officer Arthur Kathe was detailed to investigate, the court summons resulting.

The Country Meeting House

I want to go to meeting once
Just like I used to do
Out in the Hudson valley
When the world seemed fresh and new
I want to meet the plain old folks
That always gathered there
And smell the clover in the fields
A-sweetening all the air
While hitched to shady trees and fence
The lazy horses a-stood.
And far away the robin sang
His song throughout the wood.
I want to hear the only choir—
The congregation—sing
The hymns as sweet as could be sung,
That made the old church ring.

I would like to go to that church once more
And stand around the door,
A-shaking hands with those whose hands
I may not clasp no more.
I wonder now if all the girls
Are still as fair as then,
With eyes as blue as larkspurs
That was growing in the glen.
I wonder if the roses grow
Out where my "dear ones" sleep
And if the cricket through the night
Their lonely vigils keep.
And would there rise—if I was near,
Within my memory's ear,
Their voice in such sweet tones—as now
I never seem to hear.

I want to go to the old place once
Among the well known ways
And watch the brooklet smiling back
When sunbeams kissed its face;
And hear the winds where the laurel bush
And the elm tree grew so tall
And across the fields where the whip-porwill
In mellowed voices call.
And then when all is said and done
And death shall whisper low
I do not think I'd mind it much,
But rather want to go,
To the old cemetery, where I could sleep
Hushed sigh—and grief—and prayer
Though dead—right happy still to know
That I was sleeping there.

"Congress"

Congress meets from day to day,
To pull their strings and draw their pay,
And mid the battle's smoke and fogs
To save our country from the dogs,
They organize, and start debate,
When someone yells, "Investigate,"
And then begins the circus show,
And oratory starts to flow.

The truth they always try to hush,
By vigorous use of whitewash brush!
And pull their underhanded tricks,
While some are shouting "politics,"
They charge, deny, they slap and slam,
From Muscle Shoals to Boulder Dam.

And then, regardless of expense,
They buy up all their evidence,
And plainly prove that truth will lie,
That drys are wet and wets are dry
They keep this up from day to day
And only stop to draw their pay,

So they bribe, and buy and sell;
They censure some, and some expel.
But all we can do is meekly wait,
And feebly cry, "This must be fate."

Thank God For All The Boys

Thank God for all the boys,
For my boy and for yours;
They are the ones that God employs,
By which this world endures,
For men grow older day by day,
Toil wearies them and strife annoys;
This world will need new men some day;
Thank God for all the boys.

Thank God for all the boys,
For your boy and for mine;
They fill our weary hearts with joy;
With pride we know they're pure and fine,
Thank God for boys who lend a hand,
For boys who guard and guide;
God made the boys to understand,
Our boys, our joy and pride.

RAISED ABUNDANCE OF FLOWERS

Dear Social Corner Sisters: Hello, everybody! It's a long time since I've written and longer since I attended a meeting, but perhaps in the near future I may be able to go to the Buckingham.

Like Pernickety and Rhody my garden is a thing of the past. The plants I set out early in spring did not do a bit well. I planted quite a lot of seed and although late in blooming, I felt well repaid for all the time and hard work I put in. My garden was not artistically laid out, but I wanted results and I certainly got them. If we had had frost earlier, I should have lost everything, but the trees over the fence protected them and I was surprised to read of others that Jack Frost had visited. I guess he felt sorry for me and stayed away a while longer. Anyway, three week's ago Friday and Saturday, I cut all that I could cut and when I had counted up on them I was surprised to find that I had cut and given away 13 huge bouquets. I would have cut more, but my hands were sore and my back ached. I knew we would have a heavy frost that Saturday night; it was so cold. I hated to leave my garden for there were still plenty of flowers, but when it got dark I had to say goodbye and in the morning there were all my dear little cheery friends with their heads hanging and leaves all blackened. I managed to get all the asters because they were the things that gave me the most trouble and they last so long in water. I thought they never were going to grow, but they did and surprised me. How I love flowers, I could look forever at them and then I think I wouldn't have looked enough.

We are having a little more of the much-needed rain, but the trouble is we don't have half enough.

Ducky: I have become quite well acquainted with your daughter. We think she is a fine woman and she certainly has a fine family.

Yours Truly: I echo Olga's sentiments, why not write? It seems the only time we meet is at some of the relative's funerals.

Olga: I agree with you on some points of the prohibition question, but I do not want to start a controversy in the Corner page, so you and I will have a debate when we meet. Ha, ha.

Cretia: As usual I had plenty of batchelor buttons in my garden bed.

Well, I hope everyone will have a very happy Thanksgiving, but I am afraid there will be many who will be sad; the unemployment situation is so acute. BLACK EYED SUSIE.

STORIES ONCE TOLD

Dear Social Corner Editor and Readers: A few week's ago a query was made by Pernickety, a member of the Social Corner, asking if anyone knew if there was such a thing as "colonial proverbs," suggesting that Quid Nunc might know of some. No, Pernickety, I do not bring to mind just now of any saying that would apply to a native of my neighborhood, but I bring to mind a funny story or two, told of a native, a business man, and his neighbors, of my native town, Canterbury. As these men have long since died they cannot vouch for its truth, neither can I, but here is the story:

This business man operated a series of tan vats; he was called a tanner and curier. He also made harnesses, and other articles of leather. The tanning, as a rule, was very poorly done, and when he called it finished it was but little better than the raw hide; some people declared it was tripe. A neighbor wanted a new harness made of good leather, so he asked Mr. B. to make him a good strong work harness, which was made in due time, and delivered to the neighbor. The harness had the look of a superior article; shiny buckles, and mountings of good quality and design.

The first use of the harness was on a trip to Norwich; the day was hot and sultry, with threatening showers. While the neighbor was doing his trading, a hard shower came, lasting an hour or two. As the team wasn't under cover, both horse and harness got thoroughly soaked. The neighbor had done his trading, and while waiting for the shower to pass over, he got well wet "inside" with a beverage commonly drank in those days.

Fearing to be late home, he started for home before the shower was wholly over. After getting out of the city, he put the reins over the dash board and passed into a sleep, knowing the old horse would take him safely to his home. Nothing disturbed him for some time until a jolt came to the wagon. He soon awoke. The wagon was standing still on a slight rise of ground, but no horse in sight, still the traces were securely attached to the whippletree, and the reins were as he had placed them. He surely was in a quandary and it was some time before he came to his senses. In the meantime, the sun had come out bright and warm. All at once the wagon commenced to slowly move.

Now comes the strange part of the story. The new harness had received its first wetting, and the draught of the wagon with its load had caused the harness to stretch, but when the sun came out the shrinking process followed and the wagon and neighbor followed the take up. Somewhat belated, the wagon and neighbor arrived home to find the old horse enjoying a good measure of oats that someone of the family had given him. Not the least alarmed for the safety of the neighbor, for they saw the condition, and knowing the character of the leather, they were certain the man of the house would arrive when the sun had shrunk the leather to its normal condition.

Another story equally true was told of a man in the same neighborhood, as the harness maker.

The man in this story was said to be an expert clock cleaner. Clocks were brought to him from far and near, some large and some small. One day a clock of great proportion arrived by express to be cleaned. The clock expert at once set about the task. It being the largest he had ever had to clean, and his brushes were far too small to properly do the job, he devised some other method. Someone driving past his clock cleaning establishment one day heard a terrible racket and the voice of the clock cleaner as if driving horses or oxen. Curious to know the cause of the commotion, he went to the shop and inquired what the racket was about. He was told that he was cleaning a clock, and at once showed the caller the process employed. He had a pair of steers attached to a thorn bush, and was driving the steers around. The clock was nearly ready to be sent back to the owner, well-cleaned. Do either of these stories seem possible?

Betsy Bobbet: Was it Kenyon's Johnny cake meal that you found at the roadside stand? If so, I know you are more than pleased with it. There is no meal that will make so delicious a Johnny cake as Kenyon's. Be sure and use the recipe on the package.

Mr. Ross: I thank you for your nice letter. QUID NUNC.

RAISES FREAK VEGETABLES

Dear Social Corner Friends: I was glad to see so many at our last picnic. This is what was in the Norwich Town news: in attendance at the dinner Thursday of the Social club, No. 4, held at Putnam Methodist church, were Mrs. William H. Whiteman and her automobile guests, Mrs. Andrew Gardner, Mrs. Edwin Lathrop, Mrs. Allen Kinney and Mrs. David M. Dean, while Mr. and Mrs. George Geer and Mrs. Josephine Parker of Plain Hill road had as there auto guests Mrs. Frederick Race, Mrs. Herman Gager and Otto Miller, former Norwich Town residents. Mr. and Mrs. William Bell of Occum had as auto guests Dr. and Mrs. Charles Lamb. The list of ten mentioned occupied one table in the vestry where a fine dinner was served at noon. Prior to the dinner at the suggestion of Mrs. Kenyon all heads were bowed in silent prayer out of respect to a member of Club 4 who died recently. Dr. Lamb, tenor, was invited to lead in the singing of the Doxology, also sang a group of songs in opening the afternoon programme; Sail On, by Gatnel; Memories, by Miles; and then we had readings and story telling; also songs and whistling solos by Club 4 members. The last hymn sung was God Be With You Till We Meet Again.

Caro: That little visit was a short one, but I enjoyed every minute of it.

Hollyhock: You asked me if Irma was at our picnic and I think I said no. Yes, she was there and held my hand during the last hymn. I was thinking of the Ladies' Aid meeting she didn't attend.

Some of the Corner friends write what they had in their gardens. We raised 30 bushels of potatoes, 12 bushels sweet corn, 3 bushels peas, 4 bushels summer squash, 1-2 bushel beets, 1-2 bushels carrots, 5 bushels tomatoes, cucumbers, picked two joined together, one tomato with little handle on it. ROSALIND.

BUSY WITH CHRISTMAS WORK

Dear Social Corner Members: What lovely fall days we are having. Today I picked a large bunch of chrysanthemums that had escaped the frost. I shall certainly miss the flowers, but today have been arranging the everlasting flowers, have a large bowl and wall vase filled and they make a bright spot as do the bowls of bitter sweet. I have put a lot of branches covered with red berries in my porch box and when I put the evergreen in, it will look quite cheerful.

I suppose many are busy with their Christmas work. All through the year I pick up things and put them away, so today I got them all out and unwrapped them and I feel very well satisfied, but like everyone else, I guess there are always a few on the list that it is always so hard to decide on what to give them. I do think people make such a mistake and spoil the Christmas spirit in giving things they cannot afford to. Better to give something if it only costs ten cents with a feeling that you haven't got to skimp on something for weeks may be to make up for it and if the one who receives it has the right spirit she will admire you for your honesty with yourself. Many a time some little inexpensive gift with the good will that comes with it gives us much more pleasure than some other gifts that cost many, many times that amount, but was bought in a rush with the thought, that's one more off my list.

O. D.: Congratulations on winning the prize, that was a fine idea.

Olga: Your letter was fine. I, too, think every member should pay their dues by writing a letter now and then.

Mrs. C. M. S.: I did so enjoy your call and hope you will bring Cosmos down again. I am hoping to meet a large number of the sisters at Club 6 meeting next week in Westerly.

American Girl: Hope your chauffeur got you home safe. E. L. M.

FAITHFUL MEMBERS PASS ON

Dear Corner Friends: It is exasperating to see the weeks come and go and just the right time not appear to get a few lines ready for the Corner page. I was disappointed not to see an account of our first Corner meeting as I sent in the notice of it and expected to have charge of the meeting but serious illness in the family prevented my being able to help.

It is with sadness we note the passing of so many of our members lately. Mrs. Effie Weeks' (Effie M.) death was so sudden we could hardly make it seem true. We shall miss her as she was a regular attendant and ready to help. She had a jolly and friendly way that made her many friends. Just one week after her death we lost another member, Mrs. Eugene Lewis, her pen name was Caroline. She was very jolly and always smiling. We shall miss the letters that faithful Ann Tenna sent to the Corner so frequently. Pisces was one of the earlier writers and we had met her on several occasions, she having visited our club meetings in the days we used to go in large numbers to visit the other clubs, and also at the meeting of Club 4.

Diana has long been with us in spirit and thought if not in person, and contributed often to the Corner page, but by Huldy's letter we learn that she has been released from the chains of trials and suffering that have bound her to her bed and chair for so many years. She thoroughly enjoyed the Corner and was deeply interested in every phase of it and enjoyed the occasional letters and message of cheer that the Corner members were minded to send her. Those who used to write her, why not transfer your messages of cheer to the ex-army nurse we have lately heard about.

The second meeting of Club 1 was up to the standard in the excellent dinner served and variety. Although the members were less in attendance than at some previous times the spirit of sociability ran high. We especially had to welcome members from the Norwich club as well as some of the charter members of our own club that do not attend so often as formerly. While Wisteria, with her helpers, served the dinner, Betsey Bobbitt provided the sport for the programme which consisted in shooting the turkey.

We were very sorry Practical Polly was unable to meet with us, but are assured she is some better. This is rather a mournful letter, but will try and do better next time. THEODA.

WILL TRY TO DO BETTER

Dear Social Corner Friends: I think I have been a slacker long enough and from now on I am going to—well, I don't know whether I will or not, but I am going to do better at least.

Firstly: I want to say that the next meeting of Club No. 6 will be held Nov. 18 in the First Baptist church vestry, Westerly. This seems a convenient place of meeting and the lady with the big fat legs (this is what she called them) will be able to attend without the usual trouble of stair-climbing which is so hard on those kind of legs.

We hope there will be a good attendance and remember it is just what you bring that helps to make a good dinner, and won't you please bring, also, as your contribution to the entertainment, some little item that you have found to be a help to you about the house. Sumac will have charge of the literary program and that "nuff sed," but let's all help her out.

Olga: Now I am sure you will not look at me reproachfully (?) I have "ritten."

Bonie: Good wishes and a pleasant trip and don't forget your promise to DOROTHY BRADFORD.

APPLES AND NUTS PLENTIFUL

Dear Members of Social Corner: Am I still a member? I have never attended a meeting and have not written since the first winter Helper went south. There have been times in the last 15 years when I have not had The Bulletin, but at present, I am enjoying the Corner letters again. When I first wrote I lived in the city, but now I am a farmer woman, much to the surprise of some of my friends.

Apples and nuts are so plentiful this year I think everyone is looking for new ways to use them. I make this quick apple pudding to be served with cream.

Apple pudding: Fill a pan three-fourth full of sliced apples and some water. Mix one cup sugar, one tablespoon flour and one-fourth cup butter and nutmeg or cinnamon and spread on top of apples; bake till apples are done. Apples baked and when done the center filled with marshmallow appeals to children.

We have bushels of walnuts and there are dishes of cracked nuts always within reach. Ground nuts added to any dish improves it, such as macaroni, meat loaf and in desserts on soft frosting and in whipped cream on jello.

I am going to try to come to some of your meetings this winter. BRIGHT RAY.

MENTIONS DINNER FOR NEEDY CHILDREN

Dear Social Corner Friends: I feel I must help fill up the page once again. Although my letters are not interesting like some they help fill up the page. Some wonderful trips some of you sisters have had! I have had several short trips. I visited Devil's Hop Yard and started for Gardner lake, but saw very little of the lake. We drove onto a road as we were told to do, but one of the party thought the new road would take us right by the lake so turned around and followed the new road, but didn't find the lake. Then we came to a road by a farm house so we turned off the main road again. Such a hilly road we found. Finally we came out on the Montville road.

Then another trip through the kindness of worthy. I went to Wallum lake. I enjoyed that so much. It certainly is a lovely place and the patients all seem so contented there. I have two friends there which gave me a chance to visit both buildings.

Burs: You put it all over Worthy when you went, didn't you? She thought sure she had to eat sand for lunch.

Well, our gardens have all frozen up. I have brought all of my flowers into the house. I have eight windows full which is about all the windows I have in the house. If they die I throw them out. If they grow very fast I shall have to move out. Can anyone tell me what to do to make a calla lily grow. I have had one for over two years and all it has done is to have one leaf at a time. When a new one comes that one turns yellow and dies.

I suppose every one is busy making Christmas gifts. I would love to make a lot of things, but my eyes won't allow me to do but very little. How nice it would be if the Social Corner instead of having a dinner among themselves in December would have a nice dinner and a little gift for a few needy children. They could go to the schools and the teachers would pick out a certain number for them. There will be a lot of hungry children this year. Well, I guess I have done my share at filling the page. With best wishes for all. JUST A NUT.

PURCHASES CAKE DECORATOR

Dear Editor: It's just too bad more members do not write. I hope when some of the back sliders see the half page, nearly a whole column of poetry, too, that they will write.

Club No. 6 has their November meeting in the First Baptist church parlors and it will be easy for you all to find because you pass it on your way to the hall where we met last year. And I'm guessing you will all appreciate the fact that there won't be all those terrible stairs to climb. I know I will, for one. Dorothy Bradford has asked me to arrange a program, but I'm not so sure about being there. If no more youngsters come down with chicken pox, all will be well, as they will go to school Monday. If they do develop it, (there are two who haven't got it yet) it will be just too bad. At any rate, will those who have something about Thanksgiving that they can read please bring it.

I have just got myself into a lot of trouble. I purchased a cake decorater (grease pump one of the boys called it) and now every cake must be decorated. I don't know why I didn't have one a long time ago though all the time I've spent trying to decorate birthday and holiday cakes and this is so quick and easy. I'm trying out all the points on every day cakes so when I want a special one I'll know what to use.

Pernickety: The bridge of San Luis Rey was a great disappointment to me. I was on the waiting list at the library several weeks before I got it, but I've never got up courage to read any more Wilder. Am going to some day, though. It may have been my point of view at the time that was at fault. What do you think of Sinclair Lewis as a Nobel prize winner. I don't know about Elmer Gantry, but I do know that Arrowsmith was a true character. I was criticized rather severely a while ago because I liked war books and pictures. I go to movies very seldom and then it is usually to see something like Wings, All Quiet on the Western Front or the Dawn Patrol. I am planning to see Hell's Angels, too, if it ever comes here. Perhaps if I had lost anyone in the war I would feel differently about these pictures, but as it is I think they are a good sermon on preparedness.

Skipper: I received the package and was very much pleased with the contents. It was awfully nice of you.

American Girl: I hope you will be at the meeting Tuesday with something to read.

Well, it is bed time and hoping to see a good crowd at the meeting next Tuesday, I will say good-night. SUMAC, (No. 6).

MENDING KITCHENWARE

Dear Editor and Corner Members: The dear friends who've so faithfully written are to be commended. It looks as though "The Old Gray Mare Ain't What She Used to Be," by so few letters. The only thought that comes to the older members is that the new members will do more than write a letter of admittance. Their duty doesn't end there nor is that true with us. Here are some helpful limits. For a small hole in aluminum or graniteware an ordinary dress snap will give good service. Put the ball of the snap through the hole and snap on the other section, then rivet it tight by just tapping it a few times with a light hammer. Mend agateware with putty and salt. Take a small piece of putty and mix it with as much salt as possible. Cover the hole with this mixture, put water into the utensil and set it on the back of the stove until the putty has hardened.

Greetings to Twice Twenty, May B, Bittersweet, Foxglove, Whirlwind, and many others. We all love to hear from you. Please, members, write and fill the Corner page. Don't be like the little boy who forgot to tell mother dad wasn't coming home to supper until he went upstairs to go to bed. Then—well the rest is too sad to tell what happened. HOPE COBWEB, (Club 1).

Dear Social Corner Friends: I think we all felt upon flancing at the Corner page last Saturday that Olga's plea for more letters was very timely. No member, I believe, enjoys the social side of the Corner more keenly than Olga does, but at the same time she appreciates what it means to the women of eastern Connecticut to have this entire page for their use, free of charge, and even with the additional spur of monthly prizes. It is a pity that there are those who feel they must have some great event or some thrilling experience to write about before taking up their pens. Those letters of great happenings make good reading, but after all it is the artist of the commonplace that is dearest to our hearts. Our lives are so varied that every letter is of interest to some reader. The Corner page needs our loyalty, so let us each do her part.

I am glad you wrote those little book reviews, Pernickety, and hope you will send more. As it is physically possible for us to read but a very small proportion of the fine books, both fiction and non-fiction, that are being written, book reviews answer a very useful purpose for one in this way gets the gish of a story in a few sentences.

Now, I am wondering if I have anything helpful to pass on. My days are mostly uneventful, but last week held one red letter day for me. There was a county meeting of Federated Women's clubs held in Moosup and I attended the afternoon session and felt the uplift that comes from such gatherings. There was a splendid talk by the president of Connecticut college and short talks by a number of women. It is impossible to remember just the words of their messages. One enthusiastic grandmother (we never would have dreamed she was of the grandmother age had she not spoken of her two grandsons) exhorted us to keep young in all ways and especially to keep our voices young. I wonder if reading aloud helps to keep one's voice young. I do that a good deal and I hope it helps to bring that result. Another speaker used the text: Ways of Escape. How to escape from the sordid things of life which for most of us is a monotonous round of routine tasks is a problem. Each one must work out her own salvation, find her own outlets, but find them or make them we should. The Corner, it seems to mee, is a wonderful outlet to many of us women who are too often "cabined, cribbed and confined." To some the page is an outlet for a natural gift for writing which has had little chance for expression; to others the social gatherings supply needed variety. This speaker stressed the fine art of living, but said she preferred calling it the art of fine living. Well, it was all delightful and helpful and I shall not soon forget it. It is fine to belong to groups and to get inspiration from dynamic personalities in these groups in page should be a power house radiating good cheer, stimulating messages, thoughtful comments on current events, practical helps and good things without number. As many of our most faithful writers are passing on, it behooves the rest of us to carry on and not allow the work of the Corner to slip. With greetings to all and a cordial welcome to newcomers. PEN AND INK.

MAKING THE BEST WE CAN

Dear Editor Social Corner and Sisters: In reading the various accounts by Social Corner writers of their warfare against their garden pests, this writer has had some experience in the different phases of gardening. A great many of us have heard and possibly followed the admonition: "Go to the ant, thou sluggard." To me, at least, the ant seems to be one of the craziest insects in existence. It will go hither and yon, turn about and go in circles, as though it had been partaking of jakey. Would it not be a good plan for a season to go to the spider? That insect makes beautiful work and is most industrious, yet nature has built it so that it never looks ahead at the work to be done for it keeps its work behind it and yet works ahead. Some complain of pusley getting them, while another has proposed that it would be a good idea to install machinery in the garden and convert pusley into salad and sell it to the Chinese who are said to be fond of salad, and presto, one evil weed is overcome and the gardener's pocketbook is soon filled to overflowing with all sorts of money. Just at present my flowers are under cover for the winter and if I can only get some wood sawed for the winter, I will feel more contented about keeping warm. I am thinking of planting some new bulbs from South Africa, they have a white flower and are expected to grow very much in favor as a novelty. If the advertisement is true, the flower must be a humdinger.

A few weeks ago a sister asked, "Who ever attended the funeral of a cat?" May I most humbly refer that writer to a book entitled: "My Summer in a Garden," by Charles Dudley Warner. It has 22 pages, devoted to the life and decease and funeral of a cat whose name was "Calvin." The book is very fair reading for "pleasure's sake" and is highly moral.

Thanks for the yellow slip, and with best wishes to all the Corner members. CASSAGNAC

READING MATTER

Dear Social Corner Friends: Just what is an average mind? Can anyone under the sun give us a really satisfactory answer? I doubt it. I wonder if authors really write their stories with their audiences in mind or if the ymerely weave their own ideas into a plot for their own gratification? Or do they write to please that "average mind"?

Sumac: I have a confession to make. I like the sort of stories one skims through, too, and sad to relate, I have a shockingly poor memory and very little of what I read remains with me. That's one reason why I am writing these letters if the truth is told. Personally, I do not care very much for detective stories although I do like the Donovan stories by William J. Neidig in the Saturday Evening Post. Does Milky Way read them? They are more interesting than ever to me now, for one of the girls to whom I write has a position as stenographer in an insurance company similar to the Redelos Indemnity.

Did you read Professor Einstein's article on "Religion and Science" in this week's New York Times magazine? I've another confession to make—this is so full of seven dollar words that I'll have to spend an hour or two with my dictionary before I can begin to understand it. But there are a few sentences here and there which I can read and these allow me to get a little sense out of it. One of them, "I assert that the cosmic religious experience is the strongest and noblest driving force behind scientific research." Cosmic religious sense is a level above the experience of those who have an anthropomorphic idea of God. My dictionary's definition of anthropomorphic is: the ascription of human form and attributes to the Deity. He picks out Democritus, St. Francis of Assisi and Spinosa as typical of geniuses guided by that cosmic religious sense. A brief sketch of the life and belief of each is given.

I've read just one book this week and I think you'd forgive me for not having read more, if you were to see it. Aren't you glad that modern writers aren't given to making long moralizing and philosophical speeches? "Wilhelm Meister's Apprenticeship," by Goethe, is just cram jam full of them. The story interested me nevertheless for there was plenty of plot and action to carry the thread of the narrative without its being broken too many times. As Carlyle said, "Wilhelm isn't a very satisfactory hero but one is interested in his adventures even if he isn't very lovable."

What shall I read this week? I'm going down to the library just as soon as I have mailed this letter and get another book—and I don't know any more than you do, what it will be. That's the fun of it! PERNICKETY

LIVES AT CHATHAM SUMMERS

Dear Social Corner Members: As grandma would like to know where Joseph Lincoln lives. I can tell her. He lives summers in Chatham; has a very fine house on one of the Main streets. The front of the house faces the street, the back of the house the ocean. There are many pretty summer houses on the street and just a little way from his house is the Chatham Bar Inn. Only wealthy people can stay there. There are rose gardens, large golf links and a lovely veranda from which you can see the ocean. I have been to Chatham many times and have seen Mr. Lincoln and family as they took their meals at the Howe's house, just across from my cousin's, where I was visiting. One of the old men told me he had often told Mr. Lincoln some stories. You know Mr. Lincoln was born down on the Cape.

Chatham is a pretty little village and when I was a young girl and visited my grandma, we had to ride in the stage coach. Six people could ride inside the coach and some with the driver. The trunks were strapped on the back of the coach and something went up on the top and such a noise when they were putting them up there. It was not very pleasant riding, especially if there were a few fat folks on the seat with you. We would not get there until after dark. Now the trains connect with the one in Hornish. In those days we could hear the roar of the surf for miles and at that time no one would think of going in bathing nor on the beach as it was not safe. Now the sand has made sand bars and now people can go in bathing on the beach.

I remember one time we went down to the Cape and they told us they were catching fish from the shore over on the beach. We went over. I saw the men getting great big blue fish, so many lay there on that beach that the men had caught. I do not think they have ever come that way since. I wish I had a nice baked one now. How good it would taste. I have been over the bridge at the canal and have been there at night when the big steamer came in. So many go there at night to see the boat go by. All the autos blow their horns as it goes by.

Bachelor Maid: Many thanks for your post card.

Bay State: Hope to see you soon.

With kind wishes to all my Social Corner friends. DEBBIE

ANTIQUES

Dear Social Corner Friends: I haven't been a member very long. I haven't written for some time, but I think by the looks of our page some times that we all need to be more thoughtful about our writing. I think one of my hobbies is ancient history and antiques. I always read the Social Corner letters first then I always turn to the page, "In Norwich fifty years ago." I find some interesting reading in the news of fifty years ago. Although I'm not very ancient myself, I enjoy reading those items. I have a bound book of a Boston paper of three years subscription, 1825-26-27. At that time the paper was religious and newspaper, all in one.

I find the reading very interesting news of 105 years ago. I fail to see that people have changed so very much. Murders, suicides, drunkards, yes, and even divorce. Of course there are more people today to commit crime than there were then, and all of those things would naturally increase.

I was talking with a lady who has charge of one building in one of our Connecticut institutions. She informed me that a large percentage of the inmates were of foreign birth or children of foreign parentage, and it looks as though that might be the case in regards to the bootleggers and bank robbers. Most of them at least. We can't even pronounce their names. I think when people can't come here and abide by our laws they should be deported. Just look in our cities and see how many are holding down city jobs that are not naturalized citizens and our American citizens without jobs.

Well, here I've been running off on a tangent, so I better get back to my subject, Antiques. I have a number of old books that are over 100 years old. I have the book of Revelations that was printed in 1546, a few old dishes, and some old pieces of furniture. I have my heart set on having one room furnished with nothing but antiques. I presume some of you sisters have antique rooms. I have a friend whose whole house is furnished with nothing but antiques. I have just finished a crocheted bedspread, also have another one half done, in pop corn pattern. I have just finished crocheting butterflies for ends of a dresser scarf, one large butterfly on each end.

I say Amen to what Olga says about the 18th amendment. I will close with this song. (June, 1830. This was published 100 years ago but I do not know the author.)

There's a language that's mute, there's a silence that speaks.
There's a something that cannot be told;
There are words that can only be read on the cheeks
And thoughts but the eyes can unfold.
There's a book so expressive, so timid, so kind,
So conscious, so quick to impart;
Though dumb in an instant it speaks out the mind
And strikes in an instant the heart.
This eloquent silence, this converse of soul,
In vain we attempt to suppress;
More prompt it appears from the wish of control,
More apt the fond truth to express.
And oh! the delight on the features that shine;
When blest with each other, this converse divine
Is mutually spoken and felt.
LOLA LEE

DELAYS ARE DANGEROUS

Dear Sisters of Social Corner: I think the sentiment on the Corner page of last week is right to the point, or simplified might read, "Delays are dangerous." If there are not more responses, it may find us, one and all, "too late to begin." Seems as if the same excuses for not writing can not apply to each one. I think just "neglect" explains it mostly.

I would like to suggest a little idea in regard to when we are at work doing sewing. It is called a table waste basket. It need not be "basket" specially for its purpose. Take a plain little paper box, perhaps a candy box, have it on the table nearby, and as you are sewing, cutting off threads, trimming edges off the material of your work, put them in your work basket, it will save littering up the floor, also prevent your apron or dress being covered. Once you get the habit of using this little helper, you will not be without it. There are many little hints that help, so when we know of them, it is a good plan to pass them on to the Corner. We are never too old to learn, so let us help one another. I agree with Olga, suppose we should find out some day that the Corner page had been withdrawn from its writers. We would be too late to make amends. Surely we have all had much pleasure from various ways connected with the Corner. Each must do their part to continue its progress. Some of our faithful ones have contributed their last messages which remain as pleasant memories, but the broken threads of service cannot go on without co-operation.

Sympathy to all in sorrow and illness and best wishes to each and every one, and hoping for continued success of the Social Corner. PENNIE (Club 1.)

RECIPE FOR R. I. JOHHNY CAKE

Dear Social Corner: I have been expecting to see some more recipes for Johnny Cake. Do the rest of you follow Green Hollow's rule, using soda and molasses? Here is my way of making what I believe is considered Rhode Island Johnny cake. It is as follows:

R. I. Johnny Cake: Put a cup of corn meal and one teaspoon of salt in a sauce pan. Set the pan on the stove and stir in boiling water until the meal is thoroughly scalded. Then add about a tablespoon of milk. Fry the cakes on a hot greased griddle. Before turning them put a dab of butter or drippings on each cake. Serve with butter or gravy in place of bread.

We are told that the original name for these cakes was journey cake. As near as I can ascertain, they are a strictly local dish, popular in part of Connecticut and in Rhode Island. The recipe is seldom found in cook books. In some sections corn bread is called Johnny cake.

Sumac: Are you taking lessons in nutrition, too? Why is it that some cooks are prejudiced against aluminum cooking utensils? They say that the food tastes of aluminum. And some are prejudiced against pressure cookers because they think the food has a peculiar flavor.

Thirty-Two: You cannot have seen any recent copies of Modern Priscilla for the publishers failed this summer. This was one of my favorite magazines, so I regret its passing.

How the wind does blow this morning! Will I get blown into a mud puddle going to the mail box? SISTER RHODY

CHATTY LETTER FROM VIOLET

Kind Editor and Social Corner Friends: As it has been a long time since I have written I thought I would do so now.

Aries: Am glad to hear you have some water, for it is a terrible thing not to have it. Hope you and Mr. Adam are well. Daughter has another little girl. This makes the 4th girl.

Cecil Bruno: Saw in paper where you and aunt were on an auto trip. Think it must have been very interesting. So glad you are both well and could go.

NONESOPRETTY: How are you this nice weather? Will you please send me your present address.

J. E. T.: Hello, how are you and where are you? Never see your letters in Corner; miss them, as well as lots of other older writers. Just write me a line and I'll answer.

I extend my sympathy to all who recently lost their dear ones, and may God comfort them in their hours of sorrow. Here are a few verses I saw, so will send them in.

The Glad Heart

Oh God, I lift my eyes unto thee in prayer,
Direct from this poor old heart of mine,
To give to the thanks for the many blessings
Thou sendest me each and every hour of the day.
As I tread along life's rough pathways,
I hear thy dear voice say unto me, fear
Not my dear child for God watcheth over you,
Though your steps may falter and you become.
Weary fear not for I am with you always.

As you go along life's road greet your Fellow men with a smile and a word of cheer,
For ye know not how much good it may do,
And always lend a helping hand to those
Less fortunate than your dear traveler on the rough byways,
And smile on that we can say this glad heart of mine today.
VIOLET.

TURNS TO CORNER PAGE FIRST

Social Corner Editor and Writers: I was surprised to read of Pisces and Ann Tenna's death. They both wrote me such nice letters, I felt as if well acquainted, yet never met them.

Nonesopretty: I was so glad to see your nice letter in Corner page, Saturday. I have been so busy I haven't written you a letter recently, but will as soon as I can. Have crocheted three rugs. Am working on a braided one now, partly done. Am cutting and sewing rags for two more crocheted ones. Was to Violet's, Sunday. She had a roast goose dinner. Oh boy! it was good. Wish you had been there to weigh me after dinner. Ha! ha! you can guess I did not look poor. Violet is not well since the accident. Has suffered terrible from it, but thankful she was not killed.

Olga: Was glad to read your nice letter. Where is Lonesome Pine? We haven't seen a letter from her. Seeing here would be better, but that is not often.

Just I: Long time since I had a letter from you. Hope all are feeling better now. It is cooler weather. How do you like the new minister? I hear he is a nice speaker and sermons very interesting. How are the slips? I hope all lived.

Aries: How are you? I hope your well has water since the rains. Hard work to carry water so far. How are the lovely plants, ducks and geese? Picture of them was nice.

Locust: Where is your letter? Haven't seen it in Corner yet. Package came O. K. Many thanks. I think you can beat me on quilts, piecing and tieing them and am on rug line now, making them. Work on them in the evening. Day's work on wood pile. Ha! ha; so have warm fire to work by. Ha! ha! some say I should go to bed and not burn so much wood. I tell them when I chop it, cut it up and get it in the house, no one has a better right to burn it and enjoy a warm room than I. Am I right or not?

Pine Apple: That hot dish was delicious. Could you only have seen me devouring it. You are the chef. O. K. for me. Hope I can return the favor some day. I am glad you liked the winter bouquet. How I do wish I had some way to take a lot of them to the sick and shutins. They are cheery I think and cost only time to pick them. Have you any cows to sell? They are cheap now, they say but beef-in market don't know about it, but give me goose, for all the beef going. Best wishes to you all.

Pernickety: Your Corner letter was good. I, too, like a good book to read. Shall look for your letter this week.

Buffalo: Is your pen like mine rusty? Scour it up on a Corner letter once in awhile. Where is mama now? I often think of her in the old

POETRY

Yesterday

If I had known that yesterday
Away would quickly run
Before my planning was near through
And work but half begun,
I surely would have better planned
And would not have been slack,
But ah, I did not ever dream
I'd long to coax it back.

If I had known that yesterday
Memorial would be
I would have built it so regret
Could have no ghosts for me,
'Twas only for a moment's rest
I opened wide my door,
But in that moment "yesterday"
Was gone forevermore.

Could I recall my yesterday
I would more careful be,
I'd lay my plans upon a rock
And judge them ardently,
It was a blissful "yesterday,"
Yet why was I so slack?
But ah, I did not ever dream
Id' long to coax it back!

The Last Flower Of The Year

The gentian was the year's last child,
Born when the winds were hoarse and wild
With wailing over buried flowers,
The playmates of their sunnier hours.

The gentian hid a thoughtful eye
Beneath dark fringes, blue and shy,
Only by warmest noon-beams won,
To meet the welcome of the sun.

The gentian, her long lashes through,
Looked up into the sky so blue,
And felt at home; the color there
The good God gave herself to wear.

The gentian searched the fields around;
No flower companion there she found.
Upward from all the woodland ways
Floated the asters' silvery rays.

The gentian shut her eyelids tight
On falling leaf and frosty night;
And close her azure mantle drew,
When dreary winds about her blew.

The gentian said, "The world is cold;
Yet one clear thought of heaven I hold,
The sun's last thought is mine to keep!
Enough—now let me go to sleep."

"Yes, sir," replied the carpenter, grimly, "that's just it!"—Municipal Journal.

home and happy hours I spent there. Many changes since then. Did Mountain Climber live near you?

Brick Top: What are you planning that keeps you so still? No letters in Corner page. It looks empty lately. What is the reason some of you don't write some more very interesting letters on your travels? Oh, I did enjoy all those nice letters so good one could almost see the road and beautiful scenery and places visited that carries cheer and sunshine to homes where they can not go for auto rides. All hard work. They read the nice letters Saturday. No wonder we all look for the Corner page first thing, but it seems the men all like Etta Kett and want to see what new trick she has played on papa and mama, but give me the Corner page first. Cheer up and send in one of your nice letters Zero and get another prize. Best wishes to all. Will send poem. Thank God for all Our Boys.

MAKES JARFUL OF SAUERKRAUT

Dear Social Corner: Was quite ambitious this morning, so much so that I started to make a jar of sauerkraut—my first attempt. Oh, not alone, of course, but two of us worked nearly all day and have only a small jarful to show for our hard labor, and I, for one, seem to have lost all that ambition, haven't enough left even to write a good letter. Lucky for me there's another day before the Corner meeting, or perhaps this one of the helpers wouldn't be worth much.

Wisteria: Surely, that's not all there is in the cellar either. I'll say the cellar, (and the wood pile) are both ready for the blizzards, but the well isn't, so please pray for rain instead of snow.

Sumac: If only you lived near me! Would invite you in to help me shell beans, and you might talk just all you pleased. Have you ever read Booth Tarkington's "Seventeen?" If not, please do, and then tell me whether you like it or not.

An item in the Wednesday Bulletin of last week, which stated that people were enjoying the hardy chrysanthemums in the otherwise bare gardens, made me envious, for I can't enjoy mine, the frost gets them before they have a chance to bloom. Can anyone tell me how to get them to blossom before frost? Also in the same issue, another item about evergreen plantings gave me an idea. While studying the catalogues this winter, I'll make a list of plants, vines and shrubs that are evergreen and then try to work out a planting plan that will use just enough of them to enliven the yard in the winter, but not to make it look too crowded in the summer. Probably I won't be able to do it, but it will give me something to plan for, anyway. Gardening on paper, in the winter, is almost as much fun as gardening outdoors in the summer.

JUSTICE OF THE SEA

By JAMES CLIFTON PETERS

A CASTAWAY, PICKED UP BY A MURDEROUS CREW OF MUTINEERS, PROVES TO BE THEIR NEMESIS

PETER WADE awoke from the troubled sleep of thirst to see the black bow of a ship towering above him like a vast mountain. An instant it hung there, blotting out the intricate star-patterns of the sky, then toppled massively upon him. The tiny boat in which he lay disappeared in a monstrous splash. Wade felt the downward scraping of barnacle-roughened planking tearing clothing, skin and flesh from his side; an irresistible force pressed him down through a thick atmosphere of water. Then agony, sharp and tearing, brought consciousness back when suffocation would not have been resisted. He began to struggle, writhing and fighting against that dreadful pressure. And then something struck his outstretched arm a savage blow, pressed it deep under water, stopped—and, with a vast deliberation, began to rise.

With a jerk that almost tore Wade's arm from its socket the bobstay to which he was dazedly clinging rose out of the water. A gasp of clear air, another, and the plunging forefoot went down again and buried him under feet of water. There he was pounded against the bottom of the hull as the sea tugged and wrenched and strove to tear him from his precarious hold on the bobstay and sweep him the length of the hull under water.

Panic clutched him. It was like a nightmare to be in agony from salt water cauterizing a hundred shallow wounds. It was sheer horror to be clinging to an iron chain for safety—an iron chain that, like some strange beast of prey, bore him down, deeper and deeper, to its lair at the inmost dark cavern of the sea.

His head came above water as his lungs were about to collapse. With a mighty jerk he was lifted clear of the sea. Pure air washed into his straining lungs ere he plunged downward once more. His head was clearer now and his strength was coming back. Above the water again, new lungfuls of blessed, clear air. Now the plunge, the milk-warm seas closing thickly around him. Wade began to edge his way up from his intolerable position. Cunningly he took advantage of the bouyance the submergence of his body gave him and worked himself higher on the bobstay.

When, ages later, he reached the bowsprit and could rest his weight across it he was exhausted. He sprawled there for many minutes while the schooner seemed to toss its head in an effort to hurl him back into the sea.

There was no alarm, nor any evidence that he had been seen. The scratches in his side smarted horribly. He struggled to his feet, balancing himself by the fore-topmast stay. With the lurching, pitching bowsprit beneath his feet and darkness thick with flying spray all about him, he felt himself inclosed in the magic circle of an evil dream. The schooner was a long blur of swaying blackness. Far astern he could make out the dim halo of the binnacle light; nearer, a huge, vague bulk of canvas blotted out the stars. In the green glow of the starboard light a figure appeared suddenly like a ghastly apparition. Wade called to it—a weak, quavering shout—and began to work his way inward along the bowsprit.

SOMEHOW he reached the deck and went staggering aft. He came to the starboard light and loomed into the circle of radiance like some grotesque corpse escaped from the silent depths of the sea. The man at the rail heard a hoarse gurgle of words and whirled about. He stared, screamed horribly, then turned and fled screaming into the darkness. Wade lurched drunkenly after him.

Feet pattered across the deck; the darkness was suddenly swarming with vague shapes that hurled themselves upon Wade and bore him down. A flashlight cut a tunnel of light through the gloom and brushed away the darkness that hid Wade's face. He blinked at the ache of light and wondered vaguely what all the excitement was about and how soon they would let him get to bed.

"Who in blazes are you?" a voice demanded abruptly from behind the torturing sword of light.

"Wade's my name," he answered. "Mate of the Larkspur. She foundered with all hands in the last hurricane. I have been drifting in a boat ever since. You ran me down a while back when I was sleeping. I got hold of the bobstay and climbed aboard. I'd appreciate you givin' me a bit of food and water and a place to sleep. I'm all in."

There was a mutter of conversation in the gloom. Wade stood apathetically, hands grasping his arms. Would they never let him get to bed? Abruptly a voice came to him, the words cut like a shining knife through the soft folds of his fatigue.

"Can you swim?"

"Eh? Why, yes, a little."

"Then you'd better start doin' it."

"What's that? What do you mean?"

"You've not wanted here. Go swim somewhere else."

Wade felt a slow anger beginning to burn through the numbing weakness that bound him.

"Don't be a fool," he snapped. "I couldn't swim a mile."

"Now ain't that awful sad," the voice said mockingly. "You'll know right soon if you're lyin'. Have him overboard, some of you."

Powerful hands forced him mercilessly toward the rail. In their grip he was like a child, his struggles of no more avail than a baby's.

"It's murder," he cried. "You'll swing for this night's work, I tell you." But somehow his voice carried no conviction. Nothing of all this seemed really to matter. Sleep was what he wanted, hours of deep, dreamless sleep. And death was very like sleep.

Voices chuckled hoarsely at his words; suddenly he felt the rail pressing against his back, felt himself lifted into the air and poised for the throw.

A new voice roared abruptly through the night.

"Stop that," it bellowed. "Put him down!" Wade was lowered reluctantly to the deck. "Now what's goin' on here?" the voice demanded.

There was a low murmur of indistinguishable conversation. Then a vague shape approached Wade and halted. The voice spoke:

"What's your name and business?"

"I explained all that once," Wade answered angrily. "No one seemed to believe me, so I'm keepin' my mouth shut from now on."

"Yeah? Well, you got your choice between talkin' and swimmin'. Which is it goin' to be?"

"I'll talk," Wade answered sullenly. "What do you want to know?"

"Name and business."

"Peter Wade, mate of the Larkspur."

"How'd you get aboard this schooner?"

"I've been drifting in a boat ever since the Larkspur foundered. A while back your ship ran me down. I climbed up the bobstay and asked for food and drink and a place to sleep. All the help I got was an invitation to go overboard for a swim. Fine way to treat a man, I call it."

"You were mate, eh? Can you navigate?"

"Sure. The owners were planning to give me a ship of my own at the end of this cruise."

HIS questioner suddenly bellowed with laughter. One great hand clapped Wade jovially ond the shoulder.

"I hope you don't mind the little joke the crew's been havin' with you. Fact is, they was worried and just had to bust out somehow. You see," here the voice lowered impressively and became confidential, "the captain died last week and there's not another man-jack of us who can navigate. So you're really a blessing. Come below and I'll see that you get grub and a drink and a place to sleep. By the way, my name's Fraser. I'm mate of this schooner, the Seahorse. Come along, Wade."

Taking Wade's arm in his, he led the bewildered castaway, along the deck and down the companion ladder to the cabin.

Peter wade ate and drank, then tumbled into a bunk and sank into fathoms of black nothingness. He slept eighteen hours and awoke a new man. His run-down vitality had renewed itself and he was ravenously hungry. Fraser, entering the cabin, found him sitting on the side of his bunk.

"Hello, Wade," he said. "Awake at last, eh? How are you feeling?"

"Hungry," Wade answered slowly. "And curious."

Fraser's eyes narrowed. His thick body swayed slowly on the balls of his feet.

"I have no quarrel with a man's hunger," he said.

"Meaning that you don't like curiosity?"

"Meaning that a navigator in the hand is worth two in the sea. You understand? Then come on deck and work out our position."

"Well," Fraser asked when Wade had finished his calculations, "where are we?"

"In the South Pacific, a few degrees north of the Horn. The nearest land is about two days away. It's a little group of barren islands known as the Gallias. Australia is some distance farther."

"H-m. Does anything grow on these Gallias? Are they inhabited?"

"They're uninhabited and pretty barren. I've never seen them, but I understand that there's fruits and vegetables of a sort. And fresh water."

"We'll go there first," Fraser decided. "Our grub is gettin' low and we've not too much water. You see, we were whaling down south of the Horn and got caught in a hurricane. It blew us all over the pond and finally washed the captain overboard. Since then we've just drifted, hopin' for something to turn up."

"Here's your course then," Wade said. "We should sight land toward dawn the day after tomorrow. Now let's eat."

The day passed quickly. After the meal Wade turned in again and slept until evening. He awoke to a feeling of illimitable well-being. His strength had come flowing back and the numbing blanket of fatigue had slipped from mind and body. His brain was furiously alive. It searched and probed the queerness of this ship. For there was something queer about it, about the crew, about Fraser. Their actions when he had first come aboard were suspicious. Fraser had said that they were joking, trying to scare the stranger from the sea by threatening to drop him overboard. Wade's opinion was that only Fraser's coming had prevented the joke from becoming a reality. And this business of having no navigator except the captain. Well, that didn't sound just right, not on a whaler. Also the schooner seemed undermanned, and there was a curious sense of reticence in the air. Yes, Wade decided, there was more in this business than met the eye. He must keep a sharp lookout and discover just how things stood.

With a wide yawn he rose to his feet and went softly on deck.

IT WAS early evening and the night seemed brimming over with the luminous gray smoke of dusk. High up in the transparent darkness great, pulsing stars hung in intricate and delicate patterns. To the east the new moon was like a thin curve of white-hot wire. A fine wind blew endlessly through the night and the schooner swept forward like a living thing.

In the thickening darkness Wade was unnoticed as he made his way forward and leaned on the bow-rail, staring reflectively into the black water through which the Seahorse was cleaving its way.

The night grew very dark. A cloak of shadow wrapped itself about Wade in folds so thick as to make the hand at the end of his extended arm utterly invisible. Suddenly, out of the blank gloom, a voice spoke. So clear it was that the speaker could be no more than a few feet distant. Instinctively Wade shrank back and breathed more softly.

"There's bad luck aboard, I tell you!" the voice said.

"Why?" a second voice demanded.

"Wimmin, for one thing. That red-headed woman's goin' to bring bad luck. I ain't never seen it fail yet."

"She's only a girl. What kin she do down there in the hold?"

"She'll bring bad luck," the first voice insisted. "Why didn't Fraser knock her on the head and drop her overboard at the same time as her old man?"

"I dunno. Unless maybe he wants to keep her for himself."

"That's it, I guess. But somethin'll come of it. You mark my words. And what about that feller that come aboard last night? He's bound to get nosy and find out things."

The second man laughed.

"Don't worry none about him, Dan," he advised. "He's a navigator. Fraser's goin' to use him until we get in sight of Mors'by, then Mr. Wade of the Larkspur will get knocked on the head and go overboard. Along with the girl likely."

"Good riddance, too," Dan said venomously. "Say, let's get below out o' this wind. A man can't smoke here, it's that strong."

THEIR bare feet made no sound, but Wade saw the men pass through the lurid glow of the port light. His mind was racing in lightning flashes of thought. Stray incidents and bits of information wove themselves into a bold, clear pattern. There had been a mutiny aboard the Seahorse—a successful mutiny in which the captain and the officers had been killed and dropped into the sea. That explained the lack of a navigator and the short-handedness of the schooner. This ship was a whaler, so it most probably had a valuable cargo of sperm aboard. And there was a prisoner, a girl—very likely the captain's daughter—in the hold. Fraser was keeping her for himself, eh? A hot gust of rage licked like a tongue of fire at Wade's brain.

He must rescue the girl first of all. After that was done he could take steps to defeat the purposes of Fraser and the mutineers. A plan began to take nebulous shape in his mind.

Without a sound he crept along the deck and found the hatch combing—the hatch was open. Dim figures came along the deck, muttering uneasily as Wade slipped over the combing, hung by his hands, then dropped down two or three feet.

It was inky black here and the air was thick with the smell of sperm oil and rancid fat. He could hardly breathe. If the girl was in this foul place she must be going through horrible hours of torment. The seas pounded on the outside of the hull. Their thudding smothered any small noises that Wade made in his blind, groping movements.

Suddenly his hands struck upright wood—the after bulkhead of the hold, he decided—and followed it through the darkness. And then, utterly without warning, his foot descended upon something alive. He drew back as quickly as though he had trodden upon a snake and dropped to his knees. One hand fumbled through the darkness and touched soft, thick hair. It strayed lower, crept lightly across a face. In the darkness some one gasped with a sharp hiss of indrawn breath.

"Who's that?" a girl's voice demanded.

"Quiet," Wade muttered. "I'm a castaway this ship picked up last night. Peter Wade is my name. I overheard a conversation a few minutes ago that gave me the idea you were down here. Now you'll have to be rescued. Can you stick it here for another twenty-four hours?"

"I've been here for ages. Twenty-four hours more won't make much difference," the girl said bitterly.

"We'll sight land tomorrow night some time," Wade explained. "The Gallias. I'll try to provision a boat so we can get away. Are you tied?"

"Chained to the bulkhead like a dog," she explained. "An old arrangement for mutineers. Fraser has the key."

"What's this all about?" Wade asked. "I gather that there's been a mutiny headed by this Fraser. But that's all I do know."

"There isn't much more. This is my father's schooner. I'm Ellen West. We were after whales when a storm caught us and drove the Seahorse hundreds of miles from the regular whaling grounds. We did not see the sun for nearly two weeks, and when the storm finally died down we found ourselves in the midst of an enormous herd of whales. The sea was thick with them. The boats were got out and the hunt began. In near record time we had every cask aboard filled with sperm. Better than that, we found a great quantity of ambergris floating on the sea. We gathered every bit of it and have a cargo worth an incredible sum of money.

"All this while Fraser was planning his mutiny. When he was quite ready the whole thing ran off like clockwork. My father, the two mates, two hunters and the few loyal members of the crew were killed and tossed into the sea. I was imprisoned here in the hold. That was Fraser's idea; the rest of the mutineers wanted to treat me like the others. Of course, they will kill me eventually. I know too much to be left alive."

"They won't kill you," Wade assured her. "I'll have you out of here by this time tomorrow. It's a promise."

HE MADE his way back through the thick blackness of the hold and climbed out the hatch. There was no one in sight when he reached the deck and walked aft to the cabin.

"Where've you been?" Fraser demanded when Wade descended the companion ladder and entered the cabin.

"Up in the bow," he answered. "Just sitting there and thinking."

"Don't go thinking too much," Fraser said warningly. "It's bad for a man. Apt to get him into trouble."

Wade grunted his assent and climbed into the bunk.

The hours of daylight dragged past like weed-clogged waves. At last the sun dropped over the horizon and sheets of golden light washed along the sky. The twilight grew dimmer and stars stole softly into the transparent sky.

When the darkness grew so dense that vision could pierce no more than a yard ahead, Wade climbed the companion ladder with his bunk mattress over his shoulder. Very carefully he made his way to the hatch of the afterhold and dropped into its pit of blackness. In one corner of the hold he threw down the mattress and tore the heavy duck ticking as though it were cotton.

A match flared pink in the darkness. Deep into the straw Wade thrust it and watched the tiny flame grow to a proud, tall fire. Then he stumbled back to the hatchway and climbed on deck. In a few minutes the hold would be a pit of fire—a raging inferno that no amount of water could smother. Then the flames would reach the casks of oil. * *

IN HIS cabin he snatched up a bundle and hurried back to the deck. The fire had not yet been discovered, he noted, but its yellow glow was beginning to seep faintly up through the hatch. He raced to the forward hold and dropped into the gloom. Suddenly he stopped dead. In the corner where Ellen West was chained there was a glow of light. And he could hear Fraser's thick voice. Silently Wade crept forward.

"Your last chance," Fraser was saying. "It's me or the sharks now. Choose quick."

"The sharks naturally," Ellen answered. "Do you imagine I'd have anything to do with my father's murderer? Go ahead and kill me. If you don't I'll see you hanged one day."

"All right. You've had your chance." Fraser's voice was incredibly vicious. "Now—" The yellow light glinted evilly on the blue metal of his revolver.

From the edge of the tiny circle of light Wade hurled himself forward, catapulted through the air like a rage-charged projectile. He crashed into Fraser's side and sent him spinning against the bulkhead. The revolver clattered to the floor of the hold. Like a tiger Wade was upon the mutineer; his hands closed on the thick neck. In the gloom they grappled and swayed. Hideous noises wrenched through snarling lips and died gurgling to silence. Then Wade, gasping agonizingly, stepped to the girl's side.

"I feel like a butcher," he said. "But it had to be done. Look, here are the keys. I'll unlock the chain. And here is a bundle of men's clothes. Put them on. Quick. Hell will be loose on this schooner any minute now."

There was a roar of pounding feet on the deck above. Shrill, excited screams tore through the stillness. Anxiously Wade stood by the hatch waiting for Ellen West to join him. Then a cool hand touched his.

"I'm ready," Ellen said. "What's happening up there?"

"I set the schooner on fire," Wade told her. "We'll have to get into a boat."

They climbed on deck and looked about them. Men were running to and fro in a panic.

"Water an' grub," some one was shouting. "Look alive there and get those boats over."

"Try to put her out," a man yelled.

"Put out nothing! Wait till the fire gets at all that oil. Get water an' grub, you fools."

A thin red line of flame spurted across the deck, blazed to the height of a man and sank to a full glow. A muffled explosion shook the afterhold. The masts began to quiver strangely. A huge puff of flame-shot smoke blotted out the stars.

"Here's the boat," Wade whispered, drawing Ellen to the side. "Get in quick."

The girl dropped into the boat and snatched up a pair of oars. Wade followed her and slashed the painter with his knife. He found a second pair of oars.

"Row hard," he snapped.

The boat shot away from the Seahorse, cut across the circle of ruddy light that stained the sea and drove into a wall of darkness.

"Far enough," Wade gasped at length. "We'll stop here a bit and watch."

There was a sudden terrific explosion. A vast scarlet fountain tore upward through the screaming night. Sea and sky were blood-red. Wade and the girl saw the shattered wreck of the Seahorse falling to pieces before their eyes. On the water they saw three boats, their crews straining frantically at the oars, their ghastly faces turned upward to the sky.

THEN the fountain of flaming oil and wreckage fell out of the heavens upon them. Above the roar of the fire one long-drawn and terrible scream pierced ~~their ears~~. Then silence, save for the dull noise of oil burning on a circle of empty sea.

It was the girl who first broke through the evil spell that bound them. She spoke as though in the grip of some prophetic ecstasy, and Wade noticed that her face was clear-cut and sharp, like a vivid, young prophetess of some desert tribe.

"And the heavens fell in fire upon the evildoers, destroying them utterly," she chanted, then, with her voice breaking suddenly: "Oh, it was terrible; that scream—Peter, I can't bear it. Take me away, take me away."

"It was the justice of the sea," Wade said solemnly. "They were murderers and, what is worse on a ship, they were slovenly. The boats had not been overhauled since your father's last inspection before the mutiny. They were in terrible shape. Some were unprovisioned, some had no oars, some were stove in and unfloatable. All of them had tangled, useless falls. That is why they did not get farther from the schooner before it blew up. That is what I mean by the justice of the sea—the awful, unwavering justice that punishes carelessness."

"But this boat?" the girl asked. "It was ready and——"

"I overhauled it today and launched it after dark, before I set the fire."

Ellen West squared her shoulders.

"I owe you an awful lot, Mr. Wade," she said. "You've done everything for me——"

"I want to conquer the world for you, Ellen," Wade said earnestly. "By the way, you called me Peter a few minutes ago. I liked it."

The girl flushed and fell silent.

A week later they were picked up by a trading schooner.

"Where'd you come from?" the skipper asked wonderingly.

"The Seahorse," Wade answered. "She caught fire."

"Any one else saved?"

Wade shook his head.

"Just us two," he said. "And skipper, will you land us at the first port that has a missionary?"

His glance at the girl beside him was a queer mixture of pride and worship, tenderness and amazement.

"We want to get married," he said in an awed voice.

PROCLAMATION

The stress of conditions due to the present economic depression prompts me to appeal to every citizen of Norwich, so far as possible, to provide work for the unemployed.

Nearly every house owner will find some painting, some repair or other work which should be done at once, or which might be done now instead of next year. All such jobs, even though of small extent, will in the aggregate help when help is needed.

If every contractor, builder, manufacturer or employer of workers, without depreciating their product, alternate the engagement of their workers to the end that all may share equally in working hours, they will materially aid the general situation and render humanitarian service.

At this season of the year every task which may be as well done now as in the Spring will furnish much needed income to workmen at a time when the usual slack Winter period is so close at hand.

The unemployed desire work, not charity, and benevolence will not be required if every citizen endeavors to "have that job done now."

Moving Pictures At Y. M. C. A.

At the 4 o'clock service at the local Y. M. C. A. on the coming Sunday an attractive moving picture will be shown. The feature is entitled, "Square Shoulders." This picture was advertised for last Sunday but circumstances arose that made it necessary to substitute for it "The Flying Marine," which proved interesting.

"Square Shoulders" is a splendid story of the devotion of a wayward father to his son, with the colorful, dashing background of a military school.

Although the father is a derelict, the boy believes him to have been a great man. The father accidentally meets his son and stirred by the kid's pride in his memory, decides to try to live up to it. In order to be near him, the father gets a job as a stable man.

To this service the adult public is invited and youths 15 and over will be admitted.

Broadway Theatre

Packed with drama, thrill, appeal and delicious comedy, and produced on a lavish scale, "Her Man," a Pathe picture featuring Helen Twelvetrees, Marjorie Rambeau, Phillips Holmes, Ricardo Cortez, James Gleason and Franklyn Pangborn, now playing a four days' engagement at Warner Bros. Broadway theatre.

Phillips Holmes in "Her Man".

This is a tremendous story of the slums of Havana and the regeneration of a young woman through the power of love. Miss Twelvetrees has perhaps the best role of her career as Frankie, a dance hall habitue, who until she meets "Her Man" is the pliant tool of Johnnie, a rascally knife-throwing bounder finely portrayed by Ricardo Cortez. Dan, a sailor who salvages the soul of Frankie and wins her love is artistically presented by Philips Holmes, a young player of stellar ability. James Gleason as a mirthful wise-cracking sailor, and Franklin Pangborn, provide many laughs.

The thrill scenes in the picture are numerous and it is safe to say that the first fights which enliven the action, are the most realistic ever presented on the screen.

Park Church Fair

The Women's Federation of Park church is putting on another of its unique fairs, "Au Panier de Fleurs," next Wednesday and Thursday at the parish house. Tea will be served from 3 to 5, and supper a la carte from 6 to 7.30 each day. There will be artistic needle-craft from home and abroad; dolls big and little, gay and bewitching; 100 aprons useful and ornamental; food such as only Park church women can create; arts and crafts clever and modernistic; books to be bought and ordered; mysterious grabs from the unseen; delicious homemade candy; sacred white elephants. Palmists will tell your past, present, and future fortunes, afternoons and evenings. Members of the Men's club will feature a parade of women's latest and most popular styles—don't miss it. This fair promises to be the most entertaining and delightful function of the season, offering an unusual opportunity to solve the problem of early Christmas shopping. Come one! Come all!

Palace Theatre

Starting Saturday at the Palace theatre and running through Tuesday is the outstanding picture of the year, one of the fastest moving stories of the underworld that has ever been dared to be filmed, more real, more exciting, more human interest than has ever been told in the pictures.

Lewis Ayers, the handsome youth who won such universal praise for his work in Common Clay and All Quiet on the Western Front and whose rise to fame has been consistent since, in the brief screen career that has been his, scores again, this time as the big shot of the racketeering world, Lou Ricarno. The cast includes such well known players as James Cagney, Robert Elliott and the boy star Leon Janney, remembered for his fine work in Courage, and in Old English; Dorothy Mathews, a striking newcomer, excellently portrays the alluring gungirl who plots with her mate to lay a trap for the king of the underworld, including marriage with him, and the consequent capture of the fortune he has amassed by his many crooked deals.

Lou Ricarno, satisfied with his latest haul, decides to marry the girl and take her with him to Florida where he may satisfy another desire the writing of the thrilling story of his life. Mileaway, who succeeds to gang leadership, has not the power to keep the manifold branches of crookdom in subjection, and the wires are kept hot urging Lou to return. Failing in this the gangsters plot to kidnap his young brother and in doing so the lad is killed. Fired with the determination to avenge the child's death, Ricarno returns to the old haunts only to suffer the appalling retaliation of his former pals.

The picture provides a thousand thrills. If it again proves that the crook cannot win it shows the tremendous, if misguided, courage of men of the racketeer world.

A special bill of the finest in short subjects adds to the great entertainment afforded by this great bill.

IN NORWICH FIFTY YEARS AGO

Shetucket Steam Fire Engine Co., No. 7, at a meeting 50 years ago this week, elected Dennis Driscoll foreman. The same week the Orchestral union elected E. C. Webster president. Interesting extracts taken from the files of The Norwich Bulletin of November, 1880, are as follows:

Monday, Nov. 8, 1880—The steamer Rhode Island of the Providence line, went ashore on Bonnet Point near Beaver Tail, Narragansett Bay, about 4.30 o'clock Saturday morning. No passengers were lost, but several of the crew were hurt in the confusion and wreckage. At daylight the passengers and crew were safely landed. STOCK PRICES CONTINUE TO RISE FOR THE FOURTH SUCCESSIVE DAY

NEW YORK, Nov. 14.—(AP)—Copper was king on the financial markets today. Inspired by a 12 cent quotation for the red metal representing a 2 1-2 cent advance this week, stock prices scored their fourth successive rise, which meant that the rally had endured longer than any upward movement since May.

Net gains ranged from 1 to 5 points, but the trading was not particularly active until the last half hour when a scramble for the copper issues brought general covering throughout the list. Sales for the day totaled 2,640,500 shares, a drop of about 800,000 from yesterday.

Continuation of the rally, which averages 11 points for the four days, emphasized the influence which the depressed commodities have wielded over speculative sentiment. Prospects of a curtailment in copper output estimated at about 20,000 tons a month and the resultant gain in prices seemed to relieve the market of some of its worries. The copper situation admittedly has been a difficult hazard on the road to recovery, and if the present improvement can be retained or expanded, Wall street believes the consequences may be rather far-reaching in that other basic staples may be helped by copper's example.

Another bullish factor was the drastic deflation in federal reserve brokers' loans, from which all traces of the big bull market have now been removed. Much of the current buying is obviously coming from the strongest sources, and any liquidation remaining will doubtless consist largely of loans held by interior banks.

The response of bonds to the stock market's performance was notable, especially in the case of secondary issues which had been heavily sold earlier in the week. Wheat lost 5-8 to 1 7-8 cents a bushel in sympathy with lower prices in Winnipeg and Liverpool and a bearish Canadian government crop estimate. Corn also closed lower, losing 1 5-8 to 2 1-4 cents, reflecting lower southwestern markets and larger receipts. Cotton rallied 5 to 14 points net.

Reduction of the Chrysler dividend announced after the close had been largely discounted by the stock, which closed fractionally higher. The automobile company's net loss for the third quarter was a forceful illustration of the difficulties that have beset the industry this year.

Other business news was routine. Weekly trade reviews reported continued irregularity. Dun's said mid-November was bringing no "really significant change" from the trends of recent months, although Bradstreet's found developments somewhat less one-sided during the past week.

Stocks ran into profit taking in the forenoon, but losses of 1 to 2 points were easily assimilated and the market worked slowly upward until late in the session when 12 cent copper was announced. Then the copper shares, which had been making reasonably steady progress, attracted much wider buying, and the leaders of the group extended their gains to 3 points. Chile was up 4 and Granby 4 7-8 at the close.

U. S. Steel rose to 146 7-8, ending the day at the top, up 1 7-8 points. American Telephone closed at 191 1-2, 13 points above its recent low, for a net gain of 3 7-8. Union Pacific was strong with a 5-point advance. General Electric, American Can, General Motors, Bethlehem Steel, American Tobacco "B," Standard Oil of N. J., Union Carbide, Westinghouse, Erie, Southern Railway, New York Central, American Water Works, Electric Power & Light, and Consolidated Gas, rose 1 to 3. Amusements shares firmed after another early display of weakness. Fox and Loew's each gained a point.

Sterling cables touched a new low for the year at $4.85 5-8. The French franc was firmer. Exchanges generally were irregular.

Money was so abundantly supplied that about $50,000,000 offered in the call market went unloaned.

BOND MARKET

NEW YORK, Nov. 14.—(AP)—A strong demand for railroad obligations whose yields were enhanced by recent declines featured trading today as the bond market advanced for the second successive day. Activity on the buying side was the best in several weeks and swelled the turnover to the largest figure in more than a month.

Reflecting the better tone in the stock market a long list of carrier obligations, and a smaller number of utility and industrial issues, registered gains of a point or more. High grade issues little disturbed by the recent liquidation moved more quietly in most instances.

Strong rails included Baltimore & Ohio 1st 5s, St. Paul adjustment 5s and 5s of 1975, Chicago & Northwestern general 3 1-2s, Cleveland Union Terminal 5s, Lehigh Valley of Pennsylvania 5s, Missouri Pacific 5s A, Nickel Plate 4 1-2s C, Northern Pacific lien 4s, Pennsylvania general 5s, Southern Pacific refunding 4s, Southern Pacific of California 5s, Southern Railway general 4s, Texas Pacific 5s C, Wabash 5s B, and Western Maryland 4s. The spectacular performer of the group was Denver Rio Grande & Western 5s, which rallied 3 3-4 points.

The strong tone of shares was directly reflected in the closing prices of bonds with stock privilege features. American International 5 1-2s, American Telephone 4 1-2s, Baltimore & Ohio 4 1-2s, Rock Island 4 1-2s, Philadelphia & Reading Coal and Iron 6s, Missouri and Pacific 5 1-2s, Shubert Theatres 6s, rallied sharply. General Theatres 6s, however, closed 3 points net lower.

Bonds of electric and communications companies were practically higher but in contrast with the heavy trading in rails, were very quiet. New York Traction bonds were much improved, and Detroit Edison 5s and International Telephone debenture issues advanced a point each.

One of the features of the improvement in industrials was the gain made by Chile Copper 5s up 1 3-8 points in response to the better outlook in the industry. Armour & Co. 5 1-2s and Armour Real Estate 4 1-2s, California Petroleum 5s, Container Corp. 5s, Inland Steel 4 1-2s, International Match 5s, and Warner Sugar 7s, were among bonds that forged ahead.

What has been almost a daily feature of the bond movement this week was maintained when Treasury issues again made new 1930 highs. Prices unprecedented in more than two years were reached by Liberty 3 1-2s and Liberty 1st 4 1-4s. On one sale Liberty 1st 4s made a large gain of 12-32nds.

Foreign obligations were irregular. French governments were very active, and the 7 1-2s dipped 1-2 point from the year's high. Peruvian bonds were unaffected by the disturbance in that country and held steady. German government obligations were little changed. The 7s advanced 3-8. Australian 4 1-2s, Buenos Aires 6s, Colombia 6s, New South Wales 5s, were well bought. Brazilian bonds were easy. Canadian Steamship Lines 6s, infrequently traded, dipped 15 1-4 points.

THE CURB MARKET

NEW YORK, Nov. 14.—(AP)—The recovery in curb market shares broadened out in its fourth day today to include all important groups.

The advance was accelerated at the expense of bears, who sold in expectation of a secondary decline. The volume of trading was smaller, however, total sales aggregating 628,203 shares.

Copper mostly continued to push higher, as producers were asking 12 cents a pound for the metal, an advance this week of 2 1-2 cents. Newmont gained 6 points, Mayflower Associates nearly 4, and Hudson Bay, Consolidated Copper, and Noranda, about 1. Roan Antelope, however, slipped off 1-2, and Consolidated Mining, which had not appeared in the active list in a long time, appeared in a few odd lot sales at 140, off 24 from the preceding sale.

Industrials gave the best account of themselves this week. Aviation Corp. of the Americas gained 2 points in response to the news that its subsidiary, Pan-American Airways, was negotiating with Imperial Airways for the organization of a trans-Atlantic air mail route. Ford of Canada A also advanced 2 points. Aluminum Co. and A. O. Smith, volatile issues, sold up 10 and 8 points.

American Cyanamid A sold up 4 1-2, and the B stock, 5-8. Cuneo Press mounted 5, and U. S. Gypsum 8 1-2. Glen Alden Coal, however, sagged 2 to 58, a new low.

Utilities continued their advance. Electric Bond & Shares and American Light & Traction gained 2, and shares pushing up 1 or more included American Gas & Electric, Middle West Utilities and United Light A. European Electric returned to activity, with a gain of 3 1-2.

Oils were uniformly firm. Cities Service sold up 1-2, getting above 20 once more. Standard of Indiana, Gulf, Humble, Standard of Nebraska, and Vacuum gained 1 to 2.

A feature of the investment trusts was Goldman Sachs, which rose 1 1-2 to 10 1-8 in a substantial turnover.

CHICAGO GRAIN MARKET

CHICAGO, Nov. 14.—(AP)—Despite surprising relative strength shown by prices for December delivery of wheat here, the wheat market as a whole averaged much lower today. General belief was expressed that farm board allies were purchasing December wheat on a large scale. On the other hand, Canada's 1930 wheat yield was officially estimated as 14,000,000 bushels larger than was forecast in September, and Canadian country marketings for 24 hours totaled 2,134,000 bushels, against 786,000 bushels a year ago.

Closing quotations on wheat were nervous at 1-4a2c a bushel lower than yesterday's finish. Corn closed 1 3-8a2 1-4c down, oats 1-4a5-8c off, and provisions showing 12a42c drop.

NEW YORK, Nov. 14.—(AP)—Only a moderate change appeared in the number of commercial failures this week, 495 defaults being reported by R. G. Dun & Co., compared with 489 last week. The report points out, however, that the current statement was relatively better, in that last week's returns covered only five business days.

The Ohio Edison Co., a subsidiary of Commonwealth & Southern Corp., has sold its interests in all transportation companies, including the Akron Transportation Co., Northern Ohio Interurban Co., Canton Traction Co. and the Cleveland-Akron-Canton Bus Co., to a new company, the Transportation Securities Co. of New York. The value of the properties and the amount of the sale is estimated at around $14,000,000, with no exchange of stock involved. The new corporation simultaneously came into possession of the Youngstown Transportation system. Transportation Securities Corp. is to be headed by W. H. Samnis, of New York, as president.

Frederick M. Small, president of the Martin-Parry Corp., in a letter to stockholders said that as soon as settlement for the Indianapolis plant is made by General Motors Corp., directors feel that with the money received they will be able to make a distribution to stockholders of $4 a share, retaining sufficient cash for the operation of the windshield business at the York, Pa., plant.

Arrangements have been made by the Banco De La Nacion of Argentina to ship $2,000,000 in gold to the Central Hanover Bank & Trust Co., of New York, on the steamer Western Prince, which sails from Buenos Aires Nov. 17.

BURGESS BEDTIME STORY

The Thing That Happened

A thing at first may be perplexing
And end in being sadly vexing.
—Peter Rabbit.

There was nothing strange in the sudden disappearance of Whitefoot the Wood Mouse. He is such a timid little fellow that he disappears at the slightest sound or movement. You see, there are so many hungry folk looking for Whitefoot that he cannot afford to take any chances. So he is forever dodging out of sight when there is no need to dodge, simply because he is not sure. Peter Rabbit knew this and waited for him to return.

"Oh, Whitefoot, did you hear it?" cried Peter, eagerly.

But suddenly something happened that put all thought of Whitefoot from Peter's mind. He heard a song, the same pretty little song that had so surprised and then puzzled him before, the dream songs, as his friends called it. You should have seen the sudden way in which Peter sat up, and the look of surprise and delight on his face. Eagerly he looked for the singer, but in vain. Not a bird was to be seen. Yet that that song came from the throat of a bird Peter hadn't a shadow of doubt.

Once more he heard that little song. This time he was certain that it came from a little tree back of that big old stump. Peter hurried around to the other side of the stump and eagerly looked for the singer. He could see all through that little tree. No one was there. He was sure of it. The little singer must have flown before he got where he could see. Anyway, this is what Peter thought.

"What are you looking for in that little tree?" asked the squeaky voice of Whitefoot the wood mouse.

Peter turned to find Whitefoot peering down at him from the top of the old stump. "Oh, Whitefoot, did you hear it?" cried Peter eagerly.

"What?" asked Whitefoot.

"That song!" replied Peter excitedly. "I heard it twice. Didn't you hear it!"

"It must have been while I was gone," said Whitefoot. "Where did it come from?"

"I thought it came from this little tree, but I couldn't be sure of it," replied Peter. "I hurried around here, but if the singer was here he had flown before I could get a glimpse of him. Of course, he may not have been in this tree. You know how hard it is to tell just where the whistle of Winsome Bluebird comes from; it seems to come from everywhere and nowhere in particular. It sounds way off when Winsome is right near, and sometimes it sounds near when Winsome is some distance away. I think this song must be like that. Oh, dear, I do wish you could hear it. Let's keep still awhile and perhaps we will hear it."

So Peter and Whitefoot kept very still for a long time, but the little singer did not sing again. "He must have flown away," said Peter at last with a sigh of disappointment.

"Perhaps you frightened him," said Whitefoot. "Excuse me a minute. I wont be gone long." He ran down the side of the old stump and scurried away along one of his secret little paths.

Not two minutes after Whitefoot disappeared Peter heard that pretty little song again. This time Peter was sure that it came from some bushes growing around an old log on the ground and nearly hiding it. He wanted to rush over there, but feared to frighten the singer. He wished Whitefoot would return. Perhaps the two of them together might find that singer.

"Well," squeaked Whitefoot, "what are you staring at now?" He was back on the old stump.

"Oh, Whitefoot, what did you go away for? I heard that song again while you were gone and this time I am sure it came from among those bushes over there," cried Peter.

"You go over there and I'll watch to see if any one flies," said Whitefoot.

So Peter hopped over to the bushes while Whitefoot kept watch from the top of the stump. Peter hunted and hunted and Whitefoot kept watch, but all in vain.

"It certainly is queer," said Peter.

"Isn't it?" replied Whitefoot.

MISSING CHARLES RIELLY IS FOUND DROWNED AT NEW LONDON

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Nov. 14.—Carrying out his threat to end his life because of despondency brought upon him by his son, William R. Reilly, a student at Yale, having been arrested charged with theft, Charles Reilly, about 55, assistant engineer of the steam yacht Narada, residing at 11 Perry street, brought about his self-destruction, though not in the manner he had predicted that he would commit suicide. This morning, instead of his lifeless body being found hanging in the woods, it was found in shallow water of the Thames river. It was proved that the despondent engineer planned taking his life, for the sash cord which he took with him when leaving home was tightly secured about his neck and a noose at the other end revealed that it had held a weighty object, which had fallen from the cord, either as Reilly jumped into the water or while the body was being recovered.

The finding of the body ends a search of nearly 72 hours for the missing man by New London and state police, the crew of the Narada, and members of the U. S. coast guard, a search that covered several miles of woodland where it had been anticipated that Reilly's body would be found hanging to a tree.

Reilly disappeared from his home shortly before noon Tuesday and as he left he remarked to his wife that he would hang himself with the cord he carried. The search in the woods was discontinued with nightfall yesterday. This forenoon, Second Assistant Engineer Daniel McKowan and Oiler Joseph Yaines, who had been alternating in the search in the woods with scouring the shore between Trumbull street and Ocean Beach, decided to make another search along the shore. About 10:15, McKowan and Yaines went to the rear of the Babcock Printing Press Co. plant, Pequot avenue, and then to the three small piers. Yaines, from the small stone pier, observed a dark object about ten feet from the dock and in about eight feet of water. Securing two pieces of wood and nailing them together, and then inserting a nail in one end of the improvised pole, the object was lifted from the water and proved to be the body of Reilly. The sash cord was about his neck, but the noose had contained a stone or similar weighty substance when the body entered the water, which had become loose and free from the noose. The police were notified and Sergeant Samuel Hick and Automobile Patrol Officer Elwood Bailey took charge of the body until Medical Examiner Charles Kaufman viewed it and then ordered it removed to an undertaking establishment.

Reilly, it is believed kept in hiding Tuesday afternoon until nightfall, when he went to the docks of the printing press works and then threw himself into the river. Besides his wife and two sons he leaves a brother, Thomas L. Reilly, chief engineer of the Narada.

WILLIAM BURKE WANTED BY AUBURN AUTHORITIES

William Burke, colored and but 19, alias William Bove, who was arrested earlier in the week as he was liberated from the New London county jail where he had served 15 days for vagrancy, has been identified as the young man sought by prison officials at Auburn, N. Y. He is being held a prisoner at the state police barracks, Groton, pending the issuance of extradition papers. Burke was arrested in Stonington several weeks ago, suspected of having committed some of the numerous burglaries perpetrated in that vicinity. The evidence sufficient to warrant Burke with being charged with theft or statutory burglary could not be obtained, so he was presented at the last term of the criminal court of common pleas on the vagrancy charge. He was sentenced more for the purpose of permitting the state police to further investigate Burke's case. Today it was made known that the youth was sought by the Auburn prison officials and an officer will come here within a day or two and take Burke back to Auburn.

Mullen is at liberty on bail of $1,000 on a charge of manslaughter and his case will be called in the police court Monday next. PERSISTENT THIEF FINALLY GETS LOOT

The thief last night who entered the market of Harrigan Bros., 200 Bank street, and McCarthy's grain store, 192 Bank street, besides attempting to gain entrance to the tailor shop of Louis Goldberg, 206 Bank street, ceasing his attempt at robbery when discovered by a tenant of the same building as that occupied by the market, resumed his thieving during the night. This morning it was discovered that the Quick Service Electric Co., 80 Bank street, and Harry's Shop, a haberdashery, conducted at 84 Bank street by Harry Smith, had been entered and that an attempt had been made to break into the store of the Aben Hardware Co., 78 Bank street. Entrance to the electrical store and the haberdashery were obtained in the same manner as was entrance to the market and grain store earlier in the evening. The thief used a ladder, which was placed against the rear of the building, then climbing to windows he forced them. The only loot obtained by the thief was at the haberdashery store where about $6 was taken from the cash register and a shirt, cap and necktie. The crook discarded his raiment for which the stolen articles were substituted, outside the building as was found today. All of the stores entered and those where entrance was attempted are within a block of each other and in a location where the street is supposed to be patroled regularly throughout the entire night.

He then accompanied the girl to the black and tan district, where he attempted to have the girl enter the resort conducted by May Barnes, 25 Douglas street, and Mrs. Widdle, proprietor of another resort, at 42 Mercer street. At both resorts the girl was not allowed to enter on account of her color, she being white. Cohen and the young woman then obtained accommodations at the Crocker House, occupying Room 314 as man and wife. Cohen instructed the girl to solicit male company of pedestrians about the city; tonight when she attracted the attention of Patrolman Cornelius Moriarty on State street the officer questioned the girl and accompanied her to police headquarters for investigation. A check-up of her story revealed her mission in New London.

Detective Sergeant Nelson Smith and Patrolman Moriarty went to the Crocker House, where they were refused admission by Cohen to the latter's room. A pass key was obtained and upon the officers entering, Cohen showed fight by attacking the officers, but he was quickly subdued and started for police headquarters. On North Bank street he broke away from the officers, went across State street and into Bank street. Patrolman Albert Iverson, on duty at the corner of State and Bank, sensing that the other officers had lost a prisoner, commandeered an automobile and overtaking Cohen in the next block, arrested him.

Both Mrs. Widdle and the Barnes woman have made written statements as to Cohen attempting to use the girl for immoral purposes in their homes.

From the Springfield police tonight it was learned that Cohen has a long police record in Springfield and other cities.

CAUGHT BOY TRYING THEFT FROM AUTOMOBILE

After watching a gang of boys, who were working with a lookout, trying to get into automobiles parked in the Ferry street neighborhood early Friday night, Sergeant Matthew Delaney and Officer Hugh McAvoy caught one of them, a youth 15 years old, who will be presented in the juvenile court.

The boys tried the locked doors of a number of machines, paying particular attention to one in which they could see a apir of gloves on the seat, but were not able to get them.

SLATER MUSEUM EXHIBIT TELLS COTTON MANUFACTURE STORY

Sunday visitors to the Slater Memorial museum will find there an exhibition of local interest. The story of cotton manufacture is told by the Ponemah mills of Taftville and the Aspinook mills of Jewett City.

The Ponemah mill has arranged a series of exhibits which show cotton in every stage from the time when it blooms in the fields to the moment when it is baled for transportation. Cotton is beautiful in all its processes, from the blossom, the raw material in snow-like formlessness, through the stages in which its thread becomes gradually finer until it is like a spider's web. Threads of decreasing thickness stretched over a black background show this progress. This story is to be found in the table cases in the small gallery of the Converse Art gallery, and it ends with a showing of the Ponemah's final product, lovely shades of cotton and rayon made at the Ponemah mill.

The large gallery is hung with some of the late designs from the Aspinook mill. A striking note in the center of the gallery is a glazed chintz for which the grouped figures were taken from Godey prints. This hanging is so charming in combination with some old lustre and pewter that one can easily imagine its beauty in a colonial room. Of the numerous designs some of the motives are classic, some modern. A charming print is for a child's room and is covered with circus animals in gay colors. Half a dozen patterns lately received as a gift from a famous mill at Lyons in France, and a bit of old English and old French hand-blocked cotton, serve to show, in affording a note of contrast, what beautiful work is being done by the Jewett City mill.

Students from the manual training building of the Norwich Free Academy are at present using these exhibits to illustrate their courses in the study of textiles, and of community life.

MAY HAVE 100 FOOT HIGH MIDDLETOWN BRIDGE

As result of a hearing at Middletown by Major Charles J. Taylor, U. S. engineers, of Providence, given to allow presentation of ideas for a proposed new bridge across the Connecticut river at that city, opinion is expressed by a member of the state bridge commission that the United States war department will decide that a vertical clearance of 100 feet for the proposed bridge is sufficient. The war department and not the commission will decide on the height of the structure. The approach for the bridge on the Middletown side probably will be in the vicinity of the Palmer factory in Factory street, near Washington street. The Portland approach will be in the vicinity of Main and Marlborough streets. Whether the Connecticut river will be widened first or the bridge constructed first is a question. The whole cost of the river dredging will be borne by the government. Plans on file in Washington provide for a channel 14 feet in depth with a width of 200 feet. Representatives of the Standard Oil Co., Hartford and New York Transportation Co., the bridge commission, Middletown chamber of commerce and state highway department were in attendance. No opposition to construction of the bridge was expressed. Talk had to do mostly with the type of structure that would best serve the navigation interests and the traveling public.

State Highway Commissioner John A. Macdonald submitted in writing to Major Taylor data that had to do with preliminary surveys for the bridge by engineers of his department. No plans have yet been drawn as the engineers must first know the height, width and type of construction proposed. The commissioner recommends that the bridge cross at the south end of Wilcox island; that there be three abutments, one on the Middletown shore, one on the island, and one on the Portland shore, and that the structure be of the suspension type. The higher in the air the bridge is built the greater the expense will be proportionately. It is roughly estimated that three million cars cross the present bridge annually.

Navigation interests at the meeting were quite agreed that the bridge should have a vertical clearance of 110 feet. It was stated that the steamer Hartford requires a clearance of 69 feet, the steamer Middletown 67 feet and a hoister owned by the Hartford and New York Navigation Co. 79 feet. The average height of a spring freshet is 15 feet. These vessels could pass under a structure of 110 feet high safely and with clearance to spare.

Little was said about the proposed deepening of the river channel. A representative of the oil company stated that if the channel were wider and deeper the company would operate bigger vessels on the river. Craft now employed in the "down east" trade could come into the river and discharge full cargoes. Some of the oil vessels now negotiating the river are 40 feet wide and are towed two abreast. Veteran boatmen at the hearing made no effort to speak in technical language. The word "width" was employed throughout the meeting instead of "beam." Commissioner Macdonald stated that the higher the bridge the less pleasing it would look spanning the river. Each additional foot of height will mean added expense. Following the hearing a member of the bridge commission said the proposed structure might cost between two and three million dollars. Those who have made a study of the bridge problem think the new structure should be at least 80 feet wide. Schooners require greater clearance than the river steamboats. This type of vessel seldom comes into the river as sailing vessels as lumber carriers for river ports are passing out.

Former Mayor T. M. Russell, a member of the bridge commission, asked Major Taylor if the war department determines the height of transmission lines across the river. He answered affirmatively, saying that the department issues permits. The height of the line at Cromwell, according to Commissioner Macdonald, is 143 feet, with a greater height at East Haddam.

The opinion was expressed that even though bigger vessels are built for river navigation, a clearance of 110 feet will be ample.

Elwyn T. Clark of Haddam, another member of the commission, suggested that perhaps the river might be posted so as to exclude vessels that could not pass under the bridge.

Col. Andrew N. Shepard, another commission member, declared that he could see no reason for a bridge clearance of over 100 feet. He could not recall when he had seen a schooner in the river. There was a ripple of laughter when he remarked that within a few years there would be no traffic on the river if Massachusetts "steals all the water."

600 DAY BUILDING LIMIT ON COAST GUARD ACADEMY

A building limit of 600 days for completion of the contract on the new Coast Guard academy at New London is included in the contract that will be awarded.

Plans and specifications for the work were received Thursday at the academy at Fort Trumbull. The specifications occupy 262 pages and there are many plans. The new academy is to be constructed on property off Mohegan avenue.

Plans are for the following buildings to be constructed under the initial contract; Academics, cadet barracks, administration, engineering laboratory, superintendent's quarters, enlisted men's quarters, storeroom, fireroom and electrical power house, warehouse, gymnasium and armory gatehouse and a structure for housing a telescope. A band stand is also to be constructed, and figures will also be submitted for an athletic field.

Bids for the contract are to be opened in the office of the supervising architect at Washington, Dec. 5, and indications are that the contract will be awarded as soon as possible, so that work may be expedited.

Quarters for instructors at the academy will be built under special contract at a later date, it is said.

UNION MEETING SERIES UNDER Y. M. C. A. AND CHURCHES

Dr. Charles E. Jefferson of New York, the noted preacher, will deliver a series of six addresses in Norwich under the join auspices of the local Y. M. C. A. and the churches. It is very unusual that cities the size of Norwich are so fortunate as to have a man so popular and able a speaker and doubtless great audiences will greet him.

Dr. Jefferson, who will meet the first of his many appointments in Norwich on Sunday evening, at 7.30, at the United Congregational church, is a very interesting person to know, and very much of a character. As a young man, born in Cambridge, Ohio, graduated from Ohio-Wesleyan university, and later Boston university, he was much given to the study of books, and has been a life long reader of the most varied material.

During his 43 years in the ministry, ten in Chelsea, Mass., and 33 in New York, he has been a most aggressive student, both of books, of men, and of human affairs. He has taken opportunity to investigate all of the traveled parts of the world, and many places less familiar to sight-seers. He has written and published 30 books. He is a master of simple English, gifted in special pleading, and possessed of rare humor. For 21 years he was a member of the Yale corporation, and is a trustee of the Church Peace Union. Few matters have so greatly stirred him as has the folly of war, and for years he has striven in all available ways for international understanding and good will.

On the occasion of Dr. Jefferson's previous visit to Norwich a large appreciation was expressed and great interest arose in his work, so that the people of Norwich and its vicinage will doubly enjoy this visit of Dr. Jefferson because they know him even better than when he was here before.

ADVOCATES RETURN TO FAITH OF FOREFATHERS

A review of the conditions of the Jewish people today throughout the world, which he regarded as dark and critical, and a solution to the problem, was the gist of Dr. Abba Abrams' sermon at the Friday evening service of the Norwich Community synagogue on Church street. Dr. Abrams, who has just returned from a trip to Europe and Palestine, is from the Jewish Theological seminary at New York.

Following a review of the conditions in the European countries, Rabbi Abrams said that in this country the Jewish institutions have likewise suffered greatly by the economic depression; also by the lack of Jewishness in many of the men, who are not living in accordance with Jewish principles and are participating in questionable ventures.

In offering a solution to the problem, Rabbi Abrams advised the Jewish people in Norwich and other communities to soar above the oppression by adhering to the spirit, the faith in God and living the principles of Judaism that their forefathers in the middle ages practiced. It is the return to the temple, not only as a house of worship, but also as a place of study and as a central meeting place for all communal activities, so that not only the child and adolescents, but the men and women, will live in an atmosphere of righteousness and justice, he said. So that there will be built up a spiritual reservoir sufficient to withstand all oppression of today and sufficient again to bring back peace to earth, prosperity and equality, for progress of mankind.

Refreshments were served in the social rooms following the service.

TELLS WOMAN'S GUILD OF GOOD-WILL PILGRIMAGE

The first meeting of the season of the Woman's guild of the United Congregational church was held Friday afternoon at 3 o'clock in the social rooms of the church with the president, Mrs. Edward A. Rich, presiding, and an attendance of 65 members. Many favorable comments were made upon the attractiveness of the rooms, which have recently been re-decorated.

In the business session reports of various committees were heard and plans were made for the Christmas meeting, designated as "Family Night," which all members of the church have been invited to attend. This meeting is to be held in the social rooms on Dec. 12. An address by Rev. Theodore M. Shipherd, D.D., of Park Congregational church, was an interesting part of the meeting. He spoke upon the subject, "Impressions from the Good-Will Pilgrimage to England."

Rev. Dr. Shipherd gave a fine description of the different types of people with whom he came in contact during his stay in England and of his visit to the lord mayor of Norwich, England.

At the conclusion of the meeting, tea was served by a committee consisting of Mrs. Harvey M. Briggs and Mrs. Arthur M. Thompson. Those pouring were Mrs. Frederick W. Lester and Miss Margaret Campbell.

NORWICH TOWN

JUBILEE SINGERS AT METHODIST CHURCH

Next Sunday evening, in the Norwich Town Methodist Episcopal church, the Norwich Jubilee Singers are to give a recital of Negro spirituals. The organization consists of a quartet of male singers from the two Negro churches in the city, directed by Robert Johnson. The Jubilee Singers will be accompanied by Mrs. Florence Auted Whitted, a reader, who has appeared before large and well pleased congregations twice during the past two years when the choir of the African Methodist Episcopal church gave recitals of Negro spirituals in Norwich Town. The recital will be a part of the regular evening worship which begins at 7:30. Among the favorite selections to be given are "Swing Low Sweet Chariot," "Steal Away," "Roll, Jordan Roll," and "Nobody Knows The Trouble I've Had." Mrs. Whitted will recite a number of choice selections.

In the line of march on Armistice day were 17 Wolf Cubs from the pack connected with the Norwich Town Methodist Episcopal church. The Cubs were in charge of Patrol Leader Clayton Rose of the Boy Scouts. He was also in charge of the scouts from Troop 2, who took part in the parade.

FARM BUREAU REPORTS ITS MOST ACTIVE YEAR

ald has helped us as last year in giving a course on the care of young children to groups of young mothers. As a result of work, Miss Macdonald did in Franklin last year, 40 children were immunized for diphtheria. In Lebanon immunization has been discussed and we hope definite steps will be taken before next year.

Our outstanding clothing project for the year was our spring fashion and fabric show in Norwich. The Merchants bureau of the Norwich chamber of commerce co-operated with us and the attendance of 500 showed that the women in the county were interested in the project. As such a large percent of the people are buying ready to wear garments, the fashion show gave Miss Van Cleef an unusual opportunity to give suggestions as to lines and styles becoming to various types and furthermore offered an opportunity to show seasonal style notes. This meeting was followed by group meetings throughout the county where the women who make their own dresses had help from Miss Van Cleef with their problems.

Millinery has also played a large part in our programme during the past year. Very nearly 300 hats have been made or made over. This means quite a bit in terms of money saving to the women for, if $1.00 only per hat is saved this total means $300.00.

In our home management work our outstanding project has been our kitchen work and in particular our kitchen tour. This tour was conducted with an idea of giving the women in the county an opportunity to visit some kitchens that had been fixed over so as to be more convenient. Thirty-four cars containing 150 women visited seven kitchens and I'm sure these women learned a great deal that they can apply to their own kitchen more convenient.

Reseating of old chairs and upholstering of old furniture has also played quite a large part in our program.

In addition to project meetings we have held a few general activities of interest to the women. This year our second annual picnic was held at Mohegan park. We felt very pleased to have Dr. Caroline Hedger of Chicago speak to the 150 women present on "The Health of the Homemaker."

Eleven women from New London county spent the entire seven days of homemaker's week at Storrs college at conference. Many others went up for the day only. Very helpful programmes were given during this week.

In looking ahead to our next year's programme, we invited all the leaders to meet and plan a county programme for 1930-31.

A health programme was planned and will be carried on during the year. Particular emphasis will be put on posture of adults as well as children. This county programme has been printed in the Farm Bureau News and summary reports of each subject will be in the news also.

I would like to take this opportunity to thank the local leaders and the farm bureau for their cooperation during the past year. I hope that because of our work, the homes in New London county have been made more convenient and the people healthier and happier.

Election of Officers

This year the nominating committee of the bureau decided to send to each member in each town ballots; from which, the member should make his selection for the board of directors.

Being the first time that this had been tried the results were exceptionally good. Out of membership of about 400 there were 185 ballots returned. On October 31st the nominating committee met and selected the directors for the coming year.

Their report was as follows:

President, Fred M. Abell, Lebanon; first vice president, Joseph Clark, Ledyard; second vice president, Mrs. Geo Metcalf, Groton; secretary, John Hollowell, Preston; treasurer, Miss Margery Brewster, Griswold.

Directors: Bozrah—Mrs. Jabez Lathrop, Frank Lathrop; Colchester—Mrs. Ben Neleber, Ben Neleber; E. Lyme—Mrs. Arthur Beebe, Arthur Beebe; Franklin—Mrs. A. H. Speaker From Washington

Charles R. White, president of the New York State Farm Bureau federation, who was to have been the speaker, was unable to be present and his place was taken by Chester Gray, of Washington, D. C., of the legislative committee of the American Farm Bureau federation. Mr. Gray was introduced by Mr. Service. Mr. Gray's address dwelt principally on protection for American agriculture. He told of the activities of the legislative committee of the American Farm Bureau federation. He said congress is just as ready to give agriculture what it needs as it is to give industry what it needs. In the Farm Bureau federation there are 1,000,000 farmers, in 1,800 local farm bureau organizations, he said. The aim of the agricultural group is to protect American agriculture in its own market. He said that agriculture has been a political football long enough and that the time has come for agriculture to be considered from an economic standpoint. He told of agriculture facing competition by foreign countries. Cuba, Mexico, British East Indies, China and other foreign shores have been selling agricultural products in the United States cheaper than the American farmer can market them. Adequate tariff rates are necessary to remedy that situation, according to the speaker.

A social hour brought the meeting to a close.

SHIELDS CLAIMS CITY GRANTS NO NO PARKING RIGHT IN DONAHUE CASE

The noted case started here last July by William H. Shields, lawyer, against John F. Donohue and his sister, Mrs. Hannah T. Sullivan, for alleged persistent night and day parking by the defendants of their automobile on Church street in front of the houses owned by Mr. Shields and against his objections and protests, reached a new stage in the superior court this week. This was on a written motion by Mr. Shields that the court order the defendants to file in court an answer to the complaint made against them so that the case might come to early trial.

The answer of the defendants was that they parked their car in front of the Shields property under a city ordinance which permits parking there. To this defense the answer by Mr. Shields disputes the power of the city of Norwich to pass any ordinance permitting parking in the street in front of his property.

Expect Early Trial

The case now stands to be tried and decided by the superior court in its turn when reached in regular order, and it is expected this will occur at the present session of the court. The defendants, after the suit was brought against them, and their car seized and attached, stopped placing and keeping their car on Church street on the highway in front of the Shields' houses. The case in its facts, features and claims is a new and novel one, the first, it is believed, to come up to be decided by the highest courts of this state. The matter when fully reported by The Bulletin last summer, created a state-wide interest of the press and prominent lawyers in Connecticut. Mr. Shields is the president of the New London County Bar and an active lawyer in his profession.

In all probability the case will be strongly contested before the superior court and will continue to interest the public until it is finally determined. The respective legal rights in the highway of the owner of an auto car and the owner of the land and buildings adjoining the street are involved for solution by this case, and the superior court will decide in Connecticut the legal extent of the rights of each of the parties. The defendants in their answer in their second and principal defense claim that an ordinance of the city of Norwich permits and authorizes the parking of automobiles on Church street for a period not exceeding six hours at any one time, and the defendant, John F. Donahue, admits that he did park his car on Church street at various times but never exceeded the six-hour period. To this second defense by the defendants, the plaintiff has filed a demurrer as follows, namely: "The plaintiff demurs to the second defense of the defendants' answer because it is not alleged nor does it appear therein that the defendant, John F. Donahue, ever parked his automobile on Church street in the city of Norwich under any other claimed authority than that conferred upon him under and by virtue of an ordinance of the city of Norwich permitting him to park, whereas there is no ordinance of said city the proper legal construction of which permits parking on said Church street but simply prohibits and restricts such parking and in no way affects or interferes with the legal control of the plaintiff over that part of Church street the fee of which is in the plaintiff as set forth in his complaint." This answer is made by the plaintiff through his attorneys, Brown and James and Thomas M. Shields.

The contention of the plaintiff by his demurrer in effect is that neither the city of Norwich nor even the state of Connecticut can grant the right to park a car on the highway adjacent to the plaintiff's property out to the center line of the highway.

May Raise Federal Question

It is said that it is within the range of possibilities that a federal question may arise in this case farther on whereby the case might be brought into the courts of the United States for solution and decision.

CONGRESSMAN BECK URGES REPEAL OF VOLSTEAD ACT

Would Have Congress Leave Enforcement of the 18th Amendment to the "Political Discretion of the States"—Recommends That Congress Stop Waste of Public Funds By Attempting to Enforce the Volstead Act in Its Application to Light Wines and Beers

WASHINGTON, Nov. 16.—(AP)—Representative Beck, republican, Pennsylvania, today urged repeal of the Volstead act by congress, thereby leaving enforcement of the 18th amendment "to the political discretion" of the several states.

Beck, a former solicitor general of the United States and an anti-prohibitionist, said the recent elections had shown that prohibition will be the dominant issue in Amreican politics for at least a decade and probably a generation, adding that "any political party that tries to sidestep it will be doomed to defeat."

Although holding repeal of the 18th amendment to be the "ultimate objective," the Pennsylvanian attacked as unwise those advocating outright repeal at this time. He contended at least 20 states would quickly block the move. "Indeed," he said in a statement, "if a resolution were now adopted by congress to submit the question of repeal to the states, the result would be a foregone conclusion and would postpone any practical relief for another generation."

Beck's statement followed closely upon an assurance that President Hoover's law enforcement commission has no intention of asking for repeal, whatever the ultimate recommendations of its forthcoming dry law report may be.

The commission already has reached tentative conclusions, and when the 11 members reconvene here a week from tomorrow they will launch a concerted drive, in the light of 17 months of prohibition investigation and deliberation, to determine whether these conclusions should be altered or added to.

Assurance that the report will not make any such recommendotion as four per cent. beer, or holding a national referendum on the dry law, has caused a growing number of people in political Washington to believe the commission principally will urge changes to strengthen the present system. Nevertheless, word has come from within the ranks that there will be no "pussyfooting."

In giving his views on repeal, Beck said he could not share the confidence of Dwight W. Morrow, republican senator-elect from New Jersey, that "a repeal is possible within a reasonable time, nor his suggestion that, pending such repeal, the present Volstead law should be enforced." He termed "still more unwise" the plan proposed by Charles H. Tuttle, defeated republican gubernatorial candidate in New York, for repeal of the 18th amendment and the adoption of a new amendment.

Beck contended, however, that the same political discretion which allowed congress to pass the enacting Volstead provision would allow its repeal, adding: "This is not nullification."

"Little can be expected in the present congress," he said, "but in the 72nd congress, which, in my judgment, will be more closely divided on the wet and dry issue than the elections returns would indicate, an attempt should should be made to repeal the Volstead law, at least in its application to light wines and beers, and, if this be not practicable, to refuse to waste public monies by law, at least in its application to light wines and beers, and, if this be not practicable, to refuse to waste public monies by attempting to enforce the unforceable."

FLAT DENIALS MADE BY AIMEE SEMPLE M'PHERSON

NEW YORK, Nov. 16.—(AP)—Aimee Semple McPherson, evangelist, returned today on the liner Toloa from a cruise in the Caribbean with her recovery fro mher recent nervous breakdown still incomplete.

While an early morning fog drifted past the portholes and the ship's whistle sounded mornfully, she gave in a stateroom her first interview since her breakdown.

She charged that "some reporter" had pictured her party as drinking liquor in Canal Zone cabarets. This, she said, was false, as were rumors of difficulties with immigration authorities at the canal and Havana.

Her face thin, eyes dark circled, she clasped and unclasped her hands as she talked and when she reached out to take a newspaper clipping her hand shook. In moving about the deck, which was slippery from the fog, she was supported by the purser and her nurse. She said she had lost 35 pounds during her illness.

Her remarks supplemented a prepared statement in which she charged that newspaper men at Cristobal, to whom she refused an interview because of her health, had threatened to "write a racy story accusing me of making whoopee."

"I presume they made good their promise," she said, adding that she had heard of one story which "insinuated everything except that I smoked a pipe."

FIVE MEN WERE KILLED IN ELECTION FIGHTS IN WARSAW

WARSAW, Nov. 16.—(AP)—Five men were seriously injured, four of them wounded by revolver shots, in election fights here today. The government arrested prominent members of the opposition party.

The election, in which the country will retain Marshal Pilsudski, "Poland's strong man," as head of the government, or repudiate his regime, created intense excitement here. Police halted many minor scuffles in the Jewish quarter, where Zionists and Orthodox Jews are crowded together.

Voting in Warsaw was heavy in the afternoon, with good weather encouraging the citizens to go to the polls. Provincial centers reported a medium vote.

The government party carried on propaganda to the last moment. Trucks decorated with the huge "number one," the government's symbol, dashed through the streets. Leaflets bearing the same symbol were distributed everywhere.

Among those arrested was the priest, Panas, a former army chaplain, who is noted as the man who threw his decorations at the feet of Marshal Pilsudski, after the coup d'etat which set up the present regime. Several opposition newspapers in provincial towns were suppressed.

EARTHQUAKE FRIGHTENS RESIDENTS FROM HOUSES

ST. HELIER, Island of Jersey, Nov. 16.— (AP) —Severe earthquake today sent many Jersey residents dashing from their houses to the streets, despite a heavy rain. NEW PROGRAM FOR THE YALE MEDICAL SCHOOL

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Nov. 16.—(AP)—Medicine must abandon its "solated position" and cooperate with other fields to attain a fuller understanding of factors bearing on human welfare, says Dean M. C. Winternitz of the Yale school of medicine in his annual report submitted today.

The report outlines the program by which the Yale Medical school will seek to attain this end. Patients, it says, must be seen in all their contacts and dealt with as human beings, not as detached pathological specimens. Intelligence, not specific information, should be the main consideration in admitting students to the medical school.

The program of the Yale Medical school is described as an attempt to determine the larger role medicine should play in modern society, "beyond the well-recognized, highly-developed and traditional form of medical center."

Organization of the institute of human relations which will coordinate studies of social, mental and physical factors in human welfare, is the first tangible step in the new program, the document declares.

Formation of a department of social investigation in the school of medicine and a self-supporting medical service of wide scope are urged. "Positive health studies, to increase efficiency and prevent disease in individuals, already have begun."

HEAVY PRODUCTION OF TOBACCO IN CONN. VALLEY

BOSTON, Nov. 16.—(AP)—Production of cigar type tobacco in the Connecticut valley for 1930 is estimated at 43,901,000 pounds by the New England Crop Reporting service of the U. S. department of agriculture, on the basis of reports gathered Nov. 1.

This figure represents an increase of 2,733,000 pounds over the estimated production on Oct. 1, and 5,218,000 pounds over last year's crop. The November estimates indicate that the crop will be slightly larger than the average for this region.

"The past month in New England," the report set forth, "has been very satisfactory for the further curing of the tobacco crop. Yields appear to be turning out somewhat better than expected, although only a small portion of the crop has been taken down to date. Growers report that the crop is bright, open-grained and of good burning quality. Of the total amount produced this year, broad leaf makes up 19,353,000 pounds, Havana seed 17,190,000 pounds and shade 7,358,000 pounds."

WEATHER MIGHT PREVENT OCEAN FLIGHT OF DO-X

BORDEAUX, France, Nov. 16.—(AP)—Dr. Claude Dornier, designer and builder of the DO-X, announced today that weather conditions might prevent a trans-Atlantic flight before spring, but insisted that the engines had given entire satisfaction on the trip toward Lisbon. He said final decision regarding the trans-Atlantic trip would be made at Lisbon.

Certain French experts said last night that a trans-Atlantic flight at this time might be hazardous, because the DO-X's motors had not been turning as well as expected.

The DO-X remained in the Gironde estuary today instead of coming up to Bordeaux. Tomorrow the plane will fly over Bordeaux with officials and newspapermen aboard. Present plans call for departure for Lisbon Tuesday.

15 MEN AND WOMEN WERE OVERCOME BY FUMIGANT

NEW YORK, Nov. 16.—(AP)—Fifteen men and women employed in a cafeteria in East 86th street were overcome today by a fumigant which seeped through cracks in the wall from a store next door.

Five, semi-conscious, were carried to a roof, where artificial respiration was applied. Then they were taken to a hospital, as were the ten others.

The fumes also emptied a billiard parlor.

PRESSES CHARGE AGAINST BISHOP JAMES CANNON, JR.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 16.—(AP)—A formal demand that Attorney General Mitchell place before a federal grand jury charges that Bishop James Cannon, Jr., had violated the corrupt practices act was made today by Representative Tinkham, republican, Massachusetts.

Tinkham had made the charges against the Southern Methodist churchman in previous letters to the attorney general, on the house floor and before the senate lobby committee.

He accused the bishop of violating the federal act by failing to report to the house clerk $65,300 received from E. C. Jameson of New York for use by the anti-Smith democratic committee in Virginia in the 1928 presidential campaign. Later, Tinkham said, Cannon, as chairman of the committee, reported receipts of $17,000 of the amount, but refused to testify before the senate lobby committee, "in relation to his political expenditures or those of his committee and to account for this difference of $48,300."

BOY GOING TO RUSSIA FOR A "RED TRAINING COURSE"

NEW YORK, Nov. 16.—(AP) —Sixteen-year-old Harry Eisman, Bronx communist, will sail for Russia Wednesday to undergo a "red training course" as a reward for the trouble he has caused New York police.

About 2,500 young communists, mostly members of the young pioneers, held a mass meeting today and scraped together $127 toward Eisman's expenses. They cheered pep talks by William Z. Foster, Israel Amter and Robert Minor, freed recently from prison where they were sent after the Union square riots of last March. Jessie Taft, 16, once expelled from high school because she distributed communist literature, presided.

Eisman was sent to the reformatory twice after he had clashed with police in red demonstrations.

FASCISTS MADE HEAVY GAINS IN DANZIG ELECTION

DANZIG, Nov. 16.— (AP) —Fascists made remarkable gains today as the free cit yof Danzig elected its new volkstag, the membership of which was reduced from 120 to 72 last summer by a change of the constitution.

Final results from three of the five electoral districts showed that the fascists polled 7,944 votes, compared to 280 in the previous election. The communists recorded 7,694 as against 4,665 in the former elections, while the socialists, the nationalists and the Polish party slumped.

German and Polish interests were in sharp conflict but no disturbances were reported.

The first snow of the season fell today.

CRACKSMEN PUT TO FLIGHT BY TEAR GAS

BOSTON, Nov. 16.—(AP)—Tear gas automatically released, saved the contents of a heavy safe here today by putting crackmen to flight after they had blown off the safe's combination. The gas defense was staged in the office of the Hyde Park Ice company. Robbers had broken the combination and had drilled a small hole through an inner door when a wave of gas, ejected from a special compartment, routed them.

A watchman discovered the break several hours later. A 12-inch jimmy and other burglars' tools were found near the safe. Three open windows, showing evidence of having been hastily raised, bore mute evidence to the flight of the thieves, police said.

Tornadoes In Four Southern States

In Separated Sections of Louisiana, Mississippi, Alabama and Georgia—Heavy Damage

By The Associated Press.

Tornadoes blustering through widely separated sections of Louisiana, Mississippi, Alabama and Georgia, early yesterday caused an undetermined number of deaths and heavy property damage.

The full extent could not be ascertained immediately as roads and other forms of communication from a number of stricken rural communities were blocked.

Country settlements in the vicinity of Alexandria and Winnsboro, La., and Brookhaven, Miss., were the first to report fatalities.

At Brookhaven, Mrs. George Davis, 24, was crushed to death when the home in which she, her husband and two children were asleep collapsed. The husband and children were not hurt.

Near Winnsboro, La., a Negro infant was hurled 75 yards by the force of the wind and killed, and Mrs. Ella Diamond, 72, was critically injured. A Negro was killed near Alexandria, La.

The winds dipped into Franklin county, Miss., blowing down dwellings, barns and other buildings and killing many head of livestock. Many persons were injured, including the entire family of Will Whitehead, farmer. Five tenant houses on the E. R. Magee plantation were blown down.

Ripping through Noxubee county, Miss., the winds blew down two Negro churches and a number of homes, and badly damaged crops. A white man and his two daughters were reported injured when their home was blown away.

Near Macon, Miss., 22 Negroes attending a "wake" at a church were slightly injured but badly frightened. The fright was caused by the sight of the casket, containing the body of Brown Hughes, Negro, being hurled into a nearby field by the lashing wind.

Sections of Alabama and Georgia felt the winds, with property damage widespread.

Three residences were leveled in Jackson, Ala., north of Mobile, and ten others were badly damaged. A church was blown down and a number of garages and automobiles were demolihsed. No injury was reported.

Queenstown, Ala., 12 miles south of Birmingham, suffered the destruction of several buildings. The streets of Birmingham were flooded by torrential rains. Three persons were injured near Dawson, Ga., in Terrell county. A blow razed a house in which three Negroes had taken refuge, and tore off the roofs of other structures.

TO SURVEY DESTRUCTION OF WHITE PINE BLISTER RUST

NEW HAVEN, Nov. 16.— (AP)— A survey to determine how far the deadly white pine blister rust has eluded control in the pine wooded Litchfield hills, was begun today by the Connecticut agricultural experiment station and the U. S. department of agriculture.

Forests and woods of Salisbury, Canaan, North Canaan, Norfolk, Colebrook and Cornwall will be inspected during the winter by two men for evidence of the fungus disease both on white pine and the other host of the blister rust—currant and gooseberry bushes, known as ribes. During 1922-1924, all ribes were eradicated as far as possible in these towns. The present survey will attempt to determine what infection has crept in since then, what year it entered and other information on which future procedure will be based.

The initial eradication of ribes within infecting distance of white pine in the natural woods sections of Connecticut was almost completed with last summer's work. Bushes were destroyed on 42,244 acres and it is estimated that this work protected approximately 14,500 acres of white pine.

PORTRAIT PAINTER AND HIS WIFE HELD FOR ARSON

NEW YORK, Nov. 16.—(AP)—After hearing them denounced as members of an "international arson ring," Magistrate William C. Dodge today held Victor Rosso, South American portrait painter, and his wife, Amy Laura Horne Rosso, in bail of $50,000 and $5,000, respectively.

OBSTACLES TO CRUSHING COMMUNISTS IN CHINA

SHANGHAI, Nov. 16.— (AP) —Attempts of the nationalist government to crush the roving bands of communists, which for months have ravaged the central provinces of China, appeared today to have met many more obstacles than were anticipated.

The nationalists a fortnight ago, on conclusion of the civil war against the alliance of northern war lords, sent 100,000 soldiers into the provinces and predicted suppression of the outlaws within a few months. Despite this action dispatches today said that throughout the greater part of Kiangsi and Hunan provinces the reds were roaming freely in groups numbering far into the thousands, looting town after town, kidnaping, paralyzing trade and causing missionaries to seek safety in the major cities.

Denying any intention of joining a filibuster and scouting threats of such a move, Senator Borah belligerently asked upon his return to the capital: "Why all this excitement about a supposed filibuster in order to force an extra session?"

Mr. Hoover solicited assurances from the party leaders in the senate against a filibuster.

SERIOUS DISORDERS MARK MADRID GENERAL STRIKE

Mob Was Dispersed By Cavalry Charge—Strikers Were Attacking Students Acting as Newsboys—Scores of Persons Were Injured—A Series of Bread Riots Broke Out in the Suburban Districts—Labor Leaders Have Ordered the Strike to End at 5 P. M. Today.

MADRID, Nov. 16.—(AP)—After three days of riot and disorder, with two known dead, a number gravely injured and 200 with lesser injuries, the Madrid general strike began to end tonight.

After a day in which more than a score of persons were injured in bread riots and an attack upon Catholic students selling the newspaper El Debate, labor headquarters issued a communique which put taxicabs back on the street at midnight, ordered street car men to resume work at 7 o'clock tomorrow morning and told all other strikers to be back on the job by 5 o'clock tomorrow evening.

The news brought great joy in the capital, because many had run out of food since the strike was declared after charges of police brutality at a funeral of four workmen Wednesday.

Bakers had not been working, hence bread was almost impossible to obtain; all stores were closed, and transportation was lacking. Strikers also attempted to prevent foodstuffs from entering the outskirts of the city, and the result was that many went to bed hungry tonight. Army bakers worked night and day to produce bread, transporting it in army trucks, but the supply was far too scant for the great population of the nation's capital.

Even before the labor communique was issued, the motion picture theaters opened and drew large houses, as the people had no other place to go. They watched American screen favorites as police and civil guards, mounted and afoot, armed with rifles and portable machine guns, protected the exteriors.

Troops patrolled the city, although martial law was not officially declared, nor was censorship invoked, the government announcing that it considered it the wisest policy for the news of the strike to be told freely.

Socialist and republican elements allied with the labor unions said tonight they had decided not to attempt convert the general strike into a movement for revolution. They added, however, that an attempt at revolution would be made later.

Government officials smiled at such statements.

Much opposition developed to the strike, the Catholic labor unions and the chamber of commerce issuing statements decrying the movement. In addition, billboards were plastered today with statements signed by the "League Against Revolution," saying in effect:

"We are more than 2,000,000 Spaniards who will never permit Spain to be dominated by Red Russia. We are against this communist revolution. We will fight for our homes and our country."

A serious outbreak occurred in the early morning, when cavalry charged and dispersed a mob of strikers, women, and girls, who had attacked Catholic students distributing the Catholic newspaper El Debate as volunteer newsboys. The strikers threw stones and struck and scratched the volunteer newsboys.

A series of bread riots broke out at noon in the suburban sections. All morning women and children stood in long lines before the bakeries. When the supply of bread gave out, they first shouted: "Give us bread."

When the bread was not forthcoming, they attacked police guarding the bakeries. The police repulsed them after inflicting some injuries. The injured were sent to first aid stations. No deaths or serious injuries had been reported early this afternoon, however.

Army trucks guarded by cavalry were ordered out to transport bread and meat into the capital. All roads outside Madrid were guarded by troops to insure the safe passage of food.

Officials estimated the number who responded to the general strike call in Madrid at 250,000. Labor leaders said, however, that they had not ordered sympathetic strikes in other parts of Spain, and said the walkout here was expected to end tomorrow afternoon unless some untoward incident occurred.

3,400,000 WORKERS WERE JOBLESS IN SEPTEMBER

WASHINGTON, Nov. 16.—(AP)—At least 3,400,000 persons "able to work and seeking employment" were estimated today by the commerce department to have been jobless in September.

The total, which was said to be "the probable minimum," includes the unemployed without jobs and those with jobs who had been laid off, but does not include persons working less than the normal work-day or work-week.

"It should be pointed out that this figure is only an estimate," the commerce department said. "It is based on the approximate number of 2,500,000 persons who were reported as without jobs by the unemployment census of last April.

"It should also be remembered that over 43,000,000 persons are classed as gainfully employed in this country and that the volume of unemployment here is far below that of the other great industrial nations, largely because of the measures which have been taken during the past year."

NEW YORK, Nov. 16.—(AP)—A dozen cream puffs purchased at a Greenwich Village confectionery store caused havoc today among the family and friends of Vic Burrone, featherweight boxer who once fought a draw with Tony Canzoneri, new lightweight champion.

After eating the puffs in the Burrone apartment late last night, the boxer, his wife, their son and four friends were stricken with acute food poisoning.

All returned to their homes after treatment at a hospital, but a physician said Burrone would probably have to postpone a match against "Little Jack" Sharkey in Philadelphia Nov. 25.

JURY FINDS SAUNDERS NOT GUILTY OF MURDER

CAMDEN, N. J., Nov. 16.—(AP)—Albert Saunders, 22, was acquitted early today by a jury of nine women and three men of the murder of Angelo Solury, a sailor, killed in a cafe brawl here last spring. The verdict was returned after the jurors had deliberated more than seven hours.

Saunders received the verdict calmly, but relatives and friends who had remained in the court room for hours awaiting the decision started to cheer and attempted to rush forward to congratulate him. Bailiffs quickly put down the attempted demonstration.

Throughout the four days' trial Saunders had maintained his innocence and, on the witness stand, accused Rollie Waterhouse, a state's witness, with having struck Solury with a club during a fight at the Little Club cafe. Solury, a sailor from the U. S. cruiser Chester, died the next day.

PROMINENT JEWISH SPEAKERS MAKE PLEA FOR PALESTINE RELIEF

(Special to The Bulletin.)

WILLIMANTIC, Nov. 16.—The participation of the Jewish community of this city and vicinity in the allied Jewish campaign for the joint distribution committee and the Jewish agency for Palestine, was outlined at a well-attended mass meeting held in the local synagogue this evening. Chairman Benjamin Eisenberg of the local Allied Jewish campaign presided and introduced as speakers Rabbi Israel M. Goldman of Temple Emanuel, Providence, R. I., and Rabbi Abraham Shingl of Pawtucket, R. I. A report of the work of the joint distribution committee and of the accomplishments and objectives of the Jewish agency for Palestine was given. The distribution committee is seeking to extend relief work to the stricken Jewish communities in eastern Europe and has already done effective work through a chain of credit unions in Poland, Russia and other countries. The committee also maintains a number of orphan asylums and schools for nurses as well as a great many of the schools of the Jewish people in those countries. Extensive work is being carried on in Russia where the so-called declassed Jews are being settled on the soil and technical schools are being opened to teach these Jews a trade, qualifying them for employment in the Soviet factories.

The Jewish agency of Palestine, one of the partners in this joint drive, is planning the reconstruction of Palestine as a Jewish homeland. A whole chain of schools is planned through colonization and with the aid of the Hadassah medical unit it is proposed to vastly improve the sanitary conditions of the country. PLAINFIELD

REV. WILLIAM C. PRENTISS' LETTER OF RESIGNATION

At the morning service at the First Congregational church, Sunday, when Rev. William C. Prentiss read his letter of resignation, he wrote as follows:

Letter of Resignation

Members of the First Congregational Church and Parish, Plainfield.

Dear Friends:

For nine years it has been my privilege and pleasant task to serve this church as leader and teacher, coming at your urgent call to fill the vacant pastoral office, from the Grand Avenue church of New Haven. These have been full years, with many changes and with numerous demands, requiring a varied and exacting service. But there has always been a loyal and whole-hearted cooperation, marked by efficiency, faithfulness and unstinted service which has made possible a most creditable achievement.

In these years we have labored happily together, feeling the same urge and actuated and guided by one common purpose, to serve and honor Christ our Lord. As I look back over these years, which mark nearly a decade, I feel grateful to God for His gracious kindness in affording us strength, courage and wisdom, never leaving us without the vision and enabling us together to accomplish, in some degree, the task of the beautifying and building up of this dear, old, historic church, extending its kindly ministry into this, the two hundred and twenty-fifth year of its history. They have been good years in the meeting of the critical demands of these modern days and in gratefully recognizing the heritage of the living past.

During this ministry, we have endeavored to keep in touch with the absentee members scattered far and wide and have sent out many of our best and most efficient leaders into other churches. We have trained up a new leadership, doubled our membership, stood ready to render service to the community and to further the spirit of union and good-will in the larger neighborhood of adjoining parishes in eastern Windham county. This united effort on our part has stirred the best in us and called out a finer courage in a service often touched with sacrifice, as we have sought to adapt ourselves to the ever-changing conditions in this industrial center and in the shadow of a great mill, meeting together patiently the common problems of these new times. I have often been deeply touched by the kindness and sympathy of the people here with whom I have had the privilege to live and work; and I have been thrilled by the loyal response of the young people as they have willingly engaged in the work of their church, showing a splendid spirit as they came up to meet the challenge of the new day. Indeed there has been a real joy in this common service of our Lord and Master.

In the midst of new plans for the development of the work of another year and in the face of the new opportunities of the larger ministry of the two churches, a most cordial and unanimous call has come to me to accept the pastorate of the First Congregational church, of North Brookfield, Mass. It has not been easy to think of laying down a work which seems so incomplete and especially to forego the pleasure of further working out the new plan of uniting with the Central Village parish, the larger possibilities of which greatly appeal to me. Here is a task to challenge the best in any man and here is a splendid group of people with a vision, with whom to cooperate for larger things for the Kingdom. However, it has been only fair to give due and careful consideration to the urgent call from the people of another historic church to become their leader. Recognizing the earnest, cordial spirit of those who have invited me to become their pastor, and realizing the promise and possibilities of the new field, I have prayerfully considered the call from every angle. I have also been not unmindful of wise counsel. And so it seems to me, after thoughtful deliberation as to possibilities of service, the highest good of all concerned and the best interests of the Kingdom, that it is both my duty and privilege to accept the call to service in the new parish.

And now I wish to express the deepest appreciation of the patience and loyalty of this people, of their real sympathy in the hour of sorrow, of the many kindnesses to my family and the many comforts afforded us in our home. I still hope to be of service to these beloved churches in the years to come, trusting that the people of these parishes may be guided and blessed in securing a worthy leader.

And, therefore, regretting exceedingly the severing of the pleasant relationships of pastor to this people, and feeling a real sorrow in removing my family from the midst of the delightful people of Plainfield, where my relations have been helpful and congenial, I tender my resignation of the pastoral office of the First Congregational church of Plainfield, Conn., to take effect Dec. 16, 1930.

CHILD FANCY TURNS TO TOYS WITH WHEELS

WASHINGTON —(AP)— The trend in toyland is to wheels.

Production figures at the bureau of the census indicate an increasing popularity of children's automobiles, velocipedes, tricycles and other wheel toys.

Scooters, however, fell off in production last year. There also was a decrease in the number of doll carriages and doll carts mabufactured.

JEWETT CITY

BOROUGH MEN HELD IN PHIL. FOR THEFT OF LOCAL CAR

(Special to The Bulletin)

JEWETT CITY, Nov. 16. — William Howeson, Jr., and Ernest Lemarine, of Jewett City, are being held by the police in Philadelphia, awaiting the arrival of Officer Henry Vegiard, of Jewett City, who, after receiving the extradition papers from Governor Trumbull, will leave this (Monday) evening to bring the criminals back to Griswold for trial. The local officer will be accompanied by Fred L'Homme, who will drive the car on the return trip. The men were picked up by the Philadelphia police late Saturday afternoon when they were seen on one of the city streets driving the brand new Chevrolet which they had stolen in Jewett City. It is understood that the men offered no resistance, gave their right names, as well as admitting other local breaks which included the recent clean-out at the Jewett City bowling alley. Friday afternoon the local Chevrolet salesroom received a brand new sales model, which was to have been placed in their show window. Along toward morning, Saturday, Mr. Lucier, gatetender at the railroad crossing about 200 yards away, saw the night light in the Chevrolet wareroom go out. He reported this circumstance to Officer Vegiard, who soon approached on his regular beat. The patrolman went to the place, tried the doors and, finding everything normal, believed the lamp must have burned out. In less than half an hour, the officer, still on watch, saw a car being rapidly driven out of Anthony street, down the state road toward Norwich. Again going to the Chevrolet place, he found that the car had been stolen, also about $30 from the cash register and a quantity of gas and oil. Norwich police and the Danielson barracks were notified. In the course of the get-away, the Norwich officers are of the opinion that the car was not driven through that city, as they were on the lookout within ten minutes after the break. The police also decided that the job was the work of novices, as the Norwich officers believed that regular gangsters would have shot Patrolman Vegiard when he first went to try the doors. Prosecuting Attorney R. J. Dudkowski will go to Hartford this (Monday) morning, to procure the extradition papers. Quick police action was commended Sunday, in the fact that it was 3 a. m., Saturday, when Patrolman Vegiard gave the alarm, and 8:45 p. m. the same day when Police Captain Connelly, of Philadelphia, telegraphed the officer here that the men and stolen car had been picked up. In the regular course of law, the men will be presented in the Griswold town court before Judge John T. Barry, who will find probable cause to bind them over to the January term of the superior court with a state prison sentence looking probable.

CLARA BARTON PICTURES IN RED CROSS EXHIBIT

Red Cross roll call publicity is featured in the windows of the Rioux block which were decorated Saturday by the chairman, Mrs. E. H. Hiscox, assisted by Mildred and Lillian Bryant. Clara Barton, the world famous nurse who founded the American National Red Cross, was born in North Oxford, Mass., and is buried in the cemetery there. In one of the windows is to be seen a set of views showing Miss Barton's picture, her birthplace, her chair and cradle, and the portable box desk she carried during the Civil war. Also views photographed by Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Tracy on Armistice day, of the cemetery, the Red Cross monument and Miss Barton's monument. The inscription on the monument can be plainly seen Clara Barton, Angel of the Battlefield, Civil War, 1861-1865; Franco-Prussian War, 1870-1874; Spanish-American War, 1898. Organizer and President of the American National Red Cross, 1881-1904. Dec. 25, 1821-April 12, 1912.

Miss Barton's father founded the Universalist church in North Oxford, said to be the oldest Universalist church in the world. He was aided by Hosea Ballou. Two views of the church are in this exhibit, one of the church exterior and the other of the interior; also a picture of the home of the Red Cross in Washington. Clara Barton's birthplace in North Oxford was purchased by the Woman's National Missionary association of the Universalist church, in March, 1921. It was dedicated Oct. 12, 1921. The cost of the purchase and restoration was $13,857.56. It is furnished according to the 1820 period, and relatives of the family have most generously cooperated and have loaned furniture. Approximately 1,000 persons visit the place each year, a custodian being regularly employed. This woman, who "followed the cannon," was not only the founder of the American National Red Cross, but after Lee's surrender she was authorized by the government to institute a systematic search for the missing and to identify as far as possible the graves at Andersonville. She learned the fate of 13,000, marked their graves and notified their relatives. A large majority of people in this section do not realize that the home and burial place of such a remarkable woman are only an hour's ride from Jewett City.

Additional names to be added to the Red Cross roll call are Maurice Millet, E. M. Gray, Mrs. E. M. Gray, Bruce R. Thornton, N. J. Babcock, Mrs. N. J. Babcock, E. L. French, Mrs. E. L. French, Ruby A. REV. DR. JEFFERSON EXPLAINS WHY CERTAIN CHURCHES FAIL

(Special to The Bulletin)

JEWETT CITY, Nov. 16.—As evidence that the Protestant congregations of the borough and this vicinity are alive to their privileges, an audience of close to 300 filled the Congregational church Sunday morning, to listen to the address by Rev. Dr. Charles E. Jefferson, of New York. Taking for his theme, The Living Christ, the distinguished speaker held the undivided attention of his listeners in a 40-minute, eloquent address. "I believe," he said, "that the reason for much of the impotency of the Protestant church organization today, during these times of depression and trial, is because of the failure to recognize the living Christ," adding "We are apt to visualize our Saviour as a great and good Man, Who was crucified, rose again, and was taken up into heaven." "Christ," he said, "is here now, present to help us," quoting, "I will be with you all the days." Calling attention to the power and influence of the Catholic church all over the world, he said, "What is the answer? It is this; they believe in and hold up a living Christ. At each Sunday's masses the faithful see and hear the things that tend to strengthen their beliefs, even to the extent that when Sunday comes if one reckons with the conduct of a good Catholic it must include attendance at mass." "Let us," he said, "look into our own souls today and see how we stand as regarding the reality of the living Christ, an actual Presence, Who has promised to be with us always." The beautiful service was enhanced by an admirable musical program under the direction of the chorister, Mrs. Irene Benjamin. Revs. J. W. Carter, E. E. Scates and J. W. Reynolds assisted Rev. G. F. Goodenough in the devotional service.

POTATO PROSPECTS.

The United States potato crop is now expected to total 368,444,000 bushels compared with 425,206,000 bushels expected a month ago, 359798,000 bushels harvested last year and 392,663,000 bushels the average production of the five years 1924-1928. This outlook is 4.6 per cent. greater than expected a month ago, 2.4 per cent. above last year but 6.2 per cent. less than the five year average. The improvement in prospects since last month is parteularly noticeable in North Atlantic states including Ohio, and the irrigated sections of the west, including such states as Colorado, Idaho and Oregon. In the Dakotas and parts of Minnesota the gain from the unusually late growing season was offset by freeze losses about the middle of October.

The New England potato crop is estimated at 57,280,000 bushels compared with 54,820,000 bushels expected October first, 58,398,000 harvested last year and 47,400,000 the five year average. October weather conditions were favorable to the completion of potato digging throughout New England. Outside of Aroostook county, Maine, the yield of potatoes has been unexpectedly high and much higher than potato growers have been anticipating.

In Maine the crop is expected to total 45,120,000 bushels. This outlook is 2 per cent. more than was expected a month ago and 17 per cent. above the five year average, but 10 per cent. less than harvest last year in spite of a 5 per cent. increase in the acreage planted in Maine. Outside of northern and central Aroostook county the yield is generally high and quality excellent.

The potato crop estimated for Connecticut is placed at 2,800,000 bushels, or 16 per cent. higher than the October first estimate. Last year Connecticut harvested 2,050,000 bushels.

ARISTOTLE HAD EARLY THEORY OF HEARING

CHICAGO (AP) — Aristotle said that hearing must require a cavity in the head filled with air to respond to impulses born in the outer air.

But not until 1870 is it known that men looked to verify this theory.

And then they found, says G. E. Shambaugh, M. D., in a report to the Acoustical Society of America, that the cavity contained fluid instead of air.

Cotugno is credited with this discovery.

WIND'S SPEED IS GAUGED BY EFFECT ON CHIMNEYS

WASHINGTON —(AP)— When the wind whistles in the telegraph wires it's blowing more than 25 miles an hour.

And when the chimney pots begin to fall, the velocity has exceeded 46 miles an hour and it's a gale.

This "rule of thumb" system will enable anyone, says the weather bureau, to make a fairly accurate estimate of wind velocity.

When the wind blows less than one mile an hour, the bureau says, smoke rises vertically, and it drifts in a wind of from one to three miles an hour.

BOARDS' STRENGTH TESTED BY QUAKES IN LABORATORY

PALO ALTO, Calif. (AP)—Miniature earthquakes produced on a shaking-table at Stanford university reveal that a relatively small distortion breaks the main diagonal boards of a wooden panel diagonally sheathed.

A distortion 10 times as great leaves horizontal sheating boards unbroken. The kind of panelling best for building depends on the part of the structure in which it is used.

DANIELSON

SHORT CHANGE ARTISTS VICTIMIZE LOCAL MERCHANTS

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, Nov. 16.—Watch out for a pair of slick youngsters, well dressed, properly mannered, who speak the language of this nation without a flaw—but a pair of crooks. Their specialty is short changing unsuspicious tradesmen into whose stores they bring their doubtful business. They operated here Saturday night, it was revealed this morning. The Ben Franklin store was victimized, for $5. There may be others who had not reported about getting a trimming up to late this afternoon.

At the store mentioned one of the pair came in and purchased a 10 cent handkerchief. He took a look at the cash register—and its contents—as the sale was rung up. Within a few minutes in came another customer, and bought two 15 cent handkerchiefs. He tendered a $20 bill in payment. Then began the operation that left the store $5 short. It's too complicated to detail here, but it may be suggested to operators of business houses here that they had better watch their step in making change, back and forth, for strangers, these days. Recall the warning that came out of Putnam the past week relative to short-changers operating there?

The pair that figured in the Danielson deal last evening appear to be about 25 years of age. They are well dressed, have all the mannerisms of nice people, but, it would seem, no intention to be honest.

Red Cross workers, engaged here, throughout the town and in Brooklyn, will make their final effort in the roll call between now and Wednesday. They want 1,000 members of the local chapter. No reports of progress have been made, in detail, but it is understood that the workers have done well during the course of the past rainy week in which they have operated. The drive for members will be a lively one during the course of the remaining days of the roll call period.

This morning State Officer George Martin was on his way to the barracks on North Main street. He took one of those looks that state officers do take at cars, ever and anon, and the driver of the car, Lord only knows why, ducked out into a side street. The officer followed and gave the machine a checkup. It was a Rhode Island car, and it yielded something in liquid form that appears to be moonshine or corn whiskey, only an analysis will show this, and a case of alleged beer. Officer Martin took his quarry to the barracks. At this point in the story it may be well to mention that one Blanche Laflamme of 37 Maple street, Pawtucket, was driving the car at the time State Officer Martin checked it. George Letendre of 19 Jenkins street, Central Falls, was riding with her. Where they were going or what it was all about was not clear this afternoon. Yet each was being held at the barracks this afternoon, and bail of $500 for release was being asked in each case. This grey November afternoon, with its low-hanging clouds, its mists and fog, was a nice time to be out somwhere for a party, if you happened to feel that way about it, but not so good hanging around the barracks, yourself and your car temporarily impounded, waiting for someone to go bail for you and just nobody coming around. The prospect this afternoon was that this case would get attention in the town court on Monday. It is possible that the erstwhile prisoners may be able to explain everything to the satisfaction of everyone and to be going somewhere by noon Monday. State officers were checking on them this afternoon.

All of those concerned in the affair escaped without serious personal injuries when two cars crashed at the junction of Stearns and North Main street last night. Eugene F. Downs, Danielson, was the operator of one car that figured in the accident. Godfrey Deloge of Moosup was driving the other. Downs is said to have been riding alone. Flora Deloge and Jeanette Penac of Goodyear are said to have been riding in the other car. Both machines were materially damaged in the accident.

More or less has been said in this column of late relative to the shortage of water in nearby country districts. It may be news to the average person to learn that all of the rains of the past few weeks have failed to relieve that condition. The cry still is for water. Wells are not filled up. Springs that have not failed for 30 years are dry. Farmers are still drawing water from distances.

Excavators will tell you that the earth is as dry as powder for many feet down. Old-timers, who know about many essential things that the average person is not informed about, and does not care to be, so long as a faucet yields him water back in town, will tell you that a solid month of rain, right now, is needed to really correct the drought condition in this territory. Here in Danielson, water shortage is just something to read about—not think about. It's all different two miles outside the borough limits where the city service system does not function.

JOSEPH B. STETSON, PROMINENT BROOKLYN MAN, FOUND DEAD IN BED

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, Nov. 16.—A family name and a tradition appeared to have passed out of the picture, in a historical sense, when Joseph B. Stetson was found dead in his bed on his farm in the western part of the town of Brooklyn this morning, shortly after 7 o'clock.

Last night Mr. Stetson retired about 9:30 o'clock. He was not feeling just the best, having been afflicted by a cold during the past week, but was not sufficiently indisposed to prevent his coming to Danielson the past Friday and attending to such errands as required his attention. Since the death of Mr. Stetson's wife, several years ago, he has had housekeepers and men attendants to see to his wants. During the course of last night he was heard getting up and about his room, some time after his retirement, but there was nothing unusual about that. This morning, shortly after 7 o'clock, he was found sleeping his last sleep. He had quietly passed away during the course of the night. Dr. Warren A. Tanner, Danielson, medical examiner for the town of Brooklyn, viewed the body and said that death was due to natural causes, probably to a heart ailment.

Accurate information was not available today, but it was more or less definitely stated that Mr. Stetson's ancestors came into this territory about 1780. Like his father, he was born on the farm where he died—the farm that the deceased's grandfather blazed a trail to through the unbroken forest, some 150 years ago.

Joseph B. Stetson was born in the home where he died on Oct. 12, 1847, a son of James A. and Dolly Witter Stetson. On his birthday last month the nieces and nephews, in the grand degree, that remain as his nearest relatives, tendered him a party at his home, an event he had looked forward to with the keenest interest. He had had such parties for years, and always loved them.

Mr. Stetson, in one capacity or another, was an official of the Windham County Agricultural society (the Brooklyn fair) for upwards of 60 years. It was mentioned in this column at the last fair of this association, in late September, that he had not missed one of the fairs over there in upwards of 70 years. That information was picked up during the course of a friendly talk with Mr. Stetson in the main exhibition building on the first of the fair's big days. At that time he was his usual debonair self. As he relished a good cigar he spoke of his coming birthday party and told how he anticipated he would enjoy it. He was given the good wishes of one who told him that he would be present for his 100th birthday anniversary and he smilingly commented, "I hope to make it."

Mr. Stetson approximated an institution in Brooklyn. He had been a member of the town's school committee and a teacher in the town's schools from time out of memory—upwards of two generations. He was chairman of the board at the time of his death. Education was one of his hobbies. It was recalled today that he also had served the town of Brooklyn as a selectman.

"Joe" Stetson, his friends called him. His was a thoroughly worthwhile inheritance from the past. He had the heritage, the prestige, the presence that comes just naturally along with the descendants of those who carved civilization out of a wilderness in these parts. People liked him, even after they had been irritated by some of his clear-cut decisions, in one business matter or another in which they were not favored.

As the last of his family, for what he was, for all the good things he has done, he will be missed. It's just too bad that such men must die. His nearest surviving relatives are three nephews, four nieces, seven grand-nephews and three grand-nieces, largely residents of New Bedford, New Haven and Sharon, Mass.

A young man, a former resident, will probably say, "Let the rats live," if he reads about the crusade to be made Nov. 21st by the farmers. A regular army of large rats was a menace to his garden and premises in general in the vicinity. Near his home was a dump where much decaying fruit and vegetables had been dumped by unknown persons. One Sunday morning, probably thinking it was lawful to do good on the Sabbath day, he took a small gun to go to the dump to kill the pests. He had gone but a short distance when the game warden appeared and he was ordered to court and was fined about $12.

Central Rebekah lodge held its annual supper sale and entertainment at Odd Fellows' hall during the week. The general committee chairman, Mrs. Clinton Frink of Canterbury, Mrs. Arthur Milligan of Wauregan, Mrs. Leroy Bennett, of Moosup, Mrs. Frank Edgerton, Central, and Mrs. Maud Krauss, Plainfield. An oyster supper was served by Mrs. Cecil Butler, Mrs. George Babcock, Mrs. Everett Dawley, Mrs. William Shelley and Mrs. Ernest Wilde; cashier, Mrs. Frank Edgerton; gift table, Mrs. Martha Handy, Mrs. Ernest Wilson and Mrs. Fred Lyon; grabs, Mrs. Leroy Bennett; candy, Mrs. E. Irving Cutler; food, Mrs. Frederick Brewster and Mrs. Stuart Ellsworth. The entertainment was given at 8 o'clock under the direction of Mrs. Maud Krauss. A short play, "Priscilla Room," was put on by seven young women from Plainfield; a piano solo by Miss Dorothy Babcock; vocal solo by Mrs. Charles McFarland accompanied on the piano by Mrs. Augusta Nolan; piano and accordion duets, Mrs. Maud Krauss and Mr. Rood. A laughable sketch, "Time Tables," was well given by Mrs. Frederick Lyon and William Hall. The sum of about $35 will be cleared.

PUTNAM

WEBSTER MAN GETS 30 DAYS FOR EVADING FARE

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, Nov. 16.—Joseph Bardy of 28 Easton avenue, Webster, Mass., who has been in and out of law courts in three Connecticut cities three times in as many weeks, was arrested here on Saturday. Bardy said he just can't seem to get a break, when he appeared before Judge M. H. Geissler in city court to explain why he had hired a Hartford taxicab and ridden to Putnam and various places hereabouts in it, when he knew he was without funds. A charge of fraud was made against him by Patrolman Harry Wallen, who took Bardy into custody Friday, at the request of the Hartford driver, who ordered his passenger's arrest after he became reconciled to the fact that his back seat contained nothing but "excess baggage." In court Michael Rutlye of Newbury street, Hartford, testified that Bardy engaged his automobile to drive to Putnam. Upon arrival here, Bardy informed his benefactor that he had no funds to pay for the services of the automobile which he had chartered, but believed he could raise the price if Rutlye would drive him to the neighboring village of Thompson, where he had relatives residing. Unfortunately the relatives were "out" and the only remaining alternative was the calling for assistance upon a brother who lived in Webster. The driver, eager to get his compensation, drove on to Webster, while the fare still increased by leaps and bounds. But in Webster, the brother was not in a mood to assist his kinsman out of his somewhat serious predicament.

With this, Rutlye turned his car about and headed for Putnam, with Bardy still a passenger. Driving to the police station, he delivered the unwelcome rider to Patrolman Wallen, stated the case and demanded the man's arrest. Police learned this morning from Stephen Bardy of Webster that his brother had deported himself quite unconventionally since his release from a state mental institution some weeks ago. Returning to Thompson after his discharge from the hospital, Joseph took his mother's car, drove to Oxford, Mass., where he negotiated with an automobile dealer there for the exchange of her car for another and more costly vehicle. This car also cost him an additional $260. Driving to Willimantic in the automobile, which was improperly registered, Bardy was arrested and haled before police court, found guilty and fined. He appealed to his brother and other relatives for assistance. After coming to terms with the law, Bardy went to Hartford, where he became involved in a worthless check passing deal that brought about his arrest on a second occasion. Fines amounting to $71 were imposed in both cases, police said. After paying for each court appearance made by his brother, Stephen Bardy, police said, announced that his family members had decided not to furnish any further financial assistance for their brother and this time he would have to paddle his own canoe through the hazardous law channels. Joseph started off well, but his "craft" was scuttled by Judge Geissler, who meted out a jail sentence of 30 days.

It appears that representatives of the chamber of commerce seeking a new and improved system of street lighting for the business section of the city, have, temporarily at least, given up hope of realizing their ambitions.

According to an announcement appearing in the columns of The Bulletin this morning the borough of Jewett City, a community considerably smaller than Putnam, has adopted a street illuminating system that easily surpasses in service and effects any system in use in any of the smaller communities in the eastern part of the state, save perhaps that of Danielson, which is a modern "white way." Putnam must be content with its dull, dim, unshaded lighting system, for to replace the present electric light standards with a white way system would necessitate an expenditure that would subsequently necessitate an increase in municipal taxes, according to city officials who have investigated the proposal for a downtown white way.

With the monthly change in the police department going into effect today, Officer Harry Wallen, who for the past month has been stationed in the downtown district of the city on day duty, has been replaced by Officer Benoni Durand. Previous to the change, Officer Durand was stationed in the north end on night duty. Through the change, Officer Joseph Page will go on night duty in the north end and Officer Harry Wallen will fill the night shift in the south end of the city.

Perfect radio reception in the section north of Grove street and south of Mechanics street at the present time is being marred by interference of an unknown nature. Complaints have been registered by the radio fans in the troubled area and as a result the local branch of the Southern New England Telephone Co. has volunteered its services in the form of an investigation in an attempt to determine the cause so that it may be cleared up by reporting it to the proper authorities.

A vivid description of the life of the plantation Negro was given to the parishioners of St. Mary's church at all of the Sunday masses by Rev. Fr. Lostus of Montgomery, Ala. Father Lostus is devoting his life to the spiritual and general welfare of the southern Negroes that are engaged on the large plantations and who are almost completely cut off from the rest of the world, as far as assistance, in any line, is concerned.

Hardie M. Bergin, sales manager of the Powdrell & Alexander mills, underwent an operation for appendicitis at the Day Kimball hospital on Saturday.

After an absence of five years, the craving for distance on the radio is reappearing as a popular fad. In the past few months, several of the fans have devised radios of their own with which they are able to obtain reception from the various low wave-length stations that are in operation, both in this country and abroad.

Before a comparatively small crowd, the Belding Bull Dogs fought their way to a 6-0 victory over the Pawtucket A. C. on the high school field today. Credit for the touchdown must go to the Belding star, Walter Wheaton, when he picked a 40-yard pass, thrown by Tom Cody, out of the air and carried it to within five yards of the goal. From this point, Tom Elliott, former General Motors Tech gridster, carried the ball over for the one and only score of the game.

The Ladies' Aid society of the First Baptist church is to hold a venison roast supper in the dining room of the church on Wednesday evening, starting at 6 o'clock. Tickets will be 50c.—adv.

ARMY LIMITATIONS

Limitation of armies has come in for discussion as an accompaniment of the limitation of navies, but it hasn't made much progress. It is a problem that concerns the European countries deeply because of their geographical location and the stress that has been placed upon such defense in the past.

Discussion at Geneva by the preparatory disarmament commission has hitherto gotten ahead slowly. There has been and there is still difficulty in establishing a common ground. At the present session the talk has centered upon the method that should be employed in bringing about limitation in case it is decided upon. Opinions have differed, but there has been a majority expression in favor of limitation through the budget. This is contrary to the course favored by this country, but it establishes a basis for debate in which opportunity will be given to set forth the good and bad features of such a plan, although agreement upon such a resolution doesn't by any means assure the adoption of army limitations or the final approval of the budgetary plan.

When it comes to considering army limitations, there are those nations which believe that the limit should be placed upon the armies by fixing the number for each country. There are others which take the attitude that it should be done by fixing the amount to be placed in the budget for army purposes. This country has urged the desirability of the direct method. It is the method that has been applied here and our army is already small.

With the European countries there are all kinds of angles to be taken into consideration. Each is watching the other and what will have the greatest effect upon the others, or upon certain ones, gets their approval. The matter of army limitations is one which might well be left to the nations of Europe to adjust themselves, since our army is not and will not become a menace to European countries. We have already taken steps in behalf of limitation which makes our standing army puny in comparison with those of other countries. But among the European countries it is different and anything that may be accomplished in the way of restricted armies can be expected to operate for the peace of the continent.

CONGRESSIONAL BUSINESS

No official statement has been made, but there is much speculation concerning the Wickersham committee and the report it will make.

There seems to be general agreement that the report will not be ready for the opening of congress. There are guesses that the committee will not advocate repeal of the 18th amendment and there are those who take the position that there will be advocacy of moderation. Perhaps one view is as good as another. Certainly, if the report has not been agreed upon and drafted, anything may be reported.

Beyond what the committee will report there is talk to the effect that the committee's decision will not be made known until the first of the year and that this course has been adopted in order that the attention of congress may not be distracted from its regular affairs by the consideration and debate upon what the committee has to say.

That the country is interested in learning the result of the inquiry into the enforcement question goes without saying. On the other hand, it is also certain that there is business coming before the coming session of congress which ought to be disposed of within its life. Endeavors have been made to have that accomplished. As usual there are those who are disposed to block it and it can be readily appreciated that if there is a lengthy discussion on the Wickersham committee report opened during the early days of the session there is no telling when or whether the important appropriation bills will be reached and acted upon. Those bills should get attention. If they are not acted upon it will force a special session, and the country has had enough experience with such for congress to steer clear of any such course.

At the same time there is no reason why the Wickersham report should not get early attention. The problem is to get congress to give its attention to the business that will be before it in such a manner that emergency matters, regular legislation and special reports are given attention and disposed of within the limited time. Such is entirely possible if congress isn't disposed to waste time and play politics.

ATTACK ON HAMAGUCHI

All those who are opposed to the idea of assassination and all those who appreciate the character of the man and the service that he has rendered for international peace through his support of the London treaty, will learn with much satisfaction of the improved condition of Premier Hamaguchi of Japan, and hope for his complete recovery.

The effort to take his life in the very building where a predecessor was stricken down by an assassin was directly due to the part which he played in bringing about the ratification of the London naval treaty by Japan.

Although Japan signed the treaty at the time it was negotiated, there was a determined fight made against ratification. It was conducted by the big navy advocates and totally disregarded the advantages which had been obtained by Japan under the Washington treaty and the fact that Japan has been consistently urging a continuation and extension of such a policy, in the belief that it would still further benefit.

In making a fight against ratification, it was contended that the treaty had not been contracted constitutionally, that there was not proper consultation of the naval authorities of Japan during its negotiation and that the naval defense of the country would be seriously neglected. There was no consideration given to the fact that Japan secured advantages under the treaty which were reluctantly allowed and there was little or no thought by these opponents given to the fact that the limitation applies to all signers of the treaty and not Japan alone.

There was not much difficulty in stirring opposition to the treaty during an elaborate campaign of publicity by those who set themselves up as patriots but the premier was able to get the support of the privy council and, therefore, the influence that secured the emperor's signature. In Japan, as in some other countries, there are those who are unwilling to accept an adverse decision. They consider it a case for personal and deadly action. Such nearly took the life of the premier, but prompt and skillful treatment promises to cheat the assassin's bullet.

FARM LEGISLATION

If there is an uneasiness among the members of the farm board and a desire to resign there can be no surprise. They undertook a difficult task when they accepted appointment to that board. They were faced with a hard problem. It would have been difficult enough under normal conditions, but with the world-wide depression piled up on top of it there was a staggering situation.

The board has done much to give encouragement to the cooperatives. It has also found it necessary to tell the producers that there should be diversification instead of piling up greater quantities of products than can be marketed. In the endeavor to support prices it has bought much wheat and cotton on which much loss will probably be sustained. And yet, in spite of its efforts in dealing with a tremendous problem and the influences over which it had no control, the board has come in for much criticism because it hasn't done more, because it has tried to influence producers to help themselves and because it hasn't accomplished the impossible.

The desire to get away from such a job, especially when it is being directed at considerable financial sacrifice on their part, is no more than might be expected. It is also being accompanied by further advocacy of those measures for dealing with the farm situation which have been shown to be dangerous and unsound. For such to be advanced as a policy for coming legislation with foreign markets off, commodity prices down and over-production clearly established ought to mean greater opposition than it received before. Certainly, if the farm board has not been able to make the safer proposition work, there is no confidence created in those schemes which could be branded as unworkable and unwise before they were started.

ARMY-NAVY GAME

It has apparently taken the unemployment situation of 1930 to bring the Army and Navy teams to agree to a resumption of football games. For the past three years those institutions have not sent teams to contest for honors on the gridiron.

They had a disagreement over the rulings at the two institutions regarding the number of years an athlete could participate. The Navy takes the position that there should be a limitation of three years for all athletes and that this includes any period that he may have played at another college. With the Army the situation is quite different, inasmuch as it makes no difference how long an athlete may have participated at another college, he is entitled to three years in varsity athletics there.

Because of what is regarded as a one-sided situation and an advantage for the Army, there was a break in the understanding whereby there had previously been an annual football clash, and despite efforts it has been impossible to patch up the situation. Even now there has been no agreement reached in regard to eligibility rules, but, for the benefit of the unemployment fund, the football teams of Annapolis and West Point will play in New York December 13.

Hopes are entertained that this will produce a sizeable sum since there is always keen interest when these teams meet. That it will attract a big crowd can be expected, but, in addition to that and the aid which may be contributed to relieving conditions, it is not improbable that it will strengthen the efforts which have been made to bring about a resumption of annual contests. It gives promise of breaking the ice, which is always an important step in renewing agreements.

EDITORIAL NOTES

The man on the corner says: Speaking of rain, we need more than we are getting.

It is apparently a great effort for the stock market to get turned around and headed in the right direction.

According to reports from abroad, the Prince of Wales is able to drive a German seaplane without being thrown.

The approach of the end of the football season means hard work of a different kind in a scrimmage with their studies.

If the pedestrian thinks there are lights for everything but the fellow afoot, there are times and places where such a view is justified.

The German foreign office ridicules the Gerard statement that Germany would repudiate the Young plan. It is hardly probable that both will be found to be right.

If the idea of having Connecticut high hat the rest of New England doesn't appeal to the other five states, it is no different than would be the case if the situation were reversed.

RAT DRIVE INSPIRES NATURE FAKERS; TALES OLD AND NEW

The drive on rats, scheduled to take place in eastern Connecticut this week and next, leads the Jewett City correspondent of The Bulletin to tell a few whoppers about the animals. Noank and points north are expected to contribute in due time. However, old-time subscribers to The Bulletin are backing the tales which appeared in this paper during past years as being capable of giving a good run to any newcomers.

Thursday of Aug. 5, 1897, The Bulletin tells how

Cat And Rat Were Trencher Mates

A Preston farmer finding the rats were making sad havoc with the provender in his cellar, purchased a cat that was recommended as a mouser, and stationed her where the rodents of genus mus were mussing most. For a while after not a rat was to be seen, and their depredations ceased entirely. A month elapsed and the servant girl screamed not, neither did she run up the cellar stairs shaking her clothing and screeching hysterically: "A rat! a rat!"

This apparent success made the old man boast that "Tab was more 'n a ordinary cat," and the animal soon had the confidence of the whole family. Two months had not passed, however, before the servant girl's old familiar cry was heard about noonday upon the cellar stairs. Rushing to the door, the farmer inquired:

"What is the matter, Bridget?"

"Bless me cowl," replied Bridget, "as I was getting pertaties I saw the cat ating on one side of her plate and an ould rat ating on the other side, and divil a bit did she scare him, but she just purred and purred, while the dirty, sharp-nosed baste was ating and smacking his chops, and dining very pacefully loike, and winkin' wid his eye as much as to say, do ye mind, 'We'll both live at the expinse of this house.'

"Then persaving me, you know, he seemed to realize that I might tell yez of it, so dartin' for me fate, the baste, he druv me scraming to the sthairs. That cat niver sthirred any more nor though she has been charmed by a snoike, but stood there lickin' her chops and lookin' as placid as a fat alderman at a circus wud do. She is a black baste, that she is!"

Were Buddies For Months

The farmer could not believe the tale, so the next day he took it upon himself to watch the cat when she was taking her meals, and sure enough out came an old rat exhibiting a familiar air and perfect delight in the presence of Tabby, at whose dish he refreshed himself without in the least exciting the ire of the cat. This novel relationship was continued for months, but the servant girl could not be restrained from screeching and dropping the crockery every time she saw the animal.

This made the thing so expensive the farmer concluded to kill the rat. He was a good marksman, but the interest that had excited sympathy for the animal in his heart unnerved him for the deed, and his aim was inaccurate and he missed the rodent, only to see Tabby, who had so long allowed the rat to eat at her plate, pounce upon it, take it by the neck and with two shakes put it to death. Now he is inquiring what power kept the cat from killing it before.

Mice Nursed With Kittens

From The Bulletin of July 15, 1880.

The Westerly Weekly tells the story of a cat in that place: A West Broad street merchant has a cat which recently was the mother of five kittens, four of which have been drowned. The other day, the cat caught a rat in the store cellar; and soon after was seen to bring two little rats from the cellar and put them with her remaining kitten. Since that time pussy has cared for both kitten and rats in a motherly manner, nursing and petting them indiscriminately. The incident has attracted considerable attention, especially as the cat is known to be an excellent ratter.

"Spurios" Thieves

The cleverness of Plainfield rodents in thievery is revealed in The Bulletin of July 17, 1889:

The railroad station at Plainfield junction is a rat metropolis. They increase and prosper, and are so little interfered with that they are not shy. When there are only a few people in the station, the rats come out, walk leisurely about and help themselves to the provender.

One day last week a lady employed there heard a thumping noise on the restaurant counter, and looking in the direction of the noise saw a rat taking a hard boiled egg from the counter. When the rat jumped down with his booty the lady called a clerk, who was the only person in the station besides herself, and watched the rat as he returned and took the second egg from the plate.

He was apparently an old and knowing rat. The eggs were covered with a wire screen or turret. The rat had been there before. He walked carefully around the plate, inspecting the screen, touching the cover with his nose, then he put one foot under it and with foot and head pushed the wire cover off the plate until one side rested on the counter, with the other side raised up. He then took an egg in his paws and rolled it two feet away and left it on the counter.

The rat then returned to adjust the cover. With teeth and feet he succeeded in dragging the cover over the eggs.

He then surveyed his work like a careful mechanic, and it did not suit his ratship. So he gave it a little more pulling to adjust it, and stepping back again took another look, and that settled it. Everything seemed to be adjusted just as he had found it. Having removed everything that would excite suspicion, he took the second stolen egg and departed.

Human thieves have done a poorer job than that old rat did. He showed signs of wisdom if he was only guided by instinct. This story is vouched for by responsible persons. We have no doubt the rat himself would say it is true.

Kicked A Goal With His Nose

The Bulletin of Oct. 26, 1925, relates an incident showing the sagacity of a Greeneville rat:

The Moosup Journal says: Speaking of the intelligence frequently shown by animals, a Moosup business man vouches for the accuracy of this story of a very large rat seen on the highway in the rear of the Greeneville car barns, near Norwich, last Thursday afternoon. The animal was trying to carry a big apple across the road; but, seeing the approaching car, he dropped his burden, backed away from it a couple of feet, then ran ahead full speed and succeeded in bunting the apple so hard that it rolled off the pavement.

The rat raced after the fruit thus saved and in a twinkling was safe out of harm's way himself, which he might not have been had he continued carrying the apple as at first.

Jewett City's Quaint Rodents

In recent years, Jewett City seems to have been the habitat of some remarkable specimens. Thus, on May 15, 1929, the correspondent from that borough reported:

Adelard La Porte caught a strange animal in a barn Monday night on the premises where he is employed. The queer looking creature is part rat and part squirrel. Its head and legs are those of a common rat, not to be mistaken in any particular. Along its sides is long gray hair, while its tail is flat and bushy, like that of a squirrel.

Mr. La Porte had the animal in a pail and showed it to a wondering gallery at Jodoin's market today. Back of the barn is a patch of woods where squirrels have been seen often.

And again as late as May 17 of this year the Jewett City correspondent has a special from the local rat colony:

A great wharf rat, with a tail a foot long, appeared on Main street from some unknown source in midforenoon Thursday. Evidently it was the gray-back's intention to cross the highway; but road scrapers, buses, shouting children and passing automobiles presented too much of a problem, even to a wharf rat, so he dodged under a pile of crates that stood on the sidewalls.

The streets were crowded, men and boys ran from all quarters, traffic was held up, even the steam shovel man left the big scoop hanging in mid-air, while he hurried to join the jam. The excitement was redoubled when a glimpse was gained of Mr. Rat as he shifted his position. Then a dog showed up, followed by another. One of these fiery canine warriors rushed in, but rushed right out again, and letting out a couple of yelps, beat it down the line for parts unknown.

Sticks and stones were cast as the quarry darted out, and he would have escaped the whole bunch only that a small, red-headed kid nailed him with a piece of brick. The crowd slowly dispersed, buses moved on, the shovel started and the normal deafening racket was resumed.

Care Of The Teeth During Pregnancy

By Edward Lyman Cornell, M. D., Chicago.

(From Gorgas Memorial Institute)

In perhaps no other branch of human activity is there so much general and widespread misinformation as in motherhood. We have the knowledge, or at least it is known to science, but that is a different thing from getting it into widespread use.

Care of the teeth is not new as ancient records show, but in modern times great strides have been made, and there is now little if any excuse for poor teeth and poor health consequent upon that condition. But along with the development of dentistry have followed many perverse notions. One of these, and a particularly harmful one, because it is so widespread, is that the pregnant woman should not have any dental work done. That notion is not only harmful but most unwise.

The care of the teeth is a very important matter to the pregnant woman. She should wash them after each meal, using an alkaline dentifrice, milk of magnesia or a mouth wash. If the brushing of the teeth produces nausea, she may substitute the finger covered with bandaged gauze.

During pregnancy, teeth decay more readily and it is a good policy to see your dentist at least once every two months so that small cavities, etc, may be promptly repaired. In this way it frequently avoids the loss of the entire tooth. Many physicians advise having the teeth of pregnant women placed in first class condition early in the pregnancy. Anything may be done that is necessary. Teeth may even be pulled with or without gas or under a local anesthetic. The unborn baby cannot be injured by the repair work done on the mother's teeth.

After the baby is born, the mother's teeth should be examined as early as possible, as the drain of nursing the baby may cause decay. Not infrequently it has been found that abscessed teeth are found in women who suffer from what is called toxemia of pregnancy—which usually means that the kidneys are affected. If the mouth contains many devitalized teeth it is best to have them X-rayed and advise with the dentist whether or not there are any teeth showing abscesses. All root stumps and markedly decayed teeth should be removed or properly treated. All ulcerations of the gums from active abscesses at the roots of the teeth should be treated as soon as discovered as this removes a source of danger as far as toxemia of pregnancy is concerned.

If the pregnant woman will pay proper attention to her own teeth and makes sure that her mouth contains no pus producing pockets, her baby has a better chance.

In closing, just a word about the baby's teeth. When he gets his teeth, the mother should give them as much care as she does her own. The first teeth should be filled if cavities develop because the shape of the mouth and the development of the second teeth is thereby preserved.

A Washington Bystander

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, Nov. 16—Come December and the lame-duck session of the 71st congress, a report loaded with political dynamite will be dropped into the congressional hopper by President Hoover. He has no option about it, yet that report is apt to set congress by the ears.

For it will contain a computation based on 1930 census results of state allocation of memberships in the house of the 73rd congress.

It will take a lot more legislation and endless debate to complete reapportionment preparations. It is too personal a matter for too many sitting members to avert that.

Yet if the 71st congress failed to take further steps, and the succeeding 72nd congress found itself deadlocked for any reason, the picture of the 73rd congress outlined in that report of next month would become effective automatically in the elections of 1932.

That's the sort of spur to action put into Public Act No. 13 providing for the 1930 census and reapportionment computation.

Juggling

Looking the act over, you find that some striking possibilities, are presented. You discover, for instance, that the anti-gerrymandering provision to guard against political juggling with geography of the new districts in each state is missing.

It would be tempting state legislators to leave such an opening for party coups.

And you discover another thing. To get the legislation through all attempts to change the size of the house from the present 435 members or to depart from the "major fractions" method of apportionment had to be abandoned.

And with these went safeguarding clauses setting up federal law to govern where states failed to do their own redistricting legislation.

The original bills provided that where additional house seats were awarded a state and that state failed to redistrict existing districts should remain as they were and the additional members be elected at large.

Where there was a reduction in memberships for a state and no state redistricting legislation all members must be elected at large.

Possibilities

Think that latter clause out in application to a border state, democratic as a whole but with one or two republican districts. By merely failing to redistrict a democratic legislature could wipe out those historically republican seats.

Or take republican California, which will have the biggest increase. By merely failing to redistrict its republican voting strength in the house could be doubled.

Yet, lacking any of these safeguards, what will happen if a state fails to redistrict? It's a nice little problem for the lame duck 71st or the incoming 72nd congress. And the fact that 1932 is a presidential year makes it all the worse. The presidency might hinge on the job.

CHILD TRAINING

Junior Loses His Coat

Lenora Bailey

"Junior Wells, where is your coat?" asked Mrs. Wells as five-year-old Junior rushed in after school bareheaded and coatless.

"I lost it, mother, and my cap, too," breathlessly explained the son.

"Lost them?"

"Yes, and Mr. Richards and I just looked and looked for them all over the school grounds and in the cafeteria and the kindergarten room and every place, but we couldn't find them, so Mr. Richards brought me home in his car so I wouldn't get cold."

"Well, I don't see how on earth you could lose your clothes like that up there at school. Look here, Junior Wells, are you telling me the truth?"

"Honestly, mother. Didn't you hear the car stop in front when Mr. Richards let me out?"

"I'll go to school in the morning and find out all about this."

The next morning Mrs. Wells accompanied her son to school. They went to the office of Mr. Richards, the principal of the building. He explained that Junior had come to him after school the day before and reported his cap and coat missing. His teacher had gone so the principal had assisted in a search which had not been successful.

Mrs. Wall, the kindergarten teacher, was called to the office but she could not explain the occurrence to the disturbed mother. She thought Junior had left with the other children, properly clothed.

"Junior, why didn't you place your coat and cap in your locker as you always have done so nicely?" she inquired of her little pupil.

"I did," was the unexpected answer.

"Who took them out?"

"I don't think anybody did," was the still less expected reply.

The three adults exchanged glances, then with Junior they marched down the hall to the locker. They waited while he calmly opened the door and brought to sight the coat and cap under discussion.

"Why did you say your things were lost?" asked the mother.

"I thought they were lost," replied the boy somewhat sullenly.

"I'm sorry, Mr. Richards, that this should have happened. I'll admit I was inclined to be a little resentful, thinking some of you had been careless but . . . ."

"Pardon me for interrupting you just a minute," replied the principal. "Mrs. Wall, will you and Junior go to the kindergarten now? And Mrs. Wells, will you please come to the office?

"The reason I interrupted you a few minutes ago," he continued after they were seated, "was to keep you from uttering a hastily formed judgment on your son's actions.

"I'm not sure," he went on, "just what, in Junior's world, demanded that his coat and cap be lost, but something did and to him it was real. He wasn't telling falsehoods according to his understanding though from our adult viewpoint his behavior was quite inexcusable. We are inclined often to forget that children live in worlds of their own and have altogether different standards and demands than they will have when they get older and more mature. All this merely means that we, as parents, must learn to judge and evaluate from the standpoint of the child's development. When we investigate, we find nine times out of ten, that the child is living up to some childish demand, but the parents must of course, be careful not to judge other children or teachers on the child's testimony at this period."

Mrs. Wall then entered, and explained the mystery by saying they had read a story the previous day in which one of the minor events concerned a little boy who had lost his coat.

"Well, I do declare! What shall I do with that boy!" exclaimed his mother.

"Please be wise and do nothing with regard to this particular occurrence," advised the principal. "It was just a necessary incident in the boy's life. Little by little, without questioning his truthfulness, show him the difference between the actual and the imaginary. Be patient and careful and he will gradually get the correct viewpoint."

Norwich 100 Years Ago

From
THE NORWICH COURIER

The most important foreign intelligence, of a civil nature, is the course taken by the French on the subject of Capital Punishment, said the Norwich Courier of November 17, 1830, 100 years ago this week. Continuing, the article says: The attempt of some was at first the total abolition of the punishment of death, in all cases. The fundamental and radical change in the whole policy and system of French criminal law, was fully and freely discussed. A petition to the king finally passed the Chamber of Deputies, for an act providing for the abolition of the punishment of death in most cases, but leaving some of the more enormous crimes for this merited punishment.

The king, in reply, expressed his strong approbation of the act presented for his sanction, and, it is said that LaFayette strenuously supported the act as modified. It is said that a feeling of humanity towards the late king's ministers has some effect to hurry on these efforts for a milder code, in order to save them, if convicted, from the forfeiture of their lives.

An abstract of more local interest says: "We notice in the last number of the Connecticut Observer, an interesting account of the Convention of Teachers and other Friends of Education, held at Hartford on the 10th and 11th inst. Noah Webster, Esq., was chosen chairman and Samuel H. Huntington and Asa Child, Esqrs., secretaries. An introductory lecture was delivered by Dr. Humphreys, president of Amherst college.

"At a meeting of several gentlemen in Norwich, November 16th" says the same issue of The Courier, "It was resolved to call a county convention of teachers and others interested in the subject of education. The convention will meet at the Norwich Female Academy, on Friday, Nov. 26th, at 10 o'clock a. m. Measures will be taken to make the meeting one of interest and profit to teachers. Teachers and all interested are invited to attend. We should be happy to see any gentlemen from the adjoining counties, also, who can make it convenient to be with us." The notice was signed by William Palmer, Thomas Robinson and W. Hooker, committee on arrangements.

Gilman and Ripley advertised fresh teas and fresh raisins for sale. Their advertisement read: "40 chests hyson skin tea; 30 half chests young hyson do; 35 do do souchong do; 100 boxes bunch, Muscatel and brown raisins. All of the above articles are of the latest importations."

A HISTORY OF CONNECTICUT INDUSTRY

Released by Manufacturers Association of Connecticut

The Acme Shear Company, Bridgeport.

The Acme Shear company was organized and incorporated by two brothers, Dwight and David C. Wheeler in 1882 in the city of Bridgeport. The company attributes its success to the untiring efforts of these two pioneer shear manufacturers.

Dwight Wheeler served as president of the organization for 45 years, and David C. Wheeler acted in the capacity of treasurer for 46 years. The present president and treasurer is Dwight C. Wheeler, son of David C. Wheeler, who joined the company immediately after graduating from Yale in 1904. John J. Conway, present vice president and sales manager, has been associated with the company since 1894.

A great number of employes have been with the company for 20, 30, and 40 years.

Today the Acme Shear company is the largest manufacturer of shears and scissors in the world, having a daily capacity of 25,000 cast, stamped and forged steel shears and scissors of the very best quality.

The main plant is located at Knowlton Hicks, Joseph and Arctic streets, Bridgeport. The Atlas Shear company, on North avenue, and the E. W. Carpenter Manufacturing company on Railroad avenue, Bridgeport, are owned by the Acme Shear company.

The present officers of the company are as follows: Dwight C. Wheeler, president and treasurer; John J. Conway, first vice president and sales manager; Harvey R. Abbott, second vice president; Thomas F. Conway, secretary; D. Joseph O'Connor, assistant secretary; Addison G. Wright, Jr., assistant secretary; Ralph T. Davis, assistant treasurer; Alden A. CLAIMS HE HAD ACCOMPLICES IN BURGLARIES AT NIANTIC STORES

William Treat, 24, of Niantic, and Bridgeport, for whom a search has been under way by the state police for about ten weeks, was arrested in Bridgeport Sunday by State Policeman Arthur Smith from the Groton barracks and has charges of breaking and entering three places in Niantic against him.

Sunday evening Treat was presented before Justice of the Peach Effie Hayes in Niantic, where he pleaded guilty to the charges against him and was bound over to the next session of the criminal superior court. Bonds were placed at $5,000, which Treat is endeavoring to secure.

The charges against Treat are that about ten weeks ago he entered the drug store of John Manwaring, the Dickinson garage and the plumbing shop of Heflon Bros., securing some money and materials in each case, possibly a total of less than $100 in money. In a confession which Treat is alleged to have made to the state police, he claimed he had an accomplice in the robberies, but he was a man whom he did not know. He told a tale of traveling over a good part of the United States in the last ten weeks, saying that he had been out through the west. The state police are engaged in checking up on some other cases with which they believe Treat may have been connected.

Saturday night at a dance hall in Montville, Officers Dygert and McKenzie arrested Lawrence McPartland of Waterford and Dominic Guiliano, 62 Perkins avenue, New London, on a breach of the peace charge. It is claimed they got into a fight.

THURBER FUND WORKER TELLS OF NEAR EAST

Nathan D. Prince of Hartford, state chairman of the Near East foundation, has received a visit from Miss Katherine W. Reynolds, Connecticut director of the foundation. Miss Reynolds, who has been making a state-wide campaign for the Thurber fund, to finance a pavilion for tuberculous refugee children in Athens, Greece, as a memorial to the late Christopher C. Thursber of Norwich, a veteran relief worker overseas, and a graduate of Trinity college, issued a statement concerning other activities of her organization which is attempting to educate peasant youth in the eastern Mediterranean countries. The statement in part is as follows:

"Near East foundation was organized because 132,000 American-trained children and 15 years of emergency relief work offer an unprecedented opportunity for the conservation of moral, educational and welfare values and for the cooperation with the people of the Near East in their next step forward, lifting their childlife from neglect and their rural peoples from stagnation and disease. It represents an era in American international good will, and operates only where requested and in cooperation with local agencies."

The various phases of the work, according to Miss Reynolds, consists of farm instruction among half a million refugees settled in Macedonia by the League of Nations refugee settlement commission, where 4,000 children from American orphanages have been outplaced, and in the farming communities of Smyrna, Palestine and Persia; a farm school in Albania, conducted in a model village in the school grounds; traveling clinics which minister to refugee villages in Greece, Syria and the Caucasus; disease prevention work in the refugee camps of Athens, to which the Thurber Memorial hospital is allied; homes for working boys and girls in Greece, Syria and Egypt; playgrounds in Bulgaria, Turkey and Greece, and a school for leadership at Antilyas Syria.

RECALLS POLITICAL LEADERS IN EASTERN CONNECTICUT

In his column in a New Haven Sunday newspaper, The Old Timer recalls some well known names of years ago in this part of the state when he reviews a little election history, as follows:

Now that the state elections are over it is interesting to recall the names of some of Connecticut's former governors. John Winthrop, of New London, was the governor of this colony for 18 years after 1767; Fritz John Winthrop, of New London, handled the job for ten years after 1698, and Gurdon Saltonstall, 17 years after 1708. Almost 100 years later came Samuel Huntington, of Norwich; Jonathan Trumbull, of Lebanon; William A. Buckingham, of Norwich—the Civil war governor, who served eight years from 1858—and Thomas M. Waller, from New London, in 1863.

In lieutenant governors, Eastern Connecticut had John Winthrop, of New London, 1681; Jonathan Trumbull, of Lebanon, and Samuel Huntington, of Lyme, all in the 18th century; Noyes Billings, New London, 1844; Charles J. McCurdy, Lyme, 1847, and Francis B. Loomis, New London, 1877.

As to secretaries of state, Eastern Connecticut had Judge John P. C. Mather, of New London, in 1850; Hiram Appleman, of Groton, 1869; Marvin H. Sanger, of Canterbury, 1873; William C. Mowry, Norwich, 1895; Theodore Bodenwein, New London, 1905.

As to treasurers, Henry H. Gallup, of Norwich, served the state in 1901 and Ernest Rogers, of New London, in 1925.

Prominent men from "over east," outside of those already named that may be mentioned are Henry Matson Webb, of Lyme; Chief Justice John D. Park, of Norwich; Congressman John T. Wait, of Norwich; Congressman Augustus Brandegee and his son, Frank B. Brandegee, both of New London, and both speakers of the house. Then there was John A. Tibbetts of the old New London Telegram and Judge Walter C. Noyes.

DR. R. P. KEEP, FARMINGTON, AIDS FRIENDLESS BABIES

Robert Porter Keep, who succeeded his father, the late Dr. Robert Porter Keep, formerly principal of Norwich Free Academy, as head of the famous school at Farmington founded by the latter's aunt, again has made all the Catholics of Connecticut his debtors. All the diocese of Hartford—which means the state of Connecticut—is interested in and contributes toward the support of the friendless babies—several hundred of them—for whom the diocese built a special home at West Hartford. To this St. Agnes' home every summer for a number of years, Mr. Keep has turned over each vacation the Grade A milk from his fine Jersey herd, in the period when the several hundred students at Miss Porter's have gone to their homes.

The great generosity of this annual charity of the present Dr. Keep is evidenced by the annual report that, from June 1 to Sept. 27 the St. Agnes' babies, cared for by the Sisters of Mercy, received exactly 5,630 quarts of milk from the Porter school farm.

YOUTH HAD CHECK INTENDED FOR MILKMAN

A Norwich boy of the juvenile court age, who tried to get a $63 check cashed by a Norwich merchant Saturday night was taken into custody by the police and it is understood that investigation showed the boy had broken into a mail box in Preston, from which he had stolen a check which had been placed there for a milkman.

The boy will be presented before the juvenile court.

WILL STUDY BUILDING COSTS OF SOLDIERS' HOME

Chairman Benedict M. Holden of the Veterans' Home commission, has been authorized by the commission to appoint a committee of three to make a thorough study of the cost of reconstructing the plant at the Fitch's home at Noroton, in comparison with the cost of constructing a new plant on another site.

This committee, authorized at a meeting of the commission last week is to report at the next meeting, Dec. 16.

The Soldiers' home at Noroton has a capacity of 400 individuals and now has a population of 364 residents and 51 absent veterans, a total of 415. In studying the needs of the Soldiers' home of the future the plan is for capacity of 1,470 this being based on the two per cent. average of those expected to be received at the home from the total of Connecticut veterans in the World war. Connecticut had approximately 70,000 men in the service, and the commission is planning for the next 50 years on the basis of service in the World war.

At the veterans' home at the present time there are more than 40 men who saw service in the Civil war, 65 years ago. Veterans of the World war are finding refuge in soldiers' homes at earlier ages than did the veterans of other wars, the records of the national home disclosing that 60 per cent. of its population is of World war veterans, and the average age of admission is 38 years.

INCREASING SUPPLY OF NEW ENGLAND TURKEYS

New England is steadily forging ahead in the matter of raising turkeys, with Connecticut doing its share of the boosting. Production of turkeys in New England this year is approximately 32 per cent greater than last year, whereas the production for the country as a whole is about 3 per cent below last year's figure.

Drought conditions which prevailed in some areas caused increased production in those sections, for turkeys thrive on hot, dry weather. But there was a decrease in hatchings in most parts of the country this year because of relatively poor prices received last year.

Reports from 17 turkey growers in this state show an increase of 33 per cent in the number of birds on hand compared with last year and an increase of 32 per cent is shown in Massachusetts, where reports were received from 45 turkey raisers.

Figures for Vermont, Rhode Island, Maine and New Hampshire have not been completed but estimates show an increase.

The greater part of the New England turkeys will go to the Thanksgiving market, with some being reserved for the Christmas trade.

The New England label was used last year on more than 20,000 birds sold under official state grades established in connection with the New England farm marketing program. Vermont, Massachusetts, Rhode Island and Connecticut were the states using the label on turkeys. Maine and New Hampshire have not established grades.

About 18,000 labels were used in Massachusetts, 6,000 in this state, 5,200 in Rhode Island and 3,400 in Vermont. In the face of an overstocked market the labeled turkeys brought substantially better prices than they would have done if sold on the market without special identification, according to Lawrence Carlisle, president of the New England Marketing Officials' association. Labeled turkeys were sold by 129 different producers. Turkey raisers have already started purchasing New England label tags for use on their highest quality birds this year.

666 NURSES ENROLLED FOR STATE RED CROSS SERVICE

Whenever the country faces a great epidemic, the American Red Cross draws upon its reserve of 50,000 enrolled nurses. This reserve provides nurses for Red Cross public health services in connection with the local chapters and as instructors of classes in home hygiene and care of the sick. Only those nurses who have attained the highest professional requirements are accepted. They are enrolled through a series of committees, local state and national. There are about 1,400 nurses serving as volunteers on these committees.

In Connecticut, there is now a total of 666 nurses enrolled with the local committees.

CORONER'S FINDING SHOWS NO CRIMINAL LIABILITY

In a finding announced recently, Coroner Edward G. McKay has exonerated from criminal blame John Lukaszewicz of No. 26 Carpenter street, whose machine struck and killed Matti Hytti, 43, late of No. 122 Dunham street. Hytti died at the W. W. Backus hospital, Oct. 25, several days after the accident which occurred on West Thames street near Dunham street, as he was attempting to cross the street. Coroner McKay says in his finding:

That the said Matti Hytti died in the town of Norwich, Conn., on the 25th day of October, 1930, from a compound fracture right tibia; fracture humerus right, fracture ribs (right side) traumatic bronchitis and shock, which injuries were received on West Thames street near Dunham street in the city of Norwich on October 21, 1930, when he was struck and knocked to the ground by a DeSoto roadster automobile owned and operated by John Lukaszewicz.

This accident occurred on West Thames street near the intersection of Dunham street with West Thames street in the city of Norwich. At that point West Thames street runs down a slight grade in a southerly direction. Dunham street intersects West Thames street at right angles from the west. The surface of West Thames street is concrete and has one pair of trolley tracks running through the middle thereof. Automobile traffic occupies the lanes east and west of the trolley tracks.

At about 7:45 the said John Lukaszewicz was operating his DeSoto roadster southerly on West Thames street. He was accompanied by three other persons, two of whom were in the rumble seat and the third one in the main seat of the roadster. This party had come from Taftville and were on the way to New London. They had passed an automobile in the vicinity of Spring Garden avenue, a short distance north of the scene of the accident. When the Lukaszewicz car reached the vicinity of Dunham street there was no other car ahead of it going in a southerly direction, nor was there any motor vehicle traffic coming out of Dunham street. However, there was a car approaching the Dunham street intersection on West Thames street from the south.

As these two cars approached each other the deceased Matti Hytti was seen to leave the east sidewalk to cross directly to the west sidewalk near the northerly side of Dunham street. He passed in front of the north-bound automobile, reached the center of the road just as that car passed him. He seemed to hesitate and then start to complete the crossing. However, the south-bound automobile was upon him and struck him. When the man was struck he was about in the center of the front of the car between the headlights. He was carried along for some distance and then was thrown to the ground in front of the automobile. When the automobile stopped it was partly in the trolley tracks and the man was about five or six feet in front of the car.

Two of the occupants of the DeSoto got out and assisted in putting the injured man into the automobile which they had passed a few moments before. The man was then unconscious. He was taken to the hospital and was given medical attention there. His injuries were of a fatal nature and he expired four days later. On examination of the automobile made shortly after, disclosed that the damage was centered about the radiator and hood. The radiator was badly dented. The hood was pushed back onto the cowl. The headlights lenses were not broken. Sometime after the collision had occurred the mark on the road was noted, which indicated a sliding tire. This mark extended for about 60 feet and started near the west rail and continued diagonally and ended near the east rail.

The evidence in this case does not disclose a degree of gross recklessness or wantonness, such as would constitute criminal negligence under the statute. When the striking automobile passed another automobile just north of the collision it was not then going at a fast rate of speed. When it came to the scene of the collision there is nothing to show that it was being operated at more than a moderate rate of speed. The fact that the deceased had passed in front of the north-bound car when the distance between the cars was very short would hardly give the operator of the south-bound car a reasonable opportunity to have noticed that the man was in the road nor give him the opportunity to bring his car to a stop before striking him. From all the testimony the collision occurred while the automobile was passing in its proper rail west of the trolley tracks. When the man was struck the car was going down a slight grade with the power on and the brakes were applied just as the man was struck.

I am satisfied and find that the death of Matti Hytti was not caused by the criminal act, omission or carelessness of any other person or persons.

TWO FOOTBALL ISSUES SETTLED AS RESULT OF WEEK END BATTLES

NEW YORK, Nov. 16—(AP)—The football legion's 3rd November charge brought the customary quota of form reversals yesterday but at the same time settled the issue in two of the country's major conferences and clarified the situation in two others.

In the far west, Washington State's great eleven, clinched the Pacific Coast conference title by whipping Washington, 3-0, while the Utah Indians, burying Colorado university under a 34-0 count, won the Rocky mountain championship for the third straight year. The chase for the Western conference crown settled down to a private affair between Northwestern and Michigan, and the field of contenders in the Southern conference dwindled to Alabama and Tulane.

Washington State's conference winning triumph over the Washington Huskies was achieved on Lyle Haskill's placement field goal from the 38 yard line in the first period. Oregon State came to Washington State's rescue and made the Cougars' title claim clear by giving Oregon its first defeat of the year, 15 to 0. Southern California's formidable machine, beaten only by Washington State, trounced Hawaii 52 to 0.

Utah had been favored to whip Colorado university but the heavy score the Indies piled up was cause for some surprises. Other outstanding conference games saw the Colorado Aggies take the Utah Aggies into camp 13-0, while the Colorado Teachers handed Colorado college an unpleasant jolt in the form of a 7-7 tie.

In the Western conference, Northwesterns Wildcats, unbeaten and untied, had to come from behind to turn back Wisconsin 20-7. After Kabat had blocked Bruder's quick kick in the first period and fallen on the ball for a Wisconsin touchdown, the Badgers fought hard to retain their lead but finally were forced to yield in the third and fourth quarters as Northwestern opened up a brilliant passing and running offensive. Michigan beat Minnesota, 7-0, on Jack Wheeler's 45 yard run back of a punt and needs only to beat Chicago's hapless Maroons to achieve a tie with Northwestern in the final standings.

Two big teams, Ohio State and Iowa, turned back eastern foes. Ohio State, led by Wes Fesler, beat Pitt, 16-7, while Iowa was trouncing Penn State, 19-0. Notre Dame maintained its perfect record by beating Drake, 28-7, but had to call on the first string to turn the trick.

In the Big Six, Kansas staged a comeback to outpoint Oklahoma, 13-0 and go into a tie with the Sooners for the conference lead. Missouri and Nebraska fought a bitter scoreless draw while the Kansas Aggies turned back Iowa State, 13-0.

Alabama played up to form in trouncing Louisiana State, 33-0, for its seventh Southern conference triumph but Tulane provided most of the fireworks by giving Georgia a 25 to 0 lacing. The result eliminated Georgia from the running and left Tulane alone disputing Alabama's march to the title. Bobby Dodd's all around work featured Tennessee's 13-0 victory over Vanderbilt. Davidson surprised with a 7-6 verdict over a highly favored North Carolina eleven.

In the east, Slip Madigan's St. Mary's combination from Oakland, Calif., called on a sensational passing attack late in the game to overcome a two touchdown deficit and give the Fordham Maroons their first beating since the final game of the 1928 season. The score was 20-12. This stirring inter-sectional clash was forced to yield in point of drama at least to the sensational showing of Princeton which barely bowed to Yale, 10-7. The Tigers, beaten in four earlier games, outfought and outgained the Elis but saw a 74 yard march down field in the closing minutes of the game fail when Trix Bennett's plunge on fourth down halt on Yale's two yard line, inches short of first down. Albie Booth's first period field goal furnished the Elis' margin of victory.

Penn crushed Georgia Tech, 34-7, Army toyed with Kentucky Wesleyan 47-2, but Southern Methodist's passing attack was too much for the Navy, 20-7. Harvard could not stop Phil O'Connell's passes and the Crimson was swamped by Holy Cross, 27-0.

Dartmouth nosed out a thrilling 19-13 victory over Cornell.

In the southwest, the Texas Steers stopped Texas Christian's march toward the conference title, 7-0 and left their ace badly tangled. Rice beat Texas A. and M., 7-0 while Baylor trounced Arkansas, 22-7.

ONLY ONE UNDEFEATED AND UNTIED TEAM IN THE EAST

NEW YORK, Nov. 16—(AP)—The defeat of Fordham by St. Mary's of California leaves Western Maryland's strong eleven sitting on top the eastern football heap, sole undefeated and untied team in the section.

In a position to dispute Western Maryland's claims, however, are Dartmouth and the Army, each unbeaten and tied once. Both the Green and the Cadets play through a much more difficult schedule than Western Maryland, whose only victory over a major eleven was over Georgetown.

Colgate continues to lead the scoring list with 349 points in eight games. Dartmouth, with 294, ranks second, and Cornell, with 260, third. On the other side of the picture is Bethany, which has lost seven straight games and yielded the opposition 327 points. Baltimore has permitted 320 enemy scores in losing eight games in a row.

LITTLE TO GET EXCITED OVER IN RINGS THIS WEEK

NEW YORK, Nov. 16—(AP)—Fistic interest centers principally on New York and Chicago this week.

In Madison Square Garden on Friday night, Jimmy McLarnin, baby-faced slugger from Vancouver, faces another heavy hitter in the person of Billy Petrolle, the Fargo Express. McLarnin, who knocked out Al Singer in three rounds in his last New York appearance, will be a heavy favorite to win although Petrolle may give him plenty of trouble. Tait Littman of Milwaukee meets Harry Smith, Negro middleweight, in the ten round semi-final.

At the Chicago stadium Friday, Tommy Loughran, retired light heavyweight champion, returns to the wars in a ten rounder with King Levinsky, latest Chicago sensation among the bigger fellows. Barney Ross and Harry Dublinski, Chicago lightweights, furnish the entertainment in the ten round semi-final. Other bouts on the national schedule include:

Monday—At Boston, Andy Callahan, Lawrence, vs. Sammy Fuller, Boston, lightweights, 10; at Philadelphia, Johnny Jadick, Philadelphia, vs. Tommy Grogan, Omaha, lightweights, and Billy Wallace, Philadelphia, vs. Jose Diaz, Cuba, lightweights, each 10; at Dayton, Joe Sekyra, Dayton, vs. Rosy Rosales, Cleveland, heavyweights, 10.

SALVATION ARMY WILL HANDLE ARMY-NAVY TICKETS

WEST POINT, N. Y., Nov. 16—(AP)—After a conference with Col. Edward Underwood and Adjutant L. E. Cowan, representing the Salvation Army, P. B. Fleming, graduate manager of athletics at the United States Military Academy, announced today that all proceeds of the Army-Navy charity football game Dec. 13 will be turned over to the Salvation Army.

The only free tickets, he said, will be for the corps of Cadets and the regiment of Midshipmen. All other pasteboards, except those necessary for the two service athletic associations, will be turned over to the Salvation Army. Members' tickets retained will be sold for $5 each instead of $3 as in the past, and the proceeds turned over to the Salvation Army.

In addition to handling the box seat tickets, the Salvation Army also will be in charge of press arrangements, photographers, and radio broadcasting. The organization will set its own price on the tickets it disposes of.

MONTVILLE BASKETBALL FIVE TO HAVE FIRST PRACTICE

Manager Armand Plouffe, of the Montville Aces basketball team has called a meeting of the players of the team for Tuesday evening in the Montville Community house at Uncasville which will be followed by their first season practice with Captain Peter Morosky in charge. Plans were made at the close of last season's Montville Industrial Twilight Baseball league of forming a basketball league this season similar to the baseball league. An effort was made by the chairman of this committee to form an Industrial Basketball league, but owing to the slack time that several of the local concerns were running these plans were abandoned. Nine players have been secured for the first tryouts Tuesday and they will be composed of Peter Morosky, Robert Welepell, Phillip MacDermott, Julius Kobos, Walter Nortosky, Ernest Moss, Jr. Rueben Akant, J. Estey and Jess Long.

HOPPE DEFENDS TITLE AGAINST COCHRAN THIS WEEK

NEW YORK, Nov. 16—(AP)—Willie Hoppe, veteran billiard star, defends his 18.1 balkline title against Welker Cochran of Hollywood, at the Strand Academy this week in a 3,600 point match beginning tomorrow. Twelve blocks of 300 points each will be player afternoon and evening every day this week.

At stake will be the diamond championship medal held by Hoppe and a side forfeit of $250. Sixty-five percent of the gate receipts will go to the winner and 35 to the loser.

The match marks Hoppe's first move in his break with the National Billiard association, which has controlled professional billiards through the sponsorship of equipment companies. The association has refused to recognize the match. Hoppe, with the support of Cochran and others, hopes to establish a new federation of billiard players.

L. H. A. C. CLAIM FORFEIT OVER TROJAN ELEVEN

The Laurel Hill Athletic club claims a game by forfeit over the Trojans 1 to 0.

This is the second game arranged between these two teams with the Trojans not putting in an appearance and without a reasonable excuse. It appears that the Trojans are purposely avoiding this club as in baseball they refused a game to this club and have failed to keep agreements in football.

The only excuse so far offered is that their team is too good for us, if that is a fact why have the Trojans been tied in one game while the L. H. A. C. has been unbeaten or tied in six starts, a record no other team in this city can equal. The manager of the L. H. A. C. desires no further arrangements with this team unless made through The Bulletin.

Sixth Straight For L. H. A. C.

The L. H. A. C. played a short game with the Sunnyside Wildcats Sunday, winning 2 to 0. The game was four 10 minute quarters. The Wildcats had a strong team on the field and held the L. H. A. C. until the last quarter, when a safety was made.

George Geoppfert, quarterback of L. H. A. C., was hurt in scrimmage and may be unable to play next Sunday.

The line-up:

J. Weise, H. Taber c Ennis lg, B. Fowler lt, C. Taber le, McMullan rg, Lizzio rt, Ross re, Goeppfert, Burdick qb, Burdick, Brush fb, Brush, Koziol lhb, M. Anderson rhb.

Next Sunday the L. H. A. C. would like a game with the Norwich Town Wildcats. Answer in The Bulletin.

BASEBALL FOOTBALL BASKETBALL BOXING

With the coming Saturday the football season will pass into history but for the exception of a few late season games, two on the Pacific coast and the much talked of Army-Navy benefit game on Dec. 13th and the Notre Dame-All Star game the following day. Football this year has aroused only mild interest in the New England district this season. Yale has not shown such strength as to make her prominent, her greatest claim to fame being that she has Albie Booth in her backfield. Dartmouth looms as the leader with a well balanced team but lacking a star to draw interest as did Myles Lane and Al Marsters. Harvard is far down the list with a team that is unusually weak. The Yale-Harvard game at New Haven Saturday is just another football game with the odds heavily in favor of Yale. Besides Booth the player demanding wide attention is Ken Goff of Rhode Island State. Goff is tied for second place in the scoring honors in the east and looks like the best backfield man in New England.

This amateur athletic problem is going to take a thorough combing at the 42nd annual national convention at Washington this week. Yesterday the matter of commercializing athletic prowess was brought up and a rule was adopted to prevent athletes of making any money on foreign barnstorming tours. The athlete must take oath that he will only take enough money to cover his bare expenses. Now of coudse there are athletes whose ideas of expenses differ from other athletes. Also we know of plenty of hotels that make certain concessions to noted athletes to have them stop in their hotels, which gives the amateur a grand opportunity to knock off a little spending money. This expense account business for athletes is a tricky thing and there are many good athletes who are amateur in practically every sense of the word who just cannot afford to sacrifice time for bare expenses. Many a good athlete has a good position with a good salary but if he competes under A. A. U. rules all he gets is his expenses, he sacrificing his salary during the time it takes him to compete, either in this country or abroad. This was demonstrated in the last olympics.

The Academy won a moral victory on Saturday. A moral victory is one of those things where you lose but you make a better showing than the public expected. At the same time a moral victory doesn't show in the won column and doesn't figure in the percentage to any great degree. Decided improvement was shown by the Academy team against Stonington which gives rise to the surmise that the coaching assistance rendered by Paul Bitgood was to some avail. The line at least functioned the best of at any time during the season, especially on the defense, but there was a scoring punch lacking.

BLACKHAWKS TIE RANGERS IN OVERTIME GAME

CHICAGO, Nov. 16—(AP)—A goal by Johnny Gottselig with only 15 seconds to play tonight enabled the Chicago Blackhawks to get an overtime, 1-1 tie with the New York Rangers in Chicago's inaugural of the major league hockey season.

More than 15,000 spectators in the Chicago stadium watched the teams battle on almost even terms until late in the third period, before a score was made. The Hawks had outplayed the Rangers a little, but their efforts could not beat the goal tending of John Ross Roach. Chuck Gardiner, Hawk goalie, also kept all shots out of the net until four minutes before the scheduled finish. Then Keeling passed to Murdoch who gave the Rangers the lead.

New York stalled until a minute from the finish when Ripley, Dutkowski and Gottselig broke through. Dutkowski missed a shot, but regained the disc, passed it to Gottselig who easily beat Roach. The game was rough and penalties were fairly frequent. Carrigan, a new Ranger, was given a major penalty in the second period for tripping Gottselig when the latter had what appeared to be an easy scoring chance.

BEARS TRAMPLE GIANTS IN MIRE AT POLO GROUNDS

NEW YORK, Nov. 16—(AP)—The Chicago Bears defeated the New York Giants in a National pro football league game at the Polo grounds today, 12-0. The game was fought out on a muddy field and in a drizzling rain that handicapped the Giants' attack, based largely on Benny Friedman's passing skill.

Nagurski broke through for both Chicago touchdowns in the third and fourth periods.

A. A. U. FINDS INTEREST IN TRACK AND FIELD SPORTS HAS DECLINED

WASHINGTON, Nov. 16—(AP)— A decline of interest in track and field sports in the United States was reported today by Avery Brundage of Chicago, national president of the Amateur Athletic union.

Golf, tennis and swimming were mentioned in his annual report as some of the sports which have caused a marked decline in interest and activity in track and field. The report will be submitted tomorrow to the A. A. U. convention.

Commercialism in amateur sport drew President Brundage's fire on two separate counts—the "recruiting" of amateur athletes by business concerns and the participation of amateurs against "admittedly professional teams."

"There has been during the past year a healthy growth in most of the A. A. U. sports," the report said. "Undoubtedly, under the stimulus of the 1932 Olympic games, there will be tremendous activity in all parts of our program during 1931.

"Unfortunately, track and field, the oldest and in some respects the most prominent sport of all, is not keeping its place in the procession.

"Owing to the inroads of golf, tennis, swimming and other summer activities, there has been relatively less track and field activity than ever before during the last few years, especially in the summer months after the Fourth of July when there should be innumerable meets held in all sections of the country.

"The officers and committeemen of every district should do their utmost to revive and stimulate interest in this fine old sport."

Brundage, himself a former Olympic track and field athlete, recommended an important change in the program of the National A. A. U. championships.

"The relay championships now held on the Monday following the track and field championships represent at present an anti-climax," he said, "and it is my recommendation that the track and field committee give serious consideration to a plan for building up an annual national relay championship to be held independently."

As a means of discouraging recruiting, he called attention to an amendment, slated for consideration by the convention, providing that athletic representatives of commercial organizations must have been not less than 90 days in the employ of the concern.

"This is with the idea of preventing the recruiting of players especially for championship events," he explained.

The tendency to "load up" by recruiting star players is understood to have been particularly prevalent among some of the teams competing for the A. A. U. basketball title.

"It has come to our attention, that there are many cases of registered teams, particularly in basketball, competing with non-registered and in some instances admittedly professional teams," the report continued.

"Such conditions will result in the utter demoralization of any sport and the officers and registration committee of every district must be on the alert to prevent abuses of this kind."

As a move to keep the taint of commercialism out of the administration of the A. A. U. itself, Brundage recommended that the convention adopt an amendment providing that "any official who receives remuneration for officiating in any sport under the jurisdiction of the union renders himself ineligible for membership on the board of governors or on the board of managers of an association or for appointment as a committee chairman."

The immediate addition of ice hockey to the A. A. U. program is predicted, with a view to American participation in this sport at Lake Placid in the winter Olympics of 1932.

CARDINALS BEAT PACKERS FOR 1ST TIME IN 2 YEARS

CHICAGO, Nov. 16—(AP)—The Chicago Cardinals handed the Green Bay Packers a 13 to 6 defeat at Comiskey park today, their first in two years of competition in the National Professional Football league.

The Cardinals won the game with six minutes to play in the last period, when Ernie Nevers took the ball on five straight plunges from the 15 yard line for the deciding touchdown, and then kicked the extra point.

CANZONERI AGREES TO BOX IN CHICAGO ON DEC. 29

CHICAGO, Nov. 16—(AP)—Tony Canzoneri, new lightweight champion of the world, has agreed to box in the Chicago stadium Dec. 29, meeting any opponent Matchmaker Nate Lewis might select. It is possible that the winner of the Barney Ross-Harry Dublinsky bout in the stadium Friday night will be named to meet Canzoneri.

PRINCETON AND HOLY CROSS PERFORM OUTSTANDING FEATS ON SATURDAY

NEW YORK, Nov. 16— (AP) — A handful of eastern teams, some of them honorably defeated and others surprisingly victorious, emerged today from the mire of Saturday's rain sodden football fields bearing most of the glory of the day.

Led by Princeton and Cornell, a group of inspired underdogs fought losing battles and acquitted themselves well against powerful rivals. A Princeton team that had won only one minor game in Bill Roper's last year as coach, came into its own and held a fine Yale eleven to a 10 to 7 score. A fumble in the first two minutes gave Yale the deciding points as Albie Booth kicked a field goal. But for the rest of the afternoon it was Princeton that won the plaudits of the crowd, refusing to be routed and coming close to a triumph in the closing minutes.

Cornell, counted a fairly easy victim of Dartmouth, fought the Big Green team to a standstill up to the last two minutes of play in a thrilling game only to lose out, 19 to 13, at the finish as Dartmouth made a final successful pass.

Columbia, battered and often beaten, allowed only one touchdown and a 6 to 0 victory. Amherst made a great fight against Williams in the battle for the "Little Three" championship before losing, 16-13.

Holy Cross, rated as a minor opponent of Harvard, completely outplayed the Crimson to score the day's biggest upset by a 27 to 0 score. It was the Crusaders' third triumph in 26 years of rivalry. Pennsylvania, apparently wrecked by last week's rout at the hands of Notre Dame, came back to beat Georgia Tech 34-7.

Two visitors from afar also took a big share of the eastern honors. From California came the Galloping Gaels of St. Mary's to run over the previously unbeaten Fordham Rams and win the first clash of the season between the east coast and the west, 20 to 12. A great recovery in the second half, topped by Bill Beasley's 62-yard run for a touchdown, brought the victory. Southern Methodist brought a brilliant passing game from the southwest to beat the Navy, 20 to 7.

The east was more successful against southern rivals as Villanova beat out Oglethorpe, 13-6, and Army's Reserves ran over Kentucky Wesleyan, 47-2. But two teams which invaded the Midwest found defeat. Ohio State beat Pittsburgh, 16 to 7, and Iowa trounced Penn State, 19 to 0.

Colgate, the leading scorer of the east, again showed its tremendous power by defeating its old rival, Syracuse, 36 to 7, as Len Macaluso personally accounted for 29 points. Western Maryland, the one undefeated and untied team left in the east, beat Mt. St. Mary's 33 to 0. Temple smashed out another decisive victory, downing Lafayette 46 to 0. New York university and Georgetown fought a bitter struggle and an accidental safety as Scalzi stepped out of the end zone in punting from behind his goal gave the Violets a 2 to 0 victory. Washington and Jefferson kept its record of never having lost to Bucknell clean by a one point victory, 7 to 6, and Rutgers had the same margin over Lehigh to get back into the "middle three" race with a 14 to 13 victory.

BALTIC TAKES SOCCER GAME FROM WAUREGAN

Sunday afternoon before a crowd of 300 soccer fans the Baltic Social and Athletic soccer team defeated the Wauregan team in a league game by the score of 3 to 0. Wauregan played good football up to the last few minutes of the game. With the score one to nothing against them Baltic shoved in two goals with good work on the part of Couillard and Dudley, who played a whale of a game. The scorers for Baltic were Seddon 1, Dudley 2.

The Baltic team plays J. B. Martin team at Taftville next Sunday.

MACALUSO PRACTICALLY COPS EASTERN SCORING HONORS

NEW YORK, Nov. 16—(AP)—For the third time this year, Len Macaluso of Colgate scored four touchdowns in one game Saturday. To this feat he added two points after touchdowns and a field goal for 29 points, bringing his total points for the season to 135. The figure exceeds by five points the 1929 record of Gene McEver of Tennessee, the nation's leading scorer last year.

Macaluso increased his lead in the race for scoring honors considerably as Bobby Goff of Rhode Island was idle Saturday while Jack Grossman of Rutgers scored two touchdowns to tie him for second place at 96 points. Bart Viviano of Cornell is fourth with an 84 point total.

The Colgate star heads the leaders in every respect but one. He has scored 18 touchdowns against 16 for Grossman and Goff, and has added 24 points, nearly double the total of any rival among the leaders. Ralph Hewitt of Columbia, however, is ahead of him in field goals with two to his credit.

Records of the leaders to date, as compiled by the Associated Press, follow:

A. A. U. ATHLETES TO GET ONLY BARE EXPENSES

WASHINGTON, Nov. 16— (AP)— A new rule designed to prevent American amateur athletes from commercializing their activity by accepting money for barnstorming tours through foreign countries was adopted tonight by the foreign relations committee of the Amateur Athletic union at the opening session of its 42nd national convention.

The rule provides that all A. A. U. athletes accepting invitations to appear in other countries take an oath they have not received and will not accept any gratuity outside of their bare expenses.

At the same time the foreign relations committee approved the acceptance of an invitation to compete in New Zealand this winter by three of America's leading athletes.

Harlow Rothert of Stanford university, weight star and all-around man; George Simpson, Ohio State's great sprinter, and Rufus Kiser, former University of Washington middle distance performer, will sail December 24 from San Francisco for New Zealand to be gone about three months.

They will be the first to come under the provisions of the new rule.

TIGERS TOP TEAMS IN FIRST WEEK OF CAN-AM.

BOSTON, Nov. 16—(AP)—The greatly strengthened Boston Tigers, aided by the work of several big league discards, finished the first week of the hockey season on top of the Canadian-American league. The Providence Reds, last year's champions, were tied for second with the Springfield Indians, and the other two clubs in the circuit, New Haven and Philadelphia, have yet to win a game.

The standing, including games of November 15, follow:

	W	L	T	Pts
Boston	2	0	0	4
Providence	1	0	0	2
Springfield	1	0	0	2
New Haven	0	2	0	0

ANNUAL COLLEGE CROSS COUNTRY RUN TODAY

NEW YORK, Nov. 16—(AP)—Striving to reunite the two halves of the title that was divided between Harry Richardson and Bud Lindsay of Maine last year, representatives of 21 colleges in the east and one mid-western institution will meet tomorrow in the 22nd annual varsity cross country championship race of the Intercollegiate A. A. A. A.

Michigan State, although not competing for the team title, again will have a pair of strong contenders for the individual championship in the six mile struggle over the Van Cortlandt Park course. Clark Chamberlain, who finished fourth in 1929, and Donald Conrad will hear the colors of Michigan State among the 259 runners who are entered.

SWEENEY AND PORTER HAVE VERY FORMIDABLE RECORDS

Barney Sweeney of Providence and Al Porter of Fall River, the boys who meet Vic Darr and Al Koziol, respectively in two of the eight-round star bouts at Parish hall on Wednesday evening, are tough lads and the local dispensers of sleeping potions will have to step. Sweeney, who now makes his home in Providence, is a former Brooklyn youth with a reputation of being a whirlwind for action, his manager claiming him to be a great club fighter who gives the fans action every minute.

The Providence boy has met with great success since he graced Providence presence and has been taking over the Rhode Island boys with regularity. In his last seven bouts he has emerged a winner in all but one, this being when he dropped a close decision to Joe Acetta. Those who he has taken are Frankie Curcio, Harold Ellashaw, Joey Costa, Joe Barrie, Steve McDonald and Soldier Frank, all good boys and well known throughout New England.

Porter, the Fall River boy who meets Koziol is also a tough boy who has been going good. Porter's record includes wins over Jimmy Abbrussie, Johnny King, Billy Shannon and Nick Fussaro which means that he is a worthy opponent for the Laurel Hill mauler. Koziol is in beautiful shape for his bout and Porter will necessarily have to be good if he is to go the eight rounds. The protege of Barney Keegan looked mighty good in his bout with Aldo Nocchi at the last show and will look even better on Wednesday night as he is fast rounding into shape after several months of idleness.

There is one substitute on the card. This is in the six-round preliminary in which Al Brouillard was supposed to have renewed his feud with Julio Rossi of Westerly. Brouillard in a bout at Worcester the other night had his nose so badly cut that he will be unable to appear on the card. However, Matchmaker Flynn has secured Mickey Blaine of Plainfield as his opponent. Blaine is a boxing instructor in Plainfield and has quite a reputation as a boxer. Among the boys Blaine claims to have fought are Kid Kaplan, Romeo Roche and a number of other well known boxers.

QUAKERS LOSE THIRD GAME OF SEASON

DETROIT, Nov. 16—(AP)—Philadelphia's luckless Quakers took their third National Hockey league beating at the hands of the Detroit Falcons here tonight, 5 to 1, in a rough game.

After a one-all tie in the first period, the Quakers' hopes vanished when Alex McKinnon, bulky defense man, injured an ankle and had to leave the game and Gordon Fraser, who took his place at defense, drew a ten minute major penalty for injuring Harvey Rockburn, Falcon defense bulwark. Rockburn was cut on the head but finished the game.

Jimmy Creighton scored first for the Falcons, and W. Kilrea got the lone Quaker goal in the first period. In the second period Ebbie Goodfellow, center, scored for the Falcons, and in the final frame, Larry Aurie, fast Falcon wingman, scored two goals and Carson Cooper, Falcon sharpshooter, a third.

Reds-Eagles Play to Tie

NEW HAVEN, Nov. 16—(AP)—The Providence Reds and the New Haven Eagles battled away to a scoreless tie tonight in an overtime Canadian-American Hockey league game.

Marked by considerable roughness in the second and third periods, the contest resolved itself into a battle between Forbes and Murray, goalies for the Eagles and Reds, respectively.

The Black Hawks Challenge.

As the Black Hawks are without a game this week they would like to challenge the Ice House Gang, Fell's All Stars, or Thamesville "Tigers." If challenge is accepted please answer through this paper.

INJURY TO PIZZO IS FRACTURED RIB

Diagnosis made Sunday at the Backus hospital of the injuries received Saturday night by Mike Pizzo of Trading Cove in an automobile accident on Trading Cove hill showed that he has a fractured rib on the left side. He was reported to be doing as well as could be expected.

Pizzo was with John Pessey, 38, also of Trading Cove, when they got off a trolley car about 10 o'clock and both were hit by an automobile driven by Dominick Felicetti, 20, of 33 Pleasant street, Westerly.

Pessey was fatally injured, dying as he was being put into the ambulance to be taken to the Backus hospital. Felicetti is under $2,500 bonds on a manslaughter charge to await the finding by Coroner Edward G. McKay.

AMERICANS TAKE MAROONS IN LISTLESS GAME

NEW YORK, Nov. 16—(AP)—The New York Americans provided a fitting opening for the 1930 New York National Hockey league season tonight by defeating the Montreal Maroons 1 to 0 in a typical early season game.

Hampered by warm weather, soft ice and lack of work, the teams showed little in the way of fine play although they had plenty of speed and enthusiasm. Normie Himes, little American center, made the one successful scoring play early in the third period. Breaking through alone when each team had one man in the penalty box, Himes got around Lionel Conacher, who managed the Americans last year, and lifted a shot past Flat Walsh for the only score.

URGES WIDE PARTICIPATION IN OLYMPIC HOCKEY

PARIS, Nov. 16—(AP)—Wide hockey participation in the olympic games at Los Angeles in 1932 was recommended today by the International Hockey Federation, which voted unanimously to admit the United States Hockey association into the federation.

Several delegates said the question of expenses might prove a handicap but it was believed France, Germany, Belgium, Denmark, Spain, the Netherlands, Hungary and India would be represented.

Macaluso Big Ground Gainer

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Nov. 16.—(AP)—Len (Iron-legs) Macaluso, Colgate's high scoring fullback, gained more than three times as much ground in rushing the ball to four touchdowns against Syracuse here yesterday as the whole Orange team. Macaluso's plunges gained 135 yards while Syracuse totaled only 42 yards.

Shipwreck Kelly Leaves Kentucky's Foes Marooned

'SHIPWRECK' KELLY Kentucky
AP

This is the ninth of a series dealing with backfield who give promise of turning in the most outstanding performances in the season's gridiron play.

By DILLON GRAHAM

(Associated Press Sports Writer)

LEXINGTON, Ky.—(AP)—Kentucky's "blonde express" is gathering momentum in another dash through Dixie's gridiron ranks. He is John Sims "Shipwreck" Kelly.

Packing 175 pounds of iron muscles, this junior halfback from Springfield, Ky., has the speed of a sprinter and the power and drive of a heavyweight. His poundage is well distributed over a six-foot frame anchored by a pair of powerful legs.

Kelly started his gridiron cutups as a sophomore when he scored three touchdowns the first four times he carried the ball. In every other game he was a dangerous threat, breaking loose for long scoring and piling up one of the highest individual records in the south.

In the Kentucky-Tennessee finale, last year, he outgained the Volunteer touchdown twins, Hack and Mack.

Kelly's labeled as a quadruple threat. His passes are unerring, his boots long, and his runs spectacular, while he can receive tosses as well as he can carry and fling them.

For sheer speed, he is the fastest man in the south. He is captain of the track team and ran the furlong this summer in the New York A. C.

In spite of his speed Kelly is an awkward runner, and puffs like a porpoise as he races along, but he surely kicks up divots in the face of those who would stop him.

He is a fair student, prominent in campus activities and a member of Sigma Alpha Epsilon fraternity.

POETRY

Testimony

My garden bears testimony to divinity,
I sow the seed, itself a mystery;
Invoke the graces of the sun;
Implore the ministry
Of the rain; and yet, when this is done,
It is God
Who thrusts up
Through the imprisoning clod
Miracles of emerald lead and radiant bloom,
Fashioned of fabrics from a heavenly loom.
Surely none but God can.
Within a seed's pin-point of space,
Pack a blue-print of the cosmos' swaying grace,
Or, from a dry brown root release
The phlox in all its still white peace
He hangs the rose upon the thorn,
And lifts the lily's smite cup
Brimmed with the dewy nectar of the morn.
It is God alone, knowing infinity,
May be so prodigal of beauty
That he gives to the errant winds the poppy
And the rose, or yields to winter's devastating hold
Autumn's arabesques of flame and gold.

—Eva Moad Turner.

To The Fringed Gentian

Thou blossom bright with autumn dew,
And colored with the heaven's own blue,
That openest when the quiet light
Succeeds the keen and frosty night.

Thou comest not when violets lean
O'er wandering brooks and springs unseen,
Or columbines, in purple dressed,
Nod o'er the ground-bird's hidden nest.

Thou waitest late and comest alone,
When trees are bare and birds have flown,
And frosts and shortening days portend
The aging year is near his end.

Then doth thy sweet and quiet eye
Look through its fringes to the sky,
Blue—blue—as if the sky let fall
A flower from its cerulean wall.

I would that thus, when I shall see
The hour of death draw near to me,
Hope blossoming within my heart,
May look to heaven as I depart.

—By William Cullen Bryant.

"Why don't you go into the house?" charged the policeman who chanced to pass.

By blunting the points of two bullets dum-dum fashion with the intention of making them more effective, Anton Kaider, a Viennese carpenter, achieved exactly the opposite effect. Both of the bullets, when fired into his head in an attempt at suicide, failed to penetrate the brain and stopped so near the surface of the skull that hospital attendants were able to withdraw them and save his life.

OUTLOOK FOR BUSINESS BRIGHTENS

NEW YORK, Nov. 16.—(AP)—Fresh signs of a reversal in the trend of commodity and security prices cast rays of sunlight into the gloomy business atmosphere last week. Indications of a change of trend in business could scarcely be expected to be conclusive at this time of year, but a determined stand against price depression by copper and steel producers, together with resumption of activity by automobile manufacturers, were widely regarded as promising developments.

Statistics appearing for October were largely cheerless, but the action of the security and commodity markets indicated that discouragement over the failure of the autumn business revival to reach normal seasonal proportions was disappearing in the light of constructive plans for the future.

The week made a decidedly bad start, with securities and grains dropping to new lows for the depression on Monday, but a climax seemed to have been reached on that day, and recovery or greater stability was apparent thereafter.

Warm and rainy weather during the week interfered with retail trade throughout extensive areas, and tended to make merchants cautious. This was reflected in the wholesale markets, although a little more activity was reported in holiday lines. Some let down was reported in the primary textile markets, where betterment had been noted of late, but buyers have yet to cover many needs for holiday trade.

The outstanding development of week in the commodity price situation was the increase in copper metal prices from 9 1-2 cents to 12 cents a pound, on announcement that copper producers had agreed upon a curtailment plan to check the steady piling up of stocks of the past 10 months. At the recent levels of 9 1-2 and 10 cents a pound, it was well known that many producers were operating at a loss. Even at 12 cents, the price is the lowest in years, with the exception of the past few months. Conspicuous also was the posting by the Carnegie Steel Co., subsidiary of U. S. Steel, of minimum prices on plates, shapes and bars, while these quotations were those which had been quoted in the regular markets, competition had forced prices at which transactions were actually being completed substantially below market quotations. The minimum price quotation was regarded as an important step in establishing stability, and reports from leading centers indicated that consumer inquiry had been stimulated, although most of it was for delivery well in the future. Nevertheless, operations in the Youngstown area are expected to be stepped up from 50 to 52 per cent of capacity next week. "Iron Age" reported that operations for the industry at large early last week were at 44 per cent of capacity, against 48 a week previously. In the meantime, production has fallen to still lower levels. It was estimated by "Iron Age" at 44 per cent of capacity, against 48 the preceding week.

The weekly petroleum statistics were the most encouraging in several weeks, showing a substantial reduction in gasoline stocks on hand. Nevertheless, the industry remained unsettled. The Export Petroleum association withdrew its price schedule, leaving the way open for price cutting wars in the foreign markets. Numerous mergers which have been expected in the industry appeared to have been abandoned pending more normal conditions. The projected Prarie-Sinclair deal was said to be "off."

The seasonal pickup in motor manufacturing, as new models are brought into production in advance of the January automobile shows, was reported from several plans. Most of the larger producers also report that dealer stocks have been drastically reduced, and some said that dealer inquiry is more active.

The Annalist, monthly index of business activity, as reported in preliminary form for October, recorded no other new low for the decline, but it was notable that the index for textiles alone maintained the improvement of September, and bituminous coal showed a small gain. This index is weighted for seasonal and long term trends.

NEW YORK, Nov. 16.—(AP)—New municipal financing amounting to $27,306,163 and representing financing for 56 communities is scheduled for award this week, the Bond Buyer reports. Offerings last week totaled $65,164,000. The largest single issue this week is $13,692,000 Detroit bonds to be awarded Friday. Other issues above $1,000,000 are Long Beach, N. Y., $1,247,000, also to be placed Friday, and $1,096,442 for Shaker Heights, Ohio, on Monday.

Public offering is to be mode tomorrow of a new issue of $20,000,000 two-three year federal land bank 4 1-2 per cent. bonds at 100 and interest. The bonds will be offered to the public by a country-wide group of the 12 federal land banks, investment houses, institutions and upwards of 1,000 dealers. The banking group is headed by Alex. Brown & Sons.

Nearly every industrial group in the United States curtailed operations in October as compared with September, Electrical World reports in its monthly analysis of reports from 3,800 manufacturing plants using electrical energy for power purposes.

SCIENTISTS FIND KEY TO HEREDITY IN CHROMOSOMES

PASADENA, Calif. (AP)—In chromosomes scientits have found the keys to heredity and sex and have produced and explained many new and strange animal form in laboratories.

Chormosomes are microscopical bodies in each living cell that determine its hereditary characters.

"But except in restricted fields," says Dr. Calvin B. Bridges of the California Institute of Technology, "the prospect is not bright for success in the utilization of chromosome aberrations for the improvement of animal forms or the control of their sex to accord with the desires of mankind.

"The direct usefulness of these laboratory creations is to throw light on the machinery of heredity, and especially its control through the genes which form the chromosomes.

"Geneticists can sometimes make a desired variety of animal through a breeding process that takes advantage of one of the various aberrations. But most of the new animal types are weaklings or are unable to reproduce."

USE OF WRONG HAND MAY CAUSE STUTTER

LOS ANGELES, (AP)—Stuttering probably is most often caused by the victim using his right hand when he really is left-handed, or vice-versa.

This is the theory held by Dr. Milton Metfessel, professor of psychology in the University of Southern California.

It may work with either hand. A naturally right-handed person may be using his left, or vice versa. In either case a conflict is caused in the brain resulting in speech disorders, he says.

Too many men speak twice before they think.

CHIMNEY FIRE CALLS OUT WESTERLY DEPARTMENT

(Special to The Bulletin)

WESTERLY, Nov. 16—A chimney fire in the house of Mrs. Rose Gencarelli, widow of Antonio Gencarelli, at 150 Central Park, at 12:15 Sunday caused a telephone call to be sent to Westerly fire headquarters building on Union street. The motor pumper with Fire Chief Robert Bonner, assistant engineers, George A. McKenzie, Columbus Pasetti and large force of firemen responded. Ladders were erected at the rear of the two and a half story wooden frame house and a line of hose from the booster tank taken up the ladder and the contents poured into the chimney and the fire extinguished. The truck and firemen returned to the Union street station shortly before 1 p. m.

Thomas Rawley of Providence, assistant superintendent of the Providence division of the New Haven railroad was in Westerly on Saturday and early Sunday morning. Observing the many automobiles parked on the driveways leading to the Westerly waiting station and about the station grounds of the railroad company (while their owners, drivers and occupants attended Westerly theatres or completed their shopping at Westerly retail stores on Saturday night) he remarked that there were undoubtedly many people awaiting the arrival of passengers or prospective passengers awaiting the departure of New Haven railroad trains! Very early Sunday morning Superintendent Rawley, who remained at a hotel over night, took the work train for which a locomotive was sent from Midway, to Mystic, where a large force of railroad workers were engaged in the various operations of replacing and re-laying railroad tracks.

With nearly fifty club member players signed up the annual Intra-club bridge whist tournament of the Westerly Square and Compass Club, No. 178, National League of Masonic clubs, John P. Oppy, president, will begin next Thursday evening, in the club rooms in the Potter-Langworthy block on High street. Refreshments will be served during the evenings of the weekly club play.

Officers of Westerly grange, at Grange hall, Avondale, R. I., will confer the third and fourth degrees on a class of candidates Tuesday evening. They have been fortunate in securing the North Stonington degree team to do this work.

A special communication with official visitation will be held by Franklin lodge, No. 20, F. and A. M., of Westerly, Fred G. Kennedy, W. M., on next Friday evening in Masonic hall. The master mason degree will be exemplified by the lodge officers.

Most Worshipful Henry S. See, of Providence, R. I., and a past master of Mount Vernon lodge, No. 4, F. and A. M., grand master of masons in the state of Rhode Island, will be present to make his official visit accompanied by Worshipful Grand Marshal Charles R. Manchester, also a past master of Mount Vernon lodge. S. C. Damon of Rhode Island State college, Kingston, R. I., who has acted as chaplain in other lodge visitations will also be present in that capacity and deliver the charge. A special collation will follow the lodge meeting in the armory banquet hall of Narragansett Commandery, No. 27, K. T., adjoining the lodge rooms.

ELM CITY TRUCKMEN FAVORITES IN NOANK

Mike DeLong, Mickey by the truck drivers, hails from New Haven, is driving a truck for the new road which is being built. He sure can handle the wheel and if Mickey cannot get in places with a truck nobody can. He learned when only 13, in the Elm city. His pals kid him during the day but he will laugh and they cannot get his goat, always has a smile for those that know him. Recently, on the truck, the motor stopped and Mickey did not know what the matter was, looking from one end to the other. But no use, Truck No. 4 would not go; that seemed a good joke for his pals. For over two hours he kept working on his truck, whistling away. Fatty Scott saw that he would never fix it by whistling. When the noon whistle blew for the working men to put on the feedbag Mickey still was hard at it. His brother truckmen came over and wanted to give him a hand. One fellow heard a noise under the timer and looked and found it was a mud-turtle that had seven colors on his shell. That was the trouble with the motor of the truck. Every one had a good laugh. But Mickey said: "That is nothing! One time when Fatty Scott was driving his Henrietta truck something went wrong with the motor. Fatty worked almost four hours. He was sweating—drops big as horse chestnuts—were falling to the ground and from under some part of the engine a green leap frog hopped into Fatty's pocket. That was what was the matter with Fatty's truck."

The three ruck drivers are well liked in the village and have made many friends. A farewell party is being planned to send the Elm City fellows back home, with some cause to remember the village by the sea. The committee is Amos, Axe-handy Dave, Long-Jaw Peter Stratch. It will be a corn beef shower, known as Dinty Moore special. Claw hammer coats and 10-gal. hats will be the evening dress and only men are allowed. It will be held at the Sardine club hall on Terrance avenue, also the gas station. The trio, Pat, Jake and Allie will sing and the Sardine band will play for the evening. Acting Mayor Charles Ellis will make the farewell speech to the truck drivers from New Haven. Young Ellis is about as high as a fireman's lantern and is Connecticut's smallest fireman. He has won cups at different conventions at Savin Rock and other places, and now the acting mayor of this fishing village is wearing an Al Smith iron hat; it is not brown but black. He sure gets kidded about his iron hat, but takes it as a joke. The regular mayor, Walter Willis, is on a vacation for four weeks—went up to the Maine woods after deer, so our smallest fireman is looking out for the town's affairs at the city hall. If you have any aches or pains when the farewell party is on, rub them away, put the cat out early. Don't miss this big time for the three truck drivers that can make a truck talk. Come and hear them tell about their early life spent in and around New Haven.

LEGION POST PLEDGED TO AID NEW COMMANDER

The American Legion held a meeting recently in the rooms of Harrison Morton Ward post on East Main street. Fourteen Legionnaires were sitting around the room when Past Commander Ernest B. Franchet with his gold rim glasses on, installed the officers for the coming year. Commander Edward Morgan was in the chair, taking the place of Past Commander John F. Morrison, who held the office for two years and did good work with the aid of his brother Legionnaires. The fishing village has a nice post in which the members work hard to be up with the other posts throughout the state. Before leaving the chair the last time Past Commander J. Morrison thanked all his pals for sticking by him for two years, to make the post a success. He said he would do all he could in every way to help out the new commander, Morgan, while he is in the chair. "It is a small town," he said, "and why not every one help out and make this a banner year? The American Legion is strong and every year getting stronger and when our next meeting comes around I will give an oyster stew with all the things to go with it. I thank you again." He received a great hand from the ex-sailors and soldiers for his talk.

The new commander, Ed Morgan took his place and Adjutant Fred Rafuse read the minutes of the last meeting. It was voted to attend the dedication of the war memorial for the Stonington men who served in the World war and John W. Harvey post in Stonington Armistice day morning where the people saw the ex-sailors and soldiers in line once more, swinging their arms instead of having a gun over their shoulders like in France, ever to pay respect to that war memorial, with a gold star in front of each name, meaning that the name is that of someone sleeping somewhere in France, never to return. Before leaving for Stonington, two war vets had answered the last bugle call—E. Mosher and Harrison Morton Ward in whose honor the post is named. After services were held at their graves by the Legion at the 11th hour there was one minute of silence with all eyes toward the west. For those who died on the water flowers were thrown overboard.

Treasurer L. L. Smith read this year's report showing that the tin box has a few dollars ahead. For the good of the Legion a committee was named to help with the Red Cross; also an entertainment committee of three was named—John Morrison, Raymond Fowler and Neil Morrison. Then it was voted to close the meeting, as the sergeant-at-arms marched out with colors. A floating island supper was served by Commander Ed Morgan and Stretch Morrison, with coffee. Afterward as the smoke rings were floating around the room from the old gold, war stories were told by several. It was asked: "Where were you on Nov. 11th" and that will stick with all the Legionnaires for all time, when that sheet of paper was signed to stop the war; it never will be forgotten. All over the world parades were held; women and men were crying when the great news came to this side of the ocean, in God's country known as the United States.

Commander Edward Morgan made a speech and said he will fill his new office the best he can and will work hard for the Legion and Harrison Morton Ward post. It is up to us Legionnaires to lend a hand and make 1920-1931 a banner year. The American Legion is all over the world where ex-service men gather once a month to meet their buddies.

Commander Morgan was one of the unlucky ones not to go over to France, but he did his stuff in the navy and loves the water; also I believe he could go to sea on a swordfish's back. Let's work together and help Commander Morgan have a banner year—and make Post No. 115 known all over Connecticut. Also get new members, and see if a membership drive cannot be held so as to get all the Noank sons in the Legion. For 25 minutes Commander Morgan told about his navy life. He is heart and soul in the Legion in the fishing village, so let us all turn out and give him a helping hand.

Following the hymn, Somebody Cares, Mrs. Critchlow gave an interesting review of two chapters of the Mission Study book, Trailing the Conquistadores, by Samuel Guy Inman. The program closed with the reading of Temperance News clippings by the temperance secretary, Mrs. Dudley C. Perkins. New Hockey Pilot

Eddie Gerraud, new manager of the New York Americans, pro hockey team, is training his squad at Galt, Ontario, Canada.

A little black monkey leaped the fence about a crowded miniature golf course at Kansas City and added himself to the hazards. For an hour he put variety into the game by grabbing well-aimed shots and pitching them into the rough. When two policemen hurried up he scampered away.

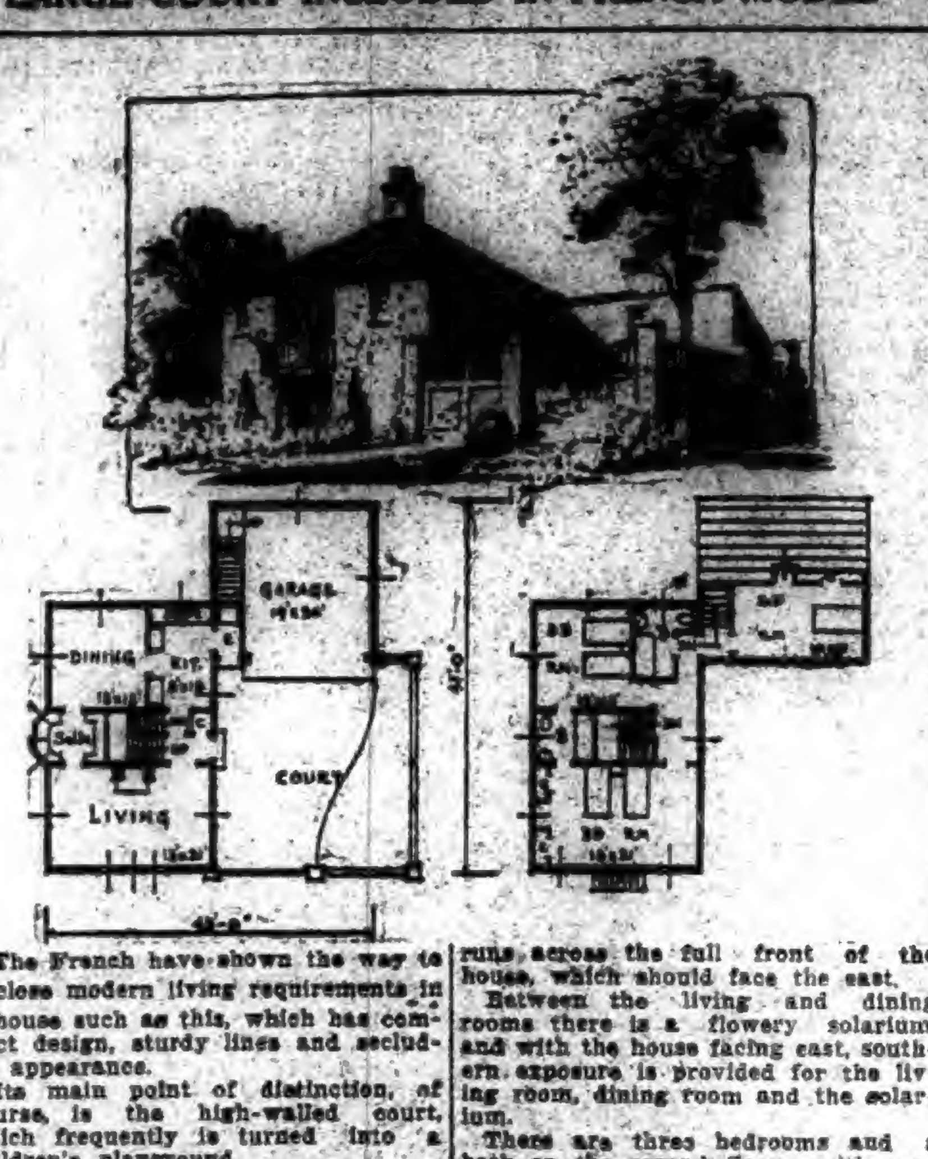
LARGE COURT INCLUDED IN FRENCH MODEL



The French have shown the way to enclose modern living requirements in a house such as this, which has compact design, sturdy lines and secluded appearance.

Its main point of distinction, of course, is the high-walled court, which frequently is turned into a children's playground.

The exterior is of variegated red brick, with the white shutters and window trim. There is an iron balcony outside the living room windows, a brick chimney with red chimney pots. Gutters and downspouts of greenish copper, and the garage gate and doors in white.

All rooms, large in size, have cross-ventilation. The master's bedroom runs across the full front of the house, which should face the east.

Between the living and dining rooms there is a flowery solarium, and with the house facing east, southern exposure is provided for the living room, dining room and the solarium.

There are three bedrooms and a bath on the second floor, with one bedroom over the garage.

A lot 60 by 150 feet would be suitable, thus leaving space in the rear for a garden.

Because of the straightforward type of construction, this house may be built in any part of the country with equal success, and construction expense is estimated between $10,000 and $12,000.

SALT RECOMMENDED FOR CLEANING CHIMNEY

A common and efficient method of cleaning a chimney is to sweep it with a properly weighed bundle of rags or a brush attached to rope and worked from the top.

Other methods of cleaning chimneys recommended as simple and efficient are the burning of salt and scrap zinc. The United States fuel administration strongly advocates the use of salt. The fire should be put in good condition with a substantial body of hot fuel. Well dried common salt is then scattered over the incandescent fuel in quantity depending upon the size of the furnace. For a household furnace a pound at a time is ample. The dampers should be kept open to maintain the furnace temperature until the fumes entirely disappear. This usually takes about half an hour. The soot is disintegrated by the action of the salt fumes.

Scrap zinc thrown on a hot fire is said to remove soot also by disintegration.

SELDOM SEEN SPOTS IN HOME NEED PAINT

Many of the most inconspicuous places about the house are as much in need of paint protection as the more prominent features. Neglected spots often prove costly in the long run, although proper painting would have prevented all sorts of repairs. Back steps, for example, are often neglected because of their obscure location, yet they are subjected to harder wear than the front steps. The butcher, the baker, the ice cream and other trades people are not as light steppers as those who arrive leisurely at the front door.

Cellar steps and doors are other woodwork features that demand careful and frequent painting if they are to endure. While paint protects these surfaces from rough usage, it also causes them to fit more gracefully into the setting and, in the case of steps, to prevent accidents.

In remodeling or building, the horse of the stair treads should be painted as well as the under sides, since these spots cannot be reached with the paint brush when the stairs are in place. Tin valleys, gutters, drain pipes and interior metal surfaces that are often overlooked should be kept in condition with paint.

FUTURE LOOKS PROMISING

Year-around automatic air conditioning will be a commonplace in the better class of homes in less than 10 years, is the prediction of heating and ventilating engineers. Cooling, purifying and humidifying or dehydrating of air—all these will be standard equipment with the up-to-date radiator heating system of the future.

CHOICE OF ANDIRONS QUITE IMPORTANT

It wouldn't be a bad idea to seek expert advice when one is contemplating the purchase of a set of andirons. There is a wide variety from which to choose and it ought to be possible for everyone to secure exactly what one's fireplace and living room surroundings require. In spite of this wide choice, however, any quantity of people, whether they know it or not, are using andirons which are entirely foreign to their surroundings. Usually this is due to the fact that andirons, when seen in a store, look unusual and therefore attractive; as a result of which they are purchased and duly installed without question as to their fitness.

A room's furnishings and the nature of the room itself should dictate the type of andirons to be used. The architecture of the fireplace and its mantel also have a whole lot to do with one's choice. Some require something almost severely plain. Others will take andirons which are quite ornate. But ornate ones fit particular conditions and unless they are the right conditions they stand out as obviously unsuitable. Every public library of any pretentions has books on this as well as other subjects on home furnishings. It is quite possible to find rooms pictured which are quite if not exactly similar to one's own. Note what type of andirons are being used and the chances are better than even that the choice will prove the correct one.

RUN A WIRE FENCE THROUGH THE HEDGE

A low wire or iron fence run inside a hedge is an excellent thing to discourage youngsters, milkmen, garbage collectors and others from taking those short cuts from house to house which wreak such havoc with lawns and shrubbery. It is somewhat difficult, to be sure, to install such a wire or iron fence once a hedge is in place, but if one is planting a hedge it is by all odds the wisest course to pursue, especially when it is to be set out on the boundary lines.

Even a foot-high fence has a considerable effect in discouraging people from walking through or over hedges in going from one yard to another. The fact that it is known to be there acts as a "mental hazard," and as a result the average milkman or garbage collector will walk around and use the properly appointed walk rather than step over or through a hedge whose supporting fence virtually cautions one to "keep off!" The presence of such a fence serves as announcement that the owner frowns upon such short cuts and this in itself has its effects, even on carefree youngsters who always are on the lookout for a step-saving short cut.

RIGHT OR WRONG CASEMENT WINDOWS

Steel casement windows, if they are properly constructed and as properly installed, usually prove quite satisfactory. In many ways they beat the old wooden window frame and sash, but only when the materials and workmanship are all that they should be. Some metal casements give a heap of trouble by permitting a dismayingly large volume of cold air to seep in around them and occasionally by failing to withstand a driving rain. Such trouble may, of course, be due to faulty installation, but occasionally the fault is with the casement itself.

As in all other equipment entering into home construction, it is wise to check up on all such products. It is not the most difficult thing in the world to find a few people who have had casement windows installed in their homes. Ask their opinions and find out how they have fared. Most of them are perfectly willing to tell the truth even if theirs should be the exceptional cases where the casements have proved to be a "bust" rather than a boon. Several makers of casement windows have facts to back their claims that they never have received a complaint. These are the windows to use. Merely because some dealer advertises a type of window which costs less than the ordinary as thoroughly weather-proof does not mean, necessarily, that he is telling the whole truth. Better ask the man who has them just what kind he used.

OCTOBER SURVEY FINDS BUILDING PERMITS RISING

Building permits issued by towns and cities in Connecticut during the month of October showed a fairly substantial increase in value over those issued in October, although the state's total for the month was far below the figure of October, 1929. According to the monthly survey conducted through the office of E. L. Taylor, industrial commissioner of the New Haven railroad among twenty-three communities along the railroad's rights of way, the increase over September among those communities amounted to slightly more than $600,000.

Participating in this gain were eleven of the twenty-three towns and cities included in the survey. They were Derby, Greenwich, Hartford, Middletown, New Haven, New London, Norwich, Wallingford, Waterbury, West Hartford and West Haven. Only seven communities, however, enjoyed building permit gains over their valuation of October, 1929. These were Bridgeport, Middletown, New London, Stratford, West Haven and Willimantic.

West Hartford led the list for October with permits valued at $665,401, while New Haven and Greenwich were in second and third place respectively.

Comparative figures for October, 1930, and for October, 1929, are reported in the railroad survey as follows:

MODERNIZING OLD HOUSE IS NOT A GAMBLE

Writing of his manifold troubles in home building a writer in a well-known national magazine has a bit to say about remodeling old houses in accordance with the home modernizing movement: "Stay away from remodeling old houses," his warning reads, "because of possible flaws in frames, foundations and inability of laymen to visualize a completely renewed structure."

That's peculiar advice coming from one who, according to his own testimony, has erected 21 houses "and still sees mistakes." Certainly this writer has run across no home modernizer who has discovered the presence of faulty frames and foundations, nor has he found one whose finished product does not resemble the finished home he had in mind when he set out on his task of modernizing.

When a person purchases an old house with the idea of modernizing it, the first thing he does is to examine the house from sills to ridgepole. He should do it, in fact, before purchasing the house. Better still, he should have an experienced and trustworthy builder do it for him; while at the same time, if he is wise, he will have an architect do the same thing, then have the latter give him a definite picture of how the modernized home is going to look after the work is finished. There is no particular gamble to modernizing provided one goes about it in a sensible way. It would be a gamble if one were to select an old house, give it merely a casual inspection and then trust to luck that everything is as it should be. Quite frequently it is necessary to strengthen the foundations or underpining, while here and there beams may have to be replaced or strengthened. But these things can be discovered without having to tear the house apart, and, once discovered, they can be remedied.

There are, of course, some houses which are beyond saving and the wise man will keep clear of them. Occasionally someone buys one, puts a carpenter to work, only to find, after the work is done, that there were numerous things which should have been done while the work of modernizing was going on. But these cases are exceptions. The average man or woman is not rash enough to take such things on faith. They need to be shown and as a general rule they are shown, before they sink a dollar in fixing up an old place or even in its purchase.

As for inability "to visualize a completely renewed structure," this, too, sounds extravagant. Any extensive modernizing program should be carried out in accordance with an architect's plans and specifications and the man and woman who commissions an architect to prepare such modernizing plans naturally expects that the architect will provide an accurate sketch of how the house will look when completed. In fact, the average person can form a fairly accurate picture even without the aid of an architect's sketch. Nor is any plan so original that one cannot, somewhere, find a house built or modernized along the same or similar lines.

Modernizing old houses remains and will remain a practical plan and a sound theory, provided always that preliminary investigation shows the structure to be worthy of such efforts. If there are structural weaknesses they never could be so hidden as to escape the experienced eyes of builder and architect and these same experts are qualified to determine after examination whether the fault can be corrected or is beyond correction. If such faults can be corrected without entailing prohibitive costs, and if the house otherwise is sound and capable of being rendered weatherproof, there seems to be no sound reason why a modernizing program should not be undertaken. It narrows down, then, to the question of cost. If it is possible to modernize at a cost less than that entailed in erecting an entirely new house then one is thoroughly justified in going ahead with confidence that the results will be all that they expected.

BLOOD-SMEARED CAR AND VEST MYSTIFY NEW LONDON POLICE

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Nov. 16—The police tonight are seeking the whereabouts of a young man who stole an automobile owned by Frank Miller, of Waterbury. It is believed that when the thief is apprehended it will be shown that he is seriously injured, for the auto, which was found abandoned after it had been wrecked, was besmeared with blood. A vest found in the car was saturated with blood, showing that the wearer of the garment bled profusely before the vest was removed from the body and left in the car when the machine was abandoned. The identity of the owner of the vest has been ascertained by the detective bureau, but in spite of the efforts of Detective Sergeants John Cavanaugh and Nelson Smith the man sought could not be found.

Miller's auto was driven to the garage of the Thompson Motor Co., Bank street, Saturday for storage. The Oakland coupe, was taken from the garage late Saturday night and by a person who had a key to the entrance, for the building was not forced. A joy ride in which undoubtedly the thief participated in for at 9 o'clock this morning Patrolman William Manice observed the car, damaged and parked on Washington street, near Brewer street. An examination of the interior revealed the blood stains and Manice made a report of his finding at police headquarters. After the car had been inspected by Sergeant Cavanaugh and Smith and the vest taken to headquarters the car was taken to a garage. The search for the driver of the auto was started and during the day the officers proved the identity of the owner of the vest, but he could not be located, for he was not at his home and neither had he put in an appearance at his place of employment. The owner of the vest is not a patient at any of the hospitals and is believed to be occupying a room in one of the many lodging houses in the central part of the city and under the care of a physician for the great quantity of blood stains indicated that the thief must have lost blood of such an amount as to have rendered medical treatment mandatory, also must have suffered much from weakness because of the loss of the blood.

Willis Geer, 39 Franklin street, arrested last night by Patrolman Clyde Murphy charged with violation of the parking laws, was released with a warning to heed to rules in the future.

An automobile driven by Philip G. Butleman, 293 Williams street, hit an electric light pole, corner of Broad and Hempstead streets, this afternoon at 5.15 o'clock. The globe was demolished. Butleman gave as an excuse for hitting the pole that the lights were not illumined.

Martin Sullivan, of Hartford, formerly of this city, brother of Lieutenant of Police James C. Sullivan, is a patient at a New Haven hospital, where an X-ray picture will be taken Monday in an effort to determine the cause of an affection of the spine which trouble has crippled Mr. Sullivan.

Stole From Parked Cars

With the arrest last night of six New London youths, four of them minors, charged with a series of thefts in Salem, it is believed that the gang which has been stealing from automobiles parked at dance halls has been broken up, at least temporarily. The youths have admitted stealing robes and overcoats and to having brought the loot to this city, where it was hidden, only to have it again stolen when a return trip for it was made. The boys were arrested yesterday afternoon by Detective Sergeant John Cavanaugh on suspicion of having knowledge of robberies here lately. When the boys were questioned it was revealed that they had made it a practice of going to the dance halls in this vicinity and stealing whatever they could find in the parked cars. Two of the boys, William Grippo and Anthony Marnette were taken to Salem by Sergeant Heinold and Officer Babcock, of Westbrook state police, and admitted to bail. The other youths were given into the custody of their parents and will be tried in the juvenile court during the coming week.

Fail to Locate Girl

The state police received information today that Madeline Lincoln, 15, of Waterford, who disappeared from her home last Friday and for whom a search has been in progress, was residing with a family on Main street in the vicinity of Crystal avenue. The information was given the New London police, but Automobile Patrol Officer Elwood Bailey was unable to find the girl, neither did he find the family with whom the girl was said to have been since she disappeared from home.

WM. TREAT, OF NIANTIC, BROUGHT FROM BRIDGEPORT

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Nov. 16—William Treat, about 27, formerly of New London, now of Niantic, was arrested in Bridgeport Saturday at the request of the state police, who hold a warrant charging Treat with at least three robberies in Niantic. He was returned to Niantic this evening and when given a hearing in the justice court was bound over to the next term of the superior court. In default of a surety on his bond, Treat was committed to jail.

Treat about ten weeks ago forced entrance to Manwaring's pharmacy, Dickinson's garage and Heflin Bros' plumbing shop, Niantic. After a series of robberies, Treat left Niantic, about the time that suspicion was directed toward him as being the thief. He traveled in the south and southwestern states several weeks and recently went to Bridgeport, where he obtained lodging at 106 James street. Last week the state police obtained information that Treat was residing in Bridgeport and a request was made of the police of that city to arrest him. This was done Saturday and this afternoon an officer from the Groton barracks went to Bridgeport. Treat was taken to the barracks and after being grilled an hour or more he confessed to having robbed the three Niantic business houses.

Treat, about two years ago, was arrested together with George Findlay on an embezzlement charge, but he escaped being penalized, being given suspension of judgment, but Findlay was sentenced to state prison. Findlay was manager of a washing machine store and Treat was employed by him as a salesman.

Bearers From Yacht's Crew

Members of the crew of the steam yacht Narada, of which Charles Reilly, of 11 Perry street, was assistant engineer, will act as bearers when the funeral is held tomorrow morning at St. Joseph's church. The body will be taken to Northport, L. I., the birthplace of Mr. Reilly, for burial.

Theft From Car

George W. Mitchell, salesman, residing at 219 Connecticut avenue, reported to the police tonight that while his automobile was parked in front of his home a thief went to the car and stole a sample case, which contained a large quantity of crackers. The theft, it is believed, was committed by one or more boys.

Tea For College Guests

The Catholic professors and students of Connecticut college were guests at tea of the Diocesan Bureau of Social Service at the bureau headquarters in Jay street this afternoon. The committee in charge was Mrs. H. H. Wolf, Mrs. John Murnane, Miss Lorette Murnane and Miss Winifred McGuire. Rev. Timothy M. Crowley, L.L. D., pastor of St. Mary's Star of the Sea church, gave an address of welcome to the group.

Head Cut In Fall

Henry Healy, a former meat cutter residing at 104 Potter street, went to police headquarters at 1 o'clock this morning and was suffering from a bad laceration of the scalp, sustained by falling in the vicinity of North Bank and John streets. Healy was given first aid by officers, but when the flow of blood could not be stopped the man was taken to Lawrence Memorial hospital. Three stitches were necessary to close wound. The dressing concluded, Healy was taken to his home.

Automobile Patrol Officer Clarence Martin discovered the entrance to the cellar of the Cornwell pharmacy, corner of Montauk and Willetts avenues, open early today and was unable to secure the door.

Henry Appleton, 225 Pequot avenue, was arrested last night by Patrolman Clyde Murphy, charged with parking on Pearl street, which is restricted to all parking. Appleton was released with a warning to observe the regulations hereafter.

Skip From Reform School

The New London police this afternoon were requested to be on the look out for two youths who had escaped from the State Reform School for Boys at Meriden. One is Michael Zigmund, 15, five feet in height, weighs about 94 pounds, has light hair and wore a civilian brown suit of clothes. The other boy is Victor Bednarczyk, 15, about five feet in height, weighs about 100 pounds. The latter's home is in New Haven.

Slashed Wife's Clothing

Ignatz Kalka, 55, residing at 51 Brooks street, was arrested today, charged with breach of the peace, upon complaint of his wife. He was released upon his own recognizance and will be in court Monday. Kalka and his wife continually engage in quarrels and today when a brawl was precipitated, Kalka's anger resulted in his seizing a pair of scissors and with them he mutilated the clothing of Mrs. Kalka. The latter made complaint to the police and Kalka was arrested by Sergeant Samuel Hick and Patrolman Dennis Murphy.

Robert Patterson was arrested this afternoon charged with breach of the peace and intoxication. He was locked up and will be in court Monday. Patterson went to the residence of Mrs. May Oddo Gammons, 3 Fay street, where he engaged in a quarrel with the woman. When Patterson's conduct became such as to arouse the neighborhood, Mrs. Gammons made complaint to the police and Patterson was taken into custody by Sergeant Samuel Hick and Automobile Patrol Officer Thomas Cavanaugh.

Peter Mariana, residing at Goshen Point, Waterford, and the owner of the property, 30 Montauk avenue, made complaint to Patrolman Louis Wheeler this afternoon that a boxwood tree, valued at $10, had been taken from the earth in front of the residence. The theft, Mariana said, had been committed within 10 days, but was not discovered until today.

Still Search For Body

Men on Fishers Island today renewed their efforts to recover the body of Anthony Jacobson, former Fishers Island lobsterman, drowned near North Hills fishing grounds a week ago Saturday and receive the reward of $3,000 offered by residents of Fishers Island. The waters of Fishers Island and Long Island sound were searched from early morning until late this afternoon, for the body should have come to the water's surface yesterday or today.

SPEED LAUNCH HIGHSTRUNG ADDED TO CORNELL'S LIST

NEW LONDON, Nov. 16. — The speed launch Highstrung, owned in New York and seized as a rum-runner off this port early Saturday by the crew of a United States coast guard patrol boat, under gunfire, was added to Chief Boatswain Cornell's list of captive boats. Cornell was in charge of the patrol boat, which opened fire on the launches Black Duck and Fleur de Lis off Narragansett bay a year ago and at which time three members of the crew of the Black Duck were killed. The gunfire on the Highstrung resulted in the rum-runner being halted, as she was headed for Fishers Island with a cargo of about 400 cases of liquor, for the one-pounder smashed the steering wheel, making the capture of the boat and her crew an easy matter.

SOUP KITCHEN OPENED BY THE SALVATION ARMY

The Salvation Army has established a soup kitchen at its quarters, 43 Main street, the inauguration of the feeding of unemployed and unfortunates being the first instance of such dispensing of foodstuffs by the army since it was started in New London. Every day, including Sundays, from now until employment conditions improve, members of the army will serve soup and bread to applicants. Most of those seeking the soup are not residents of New London, but are among the floating population, who have been employed in New London and vicinity, but who are now unemployed, or the many who have come to this city seeking work. Today, a large number of men applied and received their rations at the army headquarters.

Building, Industry Slow

At the last meeting of the city council 13 building applications were approved, but of this number but three petitions were received for the erection of buildings. One of these, which is intended to be erected on the boardwalk at Ocean Beach, is for six apartments and will provide employment for many when work once begins. Most of the applications were for garages, additions to buildings, or verandas. However, if even this work was started many of the carpenters and laborers now out of work would be provided with employment indefinitely.

Patrolman Dennis Cavanaugh started on his annual vacation of two weeks Saturday. Mr. and Mrs. Cavanaugh have gone to Quebec, Can., where they will remain 10 days.

Patrolman Ernest. Opperman has resumed duty, after his annual vacation of a fortnight.

NEW YORK REVIEWER LAUDS "THE GOLDEN ROOF"

There has been a number of beautiful reviews of the latest book by Margaret Fuller, of Norwich, "The Golden Roof," but none more beautiful or complimentary than the following, from the New York city Catholic News. Under the heading "Mothers and Sons" the clear-sighted reviewer writes:

The word romance has fallen into evil repute, but it is our modest ambition to coin one of these days a substitute that shall signify, as that word did for centuries, the idea of actuality suffused by beauty. Some such word is needed to describe "The Golden Roof" by Margaret Fuller, the scene of which is laid in France, although the story is mainly that of Nikole Hensen, a young woman of Danish birth, who nevertheless is wholly devoid of Scandinavian gloom.

On the contrary she has a radiant gayety of mind, a quick wit, a ready tongue, a gallant heart, and courage, stupendous courage. With a truly Valkyrie-like valor, she is as real as bread and butter. She is one whose feet take firm hold of the ground on which she walks although it is with so light a step, and whose hands take hold of life. She is one of the givers of the world, whose lives, for all their giving, are rich and full.

Life and Beauty

Into Nikole's life come many sorrows, but never one that is greater than she; into it comes happiness as well, because she is single-hearted about that. Her story is therefore a story of wedded love, cut short by death, and a story of maternal devotion fulfilled in a noble way. Apart from Nikole the book is worth reading for the sake of that son, Victor, a wholly enchanting person who, despite his Danish Lutheran parentage, by some inexplicable miracle that puzzles while it delights Nikole, is Parisian and Catholic, in childhood mistaking a lamp-post for a crucifix and "Petit Jesus"; in young manhood declaring "The King to whom I kneel has His own Ambassador."

The story opens on the island of Moen in the Baltic Sea, where it is said (and this may in part explain Nikole): "Righteousness is a sea to one who has bathed in it in youth," but mostly we are shown France, especially Paris,—the [illegible] Latin Quarter, but from an unfamiliar angle; Paris shivering in unaccustomed cold, Paris radiant amid the blooms of spring; a provincial town and the chestnut-guarded avenues of an old estate; then Paris again, in which Nikole has erected for herself and Victor, a golden roof, "a roof of love."

Do not think there are no shadows in the picture, no glimpses of evil, no hint of mud, that in order to draw it it was necessary to idealize either life or human nature. It was only necessary that one clear-visioned woman should hold fast an ideal. For after all it is possible to recognize the existence of mud without rubbing one's nose in it, and Nikole's way was to trample it under her feet.

Won't Take Seat

Although his presence in Washington would give the Democrats the strength necessary to organize the senate, Gov. Huey P. Long, above, senator-elect from Louisiana, has declared he will not resign as governor until the expiration of his term, two years distant. He says he does not intend to leave Louisiana "to his enemies."

Workmen's Compensation Agreements

Workmen's compensation agreements as follows have been approved by Commissioner A. J. Bailey:

POETRY FOR THE WIDE AWAKES

The Road To Slumberland

What is the road to slumberland and when does the baby go?
The road lies straight through mother's arms when the sun is sinking low.

He goes by the drowsy land of nod to the music of lullaby,
When all wee lambs are safe in the fold, under the evening sky.

A soft little nightgown clean and white; a face washed sweet and fair;
A mother brushing the tangles out of the silken, golden hair.

Two little tired, satiny feet, from shoe and stocking free;
Two little palms together clasped at the mother's patient knee.

Some baby words that are drowsily lisped to the tender Shepherd's ear;
And a kiss that only a mother can place on the brow of her baby dear.

A little round head that nestles at last close to the mother's breast,
And then the lullaby soft and low, singing the song of rest.

And closer and closer the blue-veined lids are hiding the baby eyes.
As over the road to slumberland the dear little traveler hies.

For this is the way, through mother's arms, all little babies go
To the beautiful city of slumberland when the sun is sinking low.

—Mary Dow Brine.

Suppose!

Suppose, my little lady,
  Your doll should break her head,
Could you make it whole by crying
  Till your eyes and nose were red?
And wouldn't it be pleasanter
  To treat it as a joke;
And say you're glad 'twas dolly's
  And not you head that broke?

Suppose you're dressed for walking,
  And the rain comes pouring down,
Will it clear off any sooner
  Because you scold and frown?
And wouldn't it be nicer
  For you to smile than pout,
And so make sunshine in the house
  When there is none without?

Suppose your task, my little man,
  Is very hard to get,
Will it make it any easier,
  For you to sit and fret?
And wouldn't it be wiser
  Than waiting like a dunce,
To get to work in earnest,
  And learn the thing at once?

Suppose that some boys have a horse,
  And some a coach and pair,
Will it tire you less while walking
  To say, "It isn't fair?"
And wouldn't it be nobler
  To keep your temper sweet,
And in your heart be thankful
  And to walk upon your feet?

Suppose the world don't please you,
  Nor the way some people do.
Do you think the whole creation
  Will be altered just for you?
And isn't it, my boy or girl,
  The wisest, bravest plan,
Whatever comes, or doesn't come,
  To do the best you can?.

—By Phoebe Cary.

UNCLE JED'S TALK TO THE WIDE AWAKES

Contrary to general belief, Jack Frost does not cause the leaves to turn color in the fall. Observation has shown that some of the very brilliant red and yellow tints of the leaves come before the first frost makes its appearance. The change in color from green to yellow, pink, red and other shades, is due to chemical processes in the trees themselves.

In the warm months the tiny cells in the leaves provide plant food for the leaves. Sunlight helps in the production of chlorophyll, which gives the leaves their green color. Plant food is produced through a combination of carbon, secured from the carbonic acid gas, taken by the leaves from the air, with oxygen, hydrogen, and other minerals from the water absorbed by the tree roots.

The manufacture of sugar ceases in the fall, because the vitality of the leaves is lessened by lower temperature, less sunlight, and changes in the condition of the soil. The chlorophyll is then broken up into the various substances of which it was made, and any sugar left is absorbed in the tree itself where it is stored until spring.

There is nothing remaining in the cells of the leaves but a watery substance which gives the familar yellow coloring in the leaves in the fall. Quite often there is still sugar left in the leaves, and resulting chemical combinations produce many colored tints from the brilliant red to the dull red browns.

LETTERS WRITTEN BY WIDE AWAKES

Roger Williams

Dear Uncle Jed: Roger Williams was a young man of pure spirit and strong conviction. He had become pastor of a church at Salem (1633). He asserted that no man should have to pay taxes to support any church, nor should be punished by the magistrates for not attending church services. He said they had no right to claim the land on which they lived. Roger Williams said that the land had never been the king's property, when belonged to the Indians. The king had no rights to grant the land to anybody when it didn't belong to him.

The strange way of regarding the property rights alarmed the Puritans. They thought that Roger Williams was a dangerous person so they drove him out of the colony. He sought refuge in the wilderness which is now Rhode Island. Rhode Island was settled in 1636. In Providence there is a park named after Roger Williams.

Two Baby Kittens

Dear Uncle Jed: Last week my mother found two baby kittens in our cellar. Every morning I give them some milk. I try not to forget because I know the babies need the milk because my mother has a baby and when he hasn't anything to drink he is very cranky and cries. I am going to name them Blacky and Spotty because one is black and one is black and white.

A Piece of Canvas.

Dear Uncle Jed: It is a long time since I have written to you and the title of my story is "The Plot That Failed." I was a large piece of canvas lying in the forecastle of a barge ship when a strong, tall, well built man picked me up and carried me to the deck.

The captain made them cut me into a top-sail. As the scissors cut me I would cry, Oh, oh! what will become of me? But the scissors paid no heed.

When the men raised me to my place on the mast, it asked, "What do you went up here?" "If you were in my place I don't think you would like it," I sobbed.

Then what do you think I heard? A tall, lean, unshaven, rough looking pirate saying, "I'm yer leader now and orders is orders. Now don't yer figet thet we's gonna trow thet cap'n ober bord at high noon."

The mutineers were about to capture the captain when cranky Mr. Gale began to blow.

Down fell Miss Mast and poor me. The captain said, "You men get to work and put Miss Mast and Mr. Topsail in their places. So away they went to their work grumbling as they did. Later one of the men confessed that they had planned to kill him. When they reached the port the captain had them arrested. Yours truly,

The Two Dropped Kittens

Dear Uncle Jed: One day my brother heard Buster, our dog, barking. He went over to the dog and saw a kitten backed into the hole in the bank which Buster had dug the day before. The kitten with the fur on her tail puffed out which made it twice as large as usual was spitting and spatting at the dog who continued to bark at it. My brother chased Buster away and went to the house and told my older brother and together they again approached the hole with Buster following close at their heels. The kitten was nowhere to be seen, but Buster quickly picked up its scent and they followed him to a small oak tree where they saw the kitten about half way up. My brother chased Buster away again and reaching up took the half grown kitten into the barn where he put it in a box until he could milk a dish of nice warm milk and feed it to the kitten, and then he let it out of the box. The kitten stayed around the barn all day and my mother fed it while we were in school.

The next day when my father was letting out the cows he saw another kitten. At first he thought it was the same kitten, but on giving it closer inspection he saw that it was a different one entirely. These two kittens were of the same size. The first one was half gray and half white. It had signs of a sore eye and its left front foot bends under its leg when it walks. The other one is mostly gray and had one eye closed. Both kittens have double paws on their front feet.

Buster seems to have adopted the mostly gray kitten. He licks its sore eye and follows it around. We do not want the dog mauling the kitten and when my mother chases it back to the barn Buster whines like a whipped dog because he wants to be with the kitten. Almost everywhere the dog is the cat there too. Buster does not seem to care so much for the other kitten. We hope the kitten's eyes and the paw will get better. We have not yet decided on names for them.

Making a Basket.

Dear Uncle Jed: I hope you enjoy reading my story as I enjoy writing one to you.

Last year my teacher asked my friend and I if we would like to make a basket and we said we would. So she ordered reed and basket tools and we started on our baskets. We wove the bottom and each day we worked on them. When we got them finished we painted them, and the teacher said it was very good for the first time and we gave them to our mothers for Christmas presents. They were very glad to get them and thanked us very much for making them fo rthe presents.

Witch Helped Two Children.

Dear Uncle Jed: I am writing another story hoping you and the Wide-Awake circle will enjoy it.

One day a circus came into town. There was an old witch who lived near and who asked for a job. The manager asked her what she could do. She told him that she could tell fortunes, so she got a job in the circus.

Bob and Mary and their mother went to the circus; Bob and Mary liked it very much.

The next day their mother forbid them to cross the road and see the circus, but they went just the same. That day the circus moved out of town. The manager took Bob and Mary with him. The next day they were crying for their mother. The manager told them to keep still.

The old witch told the children how to get home and gave them some money. She was angry with the manager because he didn't give her her week's pay. She didn't want to go back to the town because she didn't know any other life but circus life. The children took the money and went home. When they got home they told their mother they would never run away again.

Our Cooking Club

Uncle Jed: Our cooking club was started like this. We thought it would be fun to have one, so I asked Mrs. Brown to be our leader, and she said she would. So the first meeting we elected our officers: President, Annie Woron; secretary, Stefany Sledjesky; vice president, Robert Brown; treasurer, Pauline Woron.

We also selected a name for our club. The name is Mansfield City Cooking and Whoopee club. We chose ways of using milk for our project. We have cooked cream tomato soup, cream potato soup, cream spinach soup, cocoa, egg nog, chocolate, cereal in milk, milk toast with cheese sauce, sponge cake, escalloped potatoes, and cream carrots. The next meeting we are going to make desserts, just what we are waiting for.

This is the way we do; one girl sifts the flour while another measures the butter, and we all do something every meeting. Then when we finish cooking we set a table and all eat together what we have made. Then we wash the dishes. One week Robert and I wash them, then the next week two others. Then when we have finished our work we play games and sing. If we belong to this cooking club we shouldn't drink coffee or tea. We are supposed to drink at least a pint of milk a day, go to bed early, and do many other things to keep healthy.

My Trip To New Bedford

Dear Uncle Jed: Last summer I visited New Bedford, and the people I stayed with took me to Colonel Green's estate to see his blimp. I saw it rise up in the air and then come down again. I also went through the old whaling boat and the man explained to us how they used to catch the whales. I enjoyed it very much.

Our Walk

Dear Uncle Jed: I am going to tell you about the walk my friend, my sister, and I took one day. We started about 1.30. We found some lovely red berries and bitter sweet along the roadside. We soon got tired of going along the road, so we climbed over a fence and went in the woods, and pretty soon, we came to a big nut tree. We picked up a cloth bag full of nuts. We kept going until we came to an old foundation of an old house. We looked around and we found a butternut tree. We never had butternuts before, but my friend knew what they were. Boy, those butternuts were good! We then visited an old man's shack in the woods. He was very good to us. He treated us to peaches and watermelons, which he had raised on his small place. We arrived at home at 5 o'clock. My parents had just begun to think we had got lost. But they were glad when they saw what we had brought them, especially the bitter sweet. I hope all the Wide Awakes have such good luck as I did.

My Tame Crows

My Dear Uncle Jed: This time I am going to tell you about my tame crows. Probably you all have seen crows but not tame ones.

Well in the spring father got me some wild crows. Every day I had to dig worms for them for they were very little. They couldn't fly of course. I had three but one died. Soon they learned to fly but couldn't find their food themselves. They never fly away from the house. Jimmie and Sammy are their names. They sleep in the pine tree in the yard. Finally they learned to find their food. They eat, with the chickens, cracked corn, they also eat seeds. If they find anything bright they hide it. Jimmy and Sammy are very playful. You can do anything to them. I love them and should miss them if anything happened to them. I shall write again soon.

"Bud" Is Very Playful

Dear Uncle Jed: This is the first time I have written a letter to the Wide Awake circle. I hope you will enjoy it. I will tell you about my pet dog.

I have a little pet dog. He is the cutest little thing. His fur is white and yellow and his eyes are blue. He is six months old, weighs about three pounds and is only seven inches in height. I call him "Bud." He is very playful.

I have a little baby brother who is 13 months old, and they play together a lot, but some times they fight because when the baby walks around the dog follows him and pulls his socks and makes him fall.

England

Dear Uncle Jed: We have studied about England in school. London is the capital of England, and it is the largest city of the world. Also London has many interesting places and things to see. I think it would be fun to go on a sight-seeing trip to England. Some of the interesting places are the Tower of London, London bridge, Tower bridge, St. Paul's Cathedral and Buckingham and the palace, Manchester in England is noted for cotton goods. This is where we would find large cotton mills. Leeds is a great woolen center. The garden of England is Kent. Newcastle is where we would find large deposits of coal. If I were to go to London, I would visit some of these places.

Only a Dream.

Dear Uncle Jed: One morning about 10 o'clock a lady came after me and took me to a nice big house.

When we got there the lady went up the porch and rang the doorbell.

The lady showed me to my room and told me she would be waiting for me downstairs.

When I came down the lady took me out and showed me around the yard. After she had showed me around she took me to the tennis court and introduced me to two girls who were playing tennis. They asked me to join and I consented. We played tennis for about half an hour when some one came and pushed me. I awoke to find it was all a dream.

My Pet Kitten.

Dear Uncle Jed: As this is my first letter to you I hope you are interested in reading my story. I am going to tell you about my little kitten which I call Peto.

Every night when I get home from school I dress her up in doll clothes. Then I put her in a baby crib, and she lays there on her back just like a baby. Then I prepare some milk for her in a bottle and put a nipple on it and give it to her. She'll take it with her two paws and hold it and drink the milk till she falls asleep.

During the daytime when there is no school I'll dress her up and put a coat and bonnet on her. I'll put her in the doll carriage with her bottle of warm milk and ride her around till she falls asleep. Every morning she sits up on her hind legs and that means that she wants graham crackers. And that's her breakfast.

My Dolls.

Dear Uncle Jed: I have three dolls. One of them I do not like to play with because it is cross eyed.

The other two I like to play with because they are very cute. They have yellow hair, pink dresses and white shoes and socks. One of them is a baby doll with a little hair. The other one is a big doll with more hair.

BURGESS BEDTIME STORY

Whitefoot's Little Joke

You'll find it is a general rule
That folks themselves most often fool.
—Whitefoot the Wood Mouse.

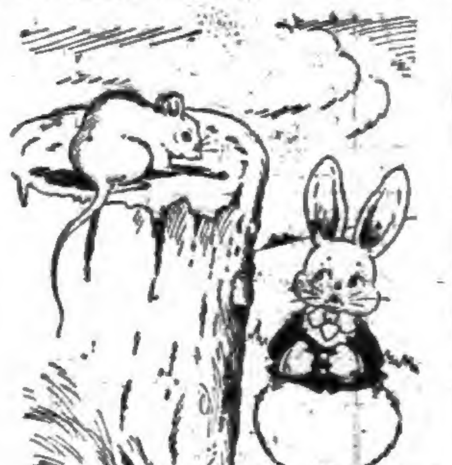
What Whitefoot means is that if you want to fool some one, play a joke on him, all you need to do as a rule is to discover a mistake he has made and then let him keep right on making that mistake. So he fools himself. Peter Rabbit had made a mistake from the very beginning of his efforts to find who was the strange singer in the green forest. Because Peter always associated singing with birds he at once began looking for a feathered singer. It never once entered his funny little head that any one but a bird could possibly have produced that song. This Whitefoot the Wood Mouse discovered at once when Peter told him about the strange song and it brought a twinkle of mischief to Whitefoot's big, soft eyes.

"I'll keep right on letting him look for a feathered singer," said Whitefoot to himself, "and while he looks I'll have a little fun with Peter."

Perhaps you remember that on two occasions when Whitefoot had disappeared for a few minutes Peter had heard that strange song. Each time on his return Whitefoot helped Peter look for the singer and each time the result was the same. It quite upset Peter. To have that singer so near yet be unable to find him, not even a feather to prove that he had been there, was too provoking.

Whitefoot pretended to be as anxious as Peter to find that singer, and kept asking over and over what the song was like. "You'll have to hear it," said Peter. "I just can't tell you what it is like. If you'll just stay here instead of running off every few minutes perhaps you'll hear it."

So Whitefoot agreed that he would stay to watch and listen. "I think it will be best if we keep out of sight," said he. "You sit under that little hemlock tree and I'll sit in the hollow top of this old stump."



"I'll keep right on letting them look for a feathered singer," said Whitefoot to himself.

Peter thought this a good idea. So he sat under the little hemlock tree, where he could peep out without the likelihood of being seen, and Whitefoot disappeared in the top of the old stump. For a long time nothing happened. Then as Peter was almost ready to give up he heard that mysterious little song again. As had happened before it sounded as if it came from that old stump or from behind it. Peter looked eagerly in that direction and saw Whitefoot come scrambling to the top of the old stump.

"I heard it! I heard it!" cried Whitefoot in great excitement. "Did you see the singer? Oh, Peter, did you see the singer?"

"No," replied Peter in a tone of deep disgust. "You ought to have, though, unless you were taking a nap."

"Of course wasn't taking a nap!" snapped Whitefoot indignantly. "What do you mean by saying that I ought to have seen that singer. What about yourself?"

"I haven't been sitting on that old stump and that is where that song came from, or from just back of it," retorted Peter. "Had I been sitting up where you were I certainly wouldn't have let that singer get away without being seen."

Whitefoot tried to appear indignant, but he was too full of chuckles to appear very angry. He was so full of chuckles that he just had to turn his back to Peter. He pretended to be looking in the bushes and small trees back of the old stump. He was still sitting there when that song was heard again.

"There!" cried Peter, rushing out from his hiding-place. "Where is he, Whitefoot? You must have seen him this time! If that song didn't come from somewhere about that old stump may I never hop another step. What are you chuckling so about?"

"A little joke," chuckled Whitefoot. "Just a little joke. I don't suppose it has ever entered that funny head of yours that that singer might not wear feathers."

"What's that?" cried Peter as a funny look, a look of mingled suspicion and unbelief, crossed his face.

ASPHYXIATION CAUSE OF TWO DEATHS ON RUM BOAT

SAN DIEGO, Cal., Nov. 16.—(AP)—Two unidentified dead men found in the cabin of an alcohol laden speedboat in the Coronado surf yesterday, died from asphyxiation, Coroner Schuyler C. Kelly announced today after an autopsy.

The autopsy surgeon, Kelly said, declared the men met their deaths from Carbon monoxide such as is given off by engine exhausts.

Kelly received word from Long Beach today that the speedboat, the A-1365, had anchorage space at Long Beach and left the landing at noon last Thursday with two men aboard. The names of the men were not given.

The A-1365 was removed from the Coronado beach and towed into port by the coast guard cutter 257. Tentative plans were being made to convert the craft into a government rum chaser.

Customs agents seized 120 five-gallon cases of alcohol which were found in the launch and along the beach. The alcohol was said to be valued at $10,000.

MRS. HERBERT HOOVER RETURNS TO WASHINGTON

WASHINGTON, Nov. 16—(AP)—Mrs Herbert Hoover, wife of the president, today returned from Asheville, N. C., where she visited her son, Herbert Hoover, Jr., who is convalescing there from illness.

Mrs. Hoover left here Thursday night for her first trip to the temporary home of her son.

MOTHER OF FOUR CHILDREN SLAIN IN HER BEAUTY SHOP

KINGSTON, N. Y., Nov. 16.—(AP)—Mrs. Rozario Abato, 40, mother of four children from 9 to 15 years old, was found slain in her beauty shop here today. She had been shot in the head and the abdomen with "mushroom" bullets.

While the police were detaining her husband pending further investigation, they said they had not been able to establish a motive and that they had no clue to the killer. Three of the children found the body when they stopped in the beauty shop on the way home from church.

STONES THROWN BY PLAYMATE RESULTED IN DEATH OF BOY

NORTHFORK, W. Va., Nov. 16.—(AP)—Bruised and battered by stones hurled by playmates, Norman Williams, 13, struggled home to his father, but died last night as the father bore him in his arms up the steps of a hospital.

Tonight five other boys, ranging in age from 8 to 15 years, were held in the Northfork jail awaiting a hearing before a justice of the peace. All six, they said, were returning home from a movie. Norman lagged behind. As he caught up with his companions a stone was thrown, and then another. Soon it was a battle, five against one. It ended when Norman dropped to the ground, and the other five fled to their homes.

DISABLED STEAMSHIP IN TOW OF COAST GUARD BOAT

WASHINGTON, Nov. 16.—(AP)—The disabled American steamship Angeles tonight was being towed by the coast guard cutter Sedago toward the Bermuda islands for repairs.

Coast guard headquarters were notified the Sedago picked up the vessel about noon as it was being towed by the mine sweeper Grebe. It was about 750 miles southeast of the Bermudas.

The vessel became disabled last Wednesday from a broken propeller shaft and was picked up yesterday by the Grebe.

MISS H. G. HUNTINGTON WEDS ALBERT DOERR, JR.

PASADENA, Calif., Nov. 16.—(AP)—Miss Harriet Green Huntington, 20-year-old heiress to the Huntington millions, has become the bride of Albert Doerr, Jr., 20, who worked his way through Sanford university driving an ice truck.

In contrast to the first meeting of the couple at Stanford, when for lack of other means Doerr took the young woman to a dance in his ice truck, they rode from the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. James E. Brehm, last night in a limousine after a wedding witnessed by Southern California social leaders.

Miss Huntington's grandfather was the late Henry E. Huntington, traction magnate and art patron. Her mother's father was the late Adam Green, pioneer San Francisco business man. She is a graduate of Smith college and attended Stanford.

Doerr was graduated from Stanford last June and is employed by a Los Angeles steel corporation. While in school, he gained a reputation as a boxer. He is the son of a Mexico City mining executive.

HARTFORD, Nov. 16.—(AP)— Miss Libby Jacobson, of Boston, was elected president of the New England region of Junior Hadassah at the closing session of the seventh annual regional conference, here today. One hundred and seventy-five delegates representing 25 units throughout New England attended.

Immediately he became the most talked about pianist of the season. Now he is beginning his seventh season with us and is booked to play in practically every city he has previously visited, several of them for the seventh time.

Clarence Sholes, real estate agent sold for Morris and Max Isman farm consisting of 85 acres of land and 11 head of cattle and horses, situated between Fitchville and Lebanon road, this being the fifth place sold in this vicinity recently. The property was sold to Mrs. Samuel F. Yerrington of Oneco street, this city.

Will Lecture at Conn. College

Miss Gloria Hollister, noted young woman scientist who graduated at Connecticut college in 1924 is to return there to give an illustrated lecture, With Beebe in Bermuda, telling of the undersea work of the Bermuda oceanographic expedition of the New York Zoological society next Friday afternoon at 4 o'clock in the gymnasium of Connecticut college. The public is invited without charge.

During the course of her work with the Bermuda expedition, Miss Hollister invented a process to make fish transparent, with every bone fully visible. Because of this find of hers the study of marine life has been completely revolutionized and William Beebe says that many discoveries are now being made which would have been quite impossible without what has been aptly termed Miss Hollister's "fish magic."

African insect pests are migrating to the coffee farms as a result of destruction of the forests.

OLD DISHES STILL RULE THANKSGIVING MENU

Despite modernistic trends in living, the old-fashioned Thanksgiving turkey dinner, family reunions and good cheer still are most popular in many homes.

The dinner itself, of course, is the high spot in the day's festivities. Turkey, duck, goose, pheasant, wild fowl, ham or roasts may constitute the main course of the dinner. Other foods are assembled to blend with the selected fowl or meat.

There is a variety of preparation of the characteristic dishes, but the menus do not vary greatly. Something tart, something spicy and something sweet should be included.

A pumpkin hollowed out and filled to overflowing with winter's fruits makes an appropriate table decoration. A border of richly colored leaves for the pumpkin is effective. A low bowl or basket of flowers and tall tapers in low candle holders may be used if the hostess desires.

THANKSGIVING RECIPES

Cranberry Mold

Six cups berries, 3 cups water, 3 cups sugar.

Look over the berries and remove all stems and soft berries. Add the water and cook 10 minutes in a covered pan. Mash the berries and add the sugar and boil 7 minutes. Pour into a ring mold which has been rinsed out in cold water. Set in a cold place to stiffen. Unmold onto a platter. Fill the center with crisp curls of celery.

Baked Date Pudding

Two cups chopped dates, 1 1-2 cups sugar, 1 cup broken nut meats, 1 teaspoon vanilla, 1-8 teaspoon salt, 1-2 cup flour, 2 teaspoons baking powder, 4 egg yolks, 4 eggs whites, stiffly beaten.

Beat the egg yolks and add the dates, sugar, nuts, vanilla, salt, flour and baking powder. Fold in the egg whites and pour into a shallow, greased pan. Set in a pan of hot water and bake 35 minutes in a moderately slow oven. Cool and serve with hard sauce.

Hard Sauce

(To serve with steamed or baked puddings)

One-half cup butter, 1 teaspoon vanilla, 1-4 teaspoon lemon extract, 1-8 teaspoon salt, 3 tablespoons hot cream, 2 cups sifted confectioner's sugar.

Cream the butter until soft. Add rest of ingredients and beat 3 minutes. Chill. Shape into balls, 1 inch in diameter. Place halves of nuts on the top and flatten a little. Chill. Arrange on the pudding and serve.

Tomato Jelly and Celery Salad

Four cups tomatoes, 1 cup water (boiling) 2 slices onions, 4 whole cloves, 2 bay leaves, 1 teaspoon salt, 1 teaspoon sugar, 1-4 teaspoon paprika, 3 tablespoons granulated gelatin, 1-2 cup cold water, 1 cup chopped celery, 1-3 cup chopped pimento stuffed olives, 1-4 cup chopped sweet pickles.

Mix the tomatoes, boiling water and seasonings. Cook slowly 20 minutes in a covered pan. Press through a strainer. Heat to boiling point and add the gelatin which has been soaking 5 minutes in the cold water. Stir until well blended. Cool. Add rest of ingredients. Pour into small molds. Chill until stiff. Unmold on cups of lettuce and surround with mayonnaise.

Doughnuts (3 dozen)

Three eggs, 1 1-2 cups sugar, 2 tablespoons butter, melted, 1 teaspoon salt, 1 teaspoon cinnamon, 1-2 teaspoon nutmeg, 1 1-2 cups milk, 5 cups flour, 4 teaspoons baking powder.

Beat the eggs and add the sugar. Beat 2 minutes. Add rest of ingredients. Chill the dough. Roll out on a floured board until the dough is 2-3 inch thick. Cut out with a doughnut cutter and fry the doughnuts in deep hot fat. Cool and roll in confectioner's sugar.

ENGLISH GIRL PAID FOR TASTING TEA

LONDON, Nov. 16—(AP)—For tasting tea day in and day out, Margaret Irving is paid $5,000 a year.

Head taster for a large produce market section, Miss Irving's word is taken as final on judging values of millions of dollars' worth of tea imported by her firm each year.

"From the examination of the leaf," she says, "one can judge the freshness of tea, and as a rule say exactly where it was grown. But this is not sufficient. It has to be tasted as well."

Miss Irving turned to a long counter on which were arranged many tiny teapots and cups.

"Of each sample of tea, a quantity equal to the weight of a dime is measured out and dropped into one of these pots. Then boiling water is added.

"The tea is left to brew for six minutes. When the six minutes are up this little clock strikes. It was made especially for the purpose.

"Then comes the tasting. I do not swallow the tea—I examine the scalded tea leaves. A bright copper color is a sign of a good tea."

The Gift For Music.

The gift for music is the only one of the special talents which it has been possible to study and measure in such a way as to bring forth significant and practical results.

From such studies it appears that the gift for music is entirely unrelated to general intelligence. In other words, among a group of children selected for their high intelligence, musical ability would appear no more frequently than among an unselected group.

It is because musical ability is a native gift, independent of intellectual development, that we find in this field child wonders who rank among the great geniuses of the world.

Not only is musical ability a native gift, but one which it is impossible to develop through training where it does not already exist. Musically talented children, however, need training if they are to develop the full use of their powers.

Unfortunately, the tests which measure talent require a 10 or 11-year-old level of intelligence for their execution, and it is therefore impossible to measure this capacity in children who fall below the 10 to 11-year-old level.

The tests, however, are of no help in determining the existence of talent in young children. They should, however, be useful to the parent, who believing his child to be talented, plans to give him intensive musical training.

The use of these tests before much time and money and energy are expended in acquiring technique in the execution of music would often save all of these and much disapointment as well.

It is well to bear in mind, however, that children lacking in a degree of talent which would make intensive musical training advisable may yet be capable of learning to enjoy music and should, therefore, be given every opportunity to develope this capaticy.

NEW PARIS COLLEGE KNOWS CHIC BEST

PARIS, Nov. 16—(AP)—A college of style, where designers and dressmakers of note will impart to aspiring future dressmakers the secrets of Parisian style supremacy has opened up here.

A regular course in the history of costume, practical designing and all aspects of the haute couture has long been needed, in the opinion of Mme. Rene-Jean, director of the new school.

Heretofore students of costume design were obliged to enter dressmaking establishments as apprentices in order to gain an idea of Paris methods.

CAPITAL SCENES SOLACE WIDOWS OF GREAT MEN

WASHINGTON, Nov. 16—(AP)—Widows of presidents and cabinet officials seem to find solace in the gracious atmoephere of the nation's capital. Many of them return here to make their homes following a bereavement.

Mrs. Woodrow Wilson and Mrs. William Howard Taft divide their time between Washington and traveling abroad. Mrs. James W. Good, widow of the late secretary of war, has recently returned to the capital and taken a suite of rooms at a leading hotel for the winter. Her former home was in Cedar Rapids, Iowa.

'CASTLE' ROOM IS FILLED WITH OWNER'S PORTRAITS

WASHINGTON, Nov. 16—(AP)—One room in the great house known as Henderson Castle is devoted entirely to paintings of the owner, Mrs. John B. Henderson, long a social leader in the capital.

Mrs. Henderson still resides in the house which was built in the early nineties by the late Senator John B. Henderson.

Another room contains works of modern artists. In it is a wooden mantel 18 feet high which was carved by Albert Pries, a teacher in the school of wood carving.

FASHION'S FACE "NATURAL" AGAIN EXPERT DECLARES

NEW YORK, Nov. 16—(AP)—The fashionable feminine face this year is "back to natural" with both daytime gowns and night-time pajamas, according to beauty experts.

"Feminine clothes have brought feminine faces," says Angela Varona, Fifth avenue beauty specialist. "The right powder is the one that matches the skin—not tints it several shades darker or lighter.

"Shardes of rachel (pale yellow) or combinations of rachel and rose are the correct winter powders, while the smart rouge is no longer orange, but a light rose-pink.

"Lipsticks should be bright generally—a shade or two lighter than the lips. The fashionable face is really grandmother's natural one."

"No creams left on at night," is the verdict of Miss Varona, whose crusade in this respect has led to her being dubbed as "The Husband's friend."

"The cream that clutters your face all night is only wasted on your pillow," she declares, "for scientific experiments have shown us that only a warm skin absorbs oils and then only for a few moments.

"Cleanse your face at night with a good cream and wipe it all off. Run over it with a pad of cotton dipped in skin tonic. Then cover it with nourishing cream and climb into your warm bath. When you climb out again take off every bit of the cream and go to bed with the natural face you should have.

"In the morning use a dash of cold water and run a bit of ice over your face to wake you up. Smooth on a simple lotion to protect your skin from wind and dust. Add the make-up that makes you look natural—and you're ready for any day."

JOBLESS GIRLS PICKET EMPLOYERS OF WIVES

PERTH, Australia, Nov. 16—(AP)—Unemployed single girls here have begun a vigorous campaign against employment of married women.

With the slogan, "the married woman's place is in the home," unemployed girls systematically protest to employers who have married women on their staffs.

Those who refuse to discharge their married women employes and engage qualified single girls face a picket of workless girls outside their premises.

Red Suede Jacket

NEW YORK, Nov. 16—(AP)—Miss Marion Wickes is appearing at sports events these days in a hip-length jacket of red suede lined with red and white tweed. The same material fashions the tailored skirt, while the accompanying blouse is of white jersey cut with a high neck. Her hat is a tiny close-fitting blue basque beret.

Initiated Gloves

WASHINGTON, Nov. 16—(AP)—Gloves with initials of the owner on the cuffs are a fall fashion novelty.

Mrs. Samuel Fay Harper is wearing a pair of brown ones with initials of gold to harmonize with her brown crepe de chine afternoon dress trimmed with gold braid.

Sports Coat Belts

PARIS, Nov. 16—(AP)—Many sweater costumes and sports coats in the last minute style shows have round leather belts not larger than a dog's leash.

Women Gain In Reichstag

BERLIN, Nov. 16—(AP)—German women are gaining a larger place in government affairs. The Reichstag has 39 women deputies, six more than in 1928.

Marries 4,000 Couples

ELIZABETH CITY, N. C., Nov. 16—(AP)—The Rev. E. F. Sawyer has officiated at 4,000 weddings. He has been tying knots more than 40 years.

Island Swains Are Shy

KIRKWALL, Orkney Island, Nov. 16—(AP)—The Orkney sheik is a stickler for secrecy. He calls when all except the girl have retired and is never seen in the house by the parents until near the date fixed for the wedding.

Black Ermine

PARIS, Nov. 16—(AP)—Mrs. Honore Palmer of Chicago wore a black broadcloth coat with melon sleeves of ermine dyed black at a hotel tea for charity recently.

Black ermine is an important trimming fur for winter. Designers use it for entire coats and for short fitted jackets for afternoon wear.

Mrs. Astor Wears

NEW YORK, Nov. 16—(AP)—Mrs. Vincent Astor is sponsoring the vogue for flowered fabrics for evening wear. One of her newest dinner gowns is a beige crepe patterned with flowers in various shades of blue, and designed without trimming. Blue satin slippers and a wrap of blue velvet complete her ensemble.

Sweater Patterns

PARIS, Nov. 16—(AP)—Sweaters, to be really new, must have amusing patterns crocheted or knitted into their main body.

Patterns take the form of outlines of collars, of yokes and of drop shoulders. Belts are knitted where outside belts would naturally go. Pockets are pictured in the pattern where they do not actually exist.

Black sweaters with an over-mixture of some paler color like turquoise, rose or jade are among the newest.

DAUGHTER OF 11 'BOSSES' POLAND'S STERN DICTATOR

WARSAW, Nov. 16—(AP)—Jadwiga, age 11, is the dictator in Marshal Pilsudski's home. She is the boss of Poland's "iron man."

The marshal is renowned for his love of his two daughters—Wanda, 13, and Jadwiga. This parental love is in marked contrast to the stern martial figure of the dictator.

The Pilsudski girls adore their dad and confide in him all their live interests.

A few years ago the marshal had to admire their dolls and help to feed them from empty cups with imaginary tea. Now the girls are at school, and in spite of his state burdens they keep the dictator well informed of their studies.

When the new school year began this fall the marshal was in session with several cabinet ministers on an important matter concerning the forthcoming elections for parliament.

Suddenly the two girls burst into the room. It appeared that instead of going straight home after their first school day they decided that they must tell their dad right away of their first impressions of new teachers and new classmates.

The marshal excused himself before the cabinet ministers, interrupted the conference and had a chat with his girls for half an hour.

CERTAIN 'RIGHTS' OF CHILD SAME THE WORLD OVER

WASHINGTON, Nov. 16—(AP)—What are the rights of every child?

Katherine F. Lenroot, assistant chief of the federal children's bureau, gives this answer after studying codes of all countries on the inborn prerogatives of childhood.

She has found five points in common:

The right to receive just consideration regardless of race, birth, economic or social position.

The right to security in family relationship.

The right to suitable material and spiritual conditions in his home.

The right to the closest possible approximation of normal home life when consigned to special care by reason of physical or social conditions.

The right to complete freedom from any attitude of stigma on the part of the public.

BOX PLEATING LEADS ALL OTHER VARIETIES

PARIS, Nov. 16—(AP)—Box pleating has outstripped pleating of any other variety in the current mode.

Sport, tailored and afternoon dresses are box pleated by preference.

Some pleating is very narrow, held in place by multiple rows of machine stitching. Whole blouses and even dresses for afternoon wear are occasionally fashioned of finely pleated georgette.

Rainy Days Need Smart Touch

NEW YORK, Nov. 16—(AP)—Even rainy days have their fashions now and the woman who wants the "last word" in wet-weather togs chooses hers of white rubberized silk, closing with a zipper fastening up the front, so that she is locked in from the rain. A brimmed brown felt hat and leather heeled brown shoes complete a "brown and white" ensemble that is smart this fall.

"First Ladies'" Recipes Liked

WASHINGTON, Nov. 16—(AP)—How Mrs. Hoover makes meat loaf and how Mrs. Coolidge makes apple pie interest the women of the country judging by the continued sale of the congressional club cook book. The book contains 3,000 recipes, many by well known women.

Mongolian Blue

PARIS, Nov. 16—(AP)—Mongolian blue is among the new evening colors, and Manchurian red is another newcomer.

The blue which Paris calls Mongolian is an intense turquoise. Manchurian red is a shade which corresponds to dark coral.

WOMAN IN LIFE AND IN THE KITCHEN

SUGGESTIONS FOR THE HOUSEWIFE

When waffles stick to the iron, use more shortening.

Plant lice can be destroyed by spraying plants with naptha soap suds, using a syringe for the purpose.

Old-fashioned cider is still considered to be one of the very best tooth washes ever discovered.

If new tinware, before it is used, is rubbed with grease and then warmed slowly without burning, it will not rust.

If the furnace pipe, or range pipe, must be cut, mark a line where the cut is desired, and try using the can opener.

If cream has soured, put a pinch of bicarbonate of soda in it and it will sweeten it again. Do not add this soda for fresh milk.

Tack on the inside of the pantry door or cellar door, a heavy square of cotton material, and use as a pocket for storing wrapping paper and paper bags.

Do not leave a fork, spoon or other metal articles in a pot which is desired to heat rapidly as the metal will deflect the heat and prolong the time of reaching the boiling point.

While working in the kitchen, fasten a loop at one corner of the hand towel, to slip over the apron string, or pin the corner of the towel to the belt. Each time the hands must be wiped, several steps will be saved.

When attaching labels to tin, first brush over lightly with a cut onion or melted paraffin and they will stick tightly; or a little brown sugar added to paste has the same effect. Adhesive plaster makes a good label for tins.

To keep the polish of the dining room table perfect, rub every three days with a mixture made of equal parts of olive oil and turpine. Apply with a flannel cloth, and polish with a clean flannel cloth. Dull spots on other furniture may be treated in the same way.

A good steel and nickel polish can be made by mixing 1 teaspoonful turpentine, 1 tablespoonful sweet oil and enough emery powder to the consistency of cream. Apply with a soft rag, then wipe off and polish with a dry flannel cloth.

HEATING IN OVEN IMPROVES TOAST

For the best toast you have ever tasted, lay the slices of bread in the open oven for a few minutes before toasting them. In addition to improving the flavor, it makes the toast more digestible and it browns much more evenly.

FRUIT BUTTER.

Made delicious fruit butter by combining apple pulp with apricot, blueberry, grape, peach or plum. The apple pulp extends other fruits without materially affecting their color and flavor.

HEALTH AND BEAUTY

Ink spots on the fingers can be removed entirely by rubbing the inside of a banana peeling over the fingers.

When a fishbone is swallowed, immediately suck a lemon and the acid will cause the fishbone to dissolve rapidly.

Medicine should not be measured in a spoon, as spoons vary considerably in size. Keep a small, marked, measuring glass on hand for this purpose.

When red blotches appear on the face, a good treatment is to rinse the face for about three minutes at a time in cool water. Also take alternate hot and cold face baths at night.

SOLID COMFORT

Luxuriously comfortable are very low bedroom or boudoir chairs upholstered in violet, with cream colored daisies scattered over the surface. They have very deep loose cushions.

NOVELTY SLIPPERS

Fascinating slippers are made with a combination of pink moire and black satin, so designed that the inside of the foot presents an entirely different look from the outside.

FIND THE STUDDING

Before driving nails for picture hooks into the wall first see where the nails in baseboard are driven. Nails in baseboards are always driven into the studding, which gives support which plaster fails to give.

ELEGANCE

Panne satin and panne velvet are revivals of other years that express so elegantly the rich and formal mode, while in contrast we have for sports the old hop sacking, homespun and rough tweeds that have been colored for our modern needs.

REPTILE SHOES

One strap shoes made of black boa skin are extremely new and smart this season. They may be worn with thin black stockings, or the "ink shades."

SCOTCH

There is more than a dash of Scotch in the new sports clothes, with Jane Regny launching the authentic tartans of the leading Scotch clans for linings, blouses, mouchoirs, and so on; with Suzanne Talbot making angora plaid ski costumes; with chanel showing plaid jerseys, not to mention a number of other highland flings being danced by the Paris mode at large.

YELLOW FOR AUTUMN

Tweeds hold a place almost unrivaled in the chic wardrobe and one of the very "nicest" of all the "nice" tweed frocks is of loose woven yellow and brown tweed with a short fitted jacket to match.

WEAR A FEATHER

"Wear a feather" is fashion's latest ruling and the feather consists of a saucy little brush or fantasy posed at the side of a tiny felt or velvet hat worn far back off the forehead.

DICTATES OF FASHION

A long slender V neckline frequently comes to a brilliant ending in a rhinestone clip.

Interesting bags of galyak and other supple furs are shown, ermine models being included

Dark greens and browns are being used for antelope handbags to be carried with matching costumes.

Whether your ensemble is of one color or several shades, the jewelry accents must match or blend subtly with it.

Evening hemlines are even and short enough to show the slipper, which very often has a square or oval rhinestone buckle.

Lobster red lace made on Empire lines is a Molyneux expresion of evening mode meeting with considerable success abroad.

ALL SHIMMER

A charming evening frock is of white chiffon sparsely covered with silver paillettes. Around the hips a fitted piece is closely covered with the glittering paillettes, close enough to form a silver girdle.

AFTERNOON BAG OF FINE SUEDE

Afternoon bags are more fashionable when made of antelope or fine suede, and many of them are black when not in the pinkish beige, the turquoise blue or gray shades used in afternoon customes. Clasps are of chiseled silver, marcasite or enamel on silver.

Many of the afternoon bags are oval, hexagonal or rectangular, to better accord with the more exquisite lines of the new gowns, yet such bags are small enough to be carried easily in the hand without the aid of a handle.

IMPORTANCE OF LACE

Lace-trimmed dresses have attained tremendous importance this season, not even cloth dresses being exempt from lace treatments at neck or elbow. Alencon lace trimming is being featured for daytime clothes. Binche lace has many advocates especially for use on velvet. Velvet dresses are second only in interest to woolen ones at the moment.

BERETS TO MATCH KNITTED FROCKS

Whether or not the vogue for ensembling will be as good this fall as it has been in the past is a question quickly answered by the appearance of ensembled costumes. One such outfit is the two-piece frock of knitted fabric with a beret to match. The blouse usually follows the style of a jacket, confirming the smartness of the waistcoat blouse that appeared with the tailored suit of the spring.

SEWING SUGGESTIONS

If a piece of elastic is sewn to the upper inside edge of the pockets in the children's sweaters, the pockets will not sag.

Old shirts with worn-out collars and cuffs make ideal kitchen aprons. As the shirt is already hemmed, it requires but little work to transform it into the apron.

When the sewing-machine needle has become blunt at the point, stitch an inch or two through a piece of sandpaper and the point will be sharp again.

A nice way to darn table linen or towels when they begin to wear threadbare is to stitch back and forth across the thin places on the sewing machine.

It is quite often that a rent or tear in a garment can be mended much better on the sewing machine than by hand, and the results will be a much neater repair.

A new method of making buttonholes that will outwear the old one many times is to baste a strip of cloth on the underside of the hem. Then cut and work the buttonhole through both strip and hem. Cut away surplus strip.

TO TRANSFER EMBROIDERY PATTERN

To transfer an embroidery pattern, take a piece of plain wrapping paper, not too heavy, and go over it with a cloth dipped in warm grease until the paper is transparent. Place this over the pattern to be transferred and trace it with a pencil. Embroidery designs can be transferred in this way effectively and accurately, either before or after being worked, without soiling the original. Rough-fin-

MUCH EMBROIDERY

That the mode this winter is to be one of great "elegance" there is no doubt—and as evidence of this are the many gowns that show elaborate embroideries. This, however, is a fashion that is confined to evening gowns.

SAVE LINEN THREADS

If you draw threads from a tablecloth or napkin in order to cut or hem them straight, save these threads. Some day you may want to darn or mend your linen, and there is nothing that serves the purpose so well as the actual threads of the cloth.

NEEDLEWORK

Squares of cream colored linen, stamped to be cross-stitched in deep blue, make pleasant "home work." When finished, 18 of them are crocheted together with beige cotton.

TO MEND HOSE

Never mend woolen stockings with new wool. The new darn will shrink the next time the stocking is washed, and pull away from the thin place. Hold the skein of new wool over a saucepan of boiling water until it is thoroughly damp, and hang it up to dry. It will then be shrunk and safe to use.

CONCERNING WOMEN

Women in Germany are said to be less radical than men voters.

Forty-four states in the union make some provision for public aid to mothers with dependent children.

A continuous church membership of 75 years is a record of Mrs. Annie McNingy, aged 91, of Mt. Holly, N. J.

Upwards of 200 nurses leave England every year to take up work under the colonial governments in remote parts of the empire.

A petition to admit women to the ministry of the Church of England is being considered by the Conference of Bishops which recently met at Lambeth.

The earliest date when women's work in offices really started in the United States has been set at 1868, in which year a woman was employed as a bank clerk.

Mrs. Clara Whitten Justice, a graduate of the law school of West Virginia university, class of 1929, is the first woman lawyer to be admitted to the Mingo county bar, in West Virginia.

RAGS FOR SCRUBBING

Old flannel of all kinds should be kept for the scrubbing and cleaning of paint. Next to flannel come coarse soft linen, old kitchen towels, crash, etc.

WHEN WE TRAVEL

When we travel, even if it is only to college or boarding school, a pigskin case that holds, in separate compartments, tooth brush and paste, face cloth and a small air cushion, is a great convenience and luxury.

RECIPES

Cocoanut cake: One-third cup fat, one cup sugar, two eggs, one-half cup orange juice, four tablespoons cold water, one teaspoon lemon extract, one-eighth teaspoon salt, two cups flour, two teaspoons baking powder and two-thirds cup cocoanut. Cream fat and sugar. Add eggs, orange juice, water, lemon extract, salt, flour and baking powder. Beat two minutes. Pour into shallow pan which has been fitted with waxed paper. Sprinkle with cocoanut. Bake 30 minutes in moderate oven.

Graham nut loaf: This is a sweet bread that children like. Work together three-fourths cup of brown sugar, three tablespoons of shortening and one egg until well blended and smooth. Dissolve one teaspoon of baking soda in one cup of sour milk or buttermilk and add to the mixture. Add half a teaspoon of salt, one cup of graham flour, three-fourths cup of white flour, and mix only until smooth. Fold in half a cup of broken nut meats and place the batter in a greased and floured loaf pan. Bake in a moderate oven for 50 minutes. Let stand for about 24 hours before cutting for sandwiches.

It's a Woman's World

BACHRACH

MRS. LYLE BURNS STEEVER

So popular has become the flying club organized by Mrs. Lyle Burns Steever in Washington that several men have joined.

Widow of a World war aviation officer, Mrs. Steever started the Eagle Wings Flying Club of Young Women. Regular classes in ground work were held, with an aviator as instructor.

Later the girls went up in trial flights, and when participants in this year's women's air derby were in the capitol this Eagle Wings club entertained them—and furnished the trophy for the winner, Mrs. Phoebe Omlie.

GLUE AID TO ECONOMY

The use of glue in the fabrication of wood products brings about more complete utilization of timber through the use of lower grades, inferior species and small sizes of material; it conserves supplies of clear material and of the scarcer and more valuable woods; and it makes possible a saving of material in the production of articles of unusual form, dimensions and properties. Nearly every article of glued wood construction represents an economy in the use of timber resources.

In the middle ages oak shrines, halls, churches and municipal edifices of unusual beauty were created; many of them remain to this day in a good state of preservation. In the matter of ruder uses, it is recorded that oak piling driven by the Romans in the River Severn, England, is still in service.

That corn has been cultivated in America for several thousand years is shown by ears of corn found with the remains of Basketmaker Indians of the southwest and by such discoveries as a petrified ear of corn in Cusco, Peru.

COLONIAL LIVING ROOM BESPEAKS COMFORT

There is homey comfort and convenience in this colonial living room.

By HOPE HAMMOND

Colonial living rooms are holding their own in recent domestic architecture, perhaps because they bespeak comfort, which should be the first requisite of any living room.

And the colonial living room today has comforts undreamed of 200 years ago.

It has a radiator, hidden under cabinet which itself is an attractive piece of furniture. And it has a radio, electric lights and deep-cushioned chairs.

Nevertheless it absorbs great charm from the past. The furniture is distinctive and dominating, but its spirit is totally foreign to fragile pieces, highly polished woods and fine textures of all kinds.

The woodwork should be reminiscent of days when timbers were hand-hewn, worn to smooth contours with rubbing and toned with coats of wax.

In this living room the wide fireplace is flanked on both sides by built-in pine bookcases over deeper cupboards. One of the cupboards, without doors, encloses all but the face of a radio cabinet.

Two hand-hewn wax-rubbed oak beams stretch across the sand-plastered and sand-colored ceiling between oak uprights. The rest of the room's woodwork is knotty pine.

Antique damask, brocatelle and rough satin are used to cover comfortable chairs. There is no assumption of elegance, yet quality prevails.

The wide stone hearth, flanked by shelves filled with colorful book bindings, is furnished with an iron cradle where either wood or coal may be burned. There are iron fire tools and a hand-made broom.

Near the radio cabinet is a low table bearing a converted antique brass ecclesiastical candlestick with two-light equipment below a flaring shade that lights the radio dials.

GREENEVILLE

The second of a series of entertainments that will be given during the winter months under the auspices of the Greeneville Congregational church Sunday school classes took place Friday evening in the parlors of the church with a large attendance. The entertainment was furnished by Hathaway and Ruth, who provided one of the best evening's entertainment held in Greeneville in a long time. The large audience was held spellbound by the clever magic tricks exhibited by Mr. Hathaway. The real feature of the evening was the mind reading of Miss Ruth, who read questions after questions and gave the correct answer. After the entertainment candy was sold by the members of Mrs. Compton's Sunday school class.

All the men of this city and vicinity are invited to attend the meeting of the Men's club of St. Andrew's Episcopal church tonight (Monday) at 8 o'clock. President James Lockhart has secured local talent to furnish entertainment for the evening. As a special speaker of the evening the club has been fortunate in getting Judge H. H. Pettis, of Norwich, widely known as an orator. He will talk upon a subject that will be interesting to all who attend the meeting. Refreshments will be served.

George Swanton has returned to his home in Providence after spending the week end at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. George Swanton, on North Main street.

Miss Mary Mallon has returned to resume her duties as student nurse at St. Joseph's hospital after spending a few days at the home of her parents on Convent avenue.

Harry Larose and Phillip Belleaveau have returned to their homes after spending the week end at the home of relatives at Willimantic.

Mrs. David Ryan and children, of Boston, have been guests of Mrs. W. Ryan on North Main street recently.

Robert Enright, Edward Delaney, James Gay, Stephen Shegoda, George Swanton and John Tennant attended the Holy Cross-Harvard football game in Boston, Saturday.

NORWICH TOWN

The Drop-in class of the First Congregational Sunday school plans to hold a pound party in the chapel. There will be no admission and any person interested may attend, though each one attending is expected to bring a pound of something useful. Later in the evening goods contributed will be auctioned off.

From Webster, Mass., Sunday afternoon, Mr. and Mrs. John Dwyer, who motored to Norwich Town, were guests of Mrs. Dwyer's brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin L. Kennedy.

A former Norwich resident, Mrs. Genie Evans, of Bridgeport and Worcester, accompanied by her nephew and niece, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Vander Pyl, and little son, Master Ellis Vander Pyl, also of Worcester, were callers Sunday afternoon at the home of their cousins, Dr. and Mrs. Charles H. Lamb. When the Vander Pyl family was returning home, Mrs. Evans accompanied her relatives as far as Taftville, where she stopped to visit at the home of Mr. and Mrs. George G. Grant.

There is to be a meeting of Everready circle of The King's Daughters at the home of Miss Catherine D. Smith, of Washington street, this (Monday) evening.

The Sewing circle of Sedgwick Woman's Relief corps will hold an all-day meeting Wednesday, Nov. 19th, with Mrs. David M. Dean, Norwich Town. Mrs. William H. Whiteman is chairman of the works committee.

Basis of Church Unity.

"What Constitutes the Basis For Church Unity?" was the subject of the Sunday morning address at the First Congregational church, by the pastor, Rev. Wilfrid M. Wilton, who read for the Scripture lesson the third chapter of Paul's letter to the Ephesians. On one side of the pulpit was a decorative basket of yellow chrysanthemums, and on the other side a vase of pink and white carnations.

Under the heading Stewardship and Thanksgiving, the theme of the Congregational Young People's C. E. society Sunday evening in the chapel was "Jesus An Example of Stewardship," with Scripture references in Luke and John.

At the meeting Tuesday afternoon of the two younger C. E. societies, the juniors will continue Bible study, while the intermediates will discuss the topic, "How Shall I Spend My Time?" Miss Jessie E. Hyde and Mrs. Ernest Washington are in charge of this company of little folks who assemble in the chapel one afternoon each week following school.

NEW YORK PASTOR OPENS SERIES OF Y. M. C. A. MEETINGS AT CHURCH

"Religion will live forever. All these prophets who tell us that religion will pass away are talking like so many fools," said Rev. Charles E. Jefferson, D. D., of New York, who opened a week's series of evangelistic meetings Sunday evening at the United Congregational church, under the auspices of the local Young Men's Christian association. A crowded church greeted Rev. Dr. Jefferson who conducted a similar series of meetings in Norwich seven years ago. Rev. Alexander H. Abbott, pastor of the church, led the service in which Herbert W. Cary, president, and Edwin Hill, secretary, represented the Y. M. C. A.

After the devotional period of the service, including prayer, hymns, scripture reading and the offertory, Rev. Dr. Jefferson spoke of his previous visit to Norwich, in February 1923. Since then he has preached in churches in Egypt, India, China, Japan, the Philippine Islands and Hawaii and has just returned from a visit to California. He announced his topic as "What Can Religion Do For Us?"

"There is a wide-spread impression," he said, "that Christianity is losing its grip. There is a whisper that the church is not holding its own. There is a feeling that the church is going; that religion will vanish. We know that the world is in a bad way. We know that Europe is in a mess. We know that the world is awfully sick. The first page of the newspaper shows us the cancers, the ulcers and the running sores.

"A great many things have been done to remedy the situation but not enough has been done. Possibly religion holds the forces that will get us out of this mess. What is religion doing for us? I can't help feeling that religion isn't doing very much for the average American. We do not find a very great distinction between the man who is a Christian and the man who is not a Christian. They are so much alike you can't tell them apart. We are dealing with a very vital and impressive question.

"What is religion doing for you? That is a question we can't discuss in public. I simply throw it out to you to think about. What can religion do for us if we give it a chance? There are some people who will tell you that religion can do everything for you. Well, when you get a flat tire, religion won't help much. When electric lights go out, you don't open the Bible; you send for an electrician. We must admit that religion can't do much for the farmer in respect to bumper crops. You can't coax vegetables out of a garden by sitting on a fence singing hymns. We must remember that religion can't do everything that human beings want done.

"I can easily understand why multitudes of our young people have come to the conclusion that science is ahead of religion. The great triumphs over disease have been won by science, and not religion.

"What can religion do for us? Religion can answer our ultimate questions. Why am I alive? Why are you here? Why is the human race here? Science has no answer to these questions. Religion, only, gives the answer. Man is here, it says, by the will of God.

"Is the universe friendly? Science has no answer to this question, but religion has an answer. Religion can give us the sense of direction. Jesus says—I am the Way. Jesus says, Follow Me. Religion gives us the direction and, knowing the direction, we will ultimately arrive.

"Religion can give us a scale of dependable values by which we can judge man. What is man worth? Science will tell us, physically, that a man weighing 150 pounds, is, chemically worth about 98 cents. What is a man worth intellectually? I do not see how science can answer that question. What is human personality worth? Is personality a flame that can be blown out by death? Science and philosophy cannot answer. Religion says man is of immeasureable worth because he is the child of God.

"Religion can give us the power we need to do the things we ought to do. What is the cause of the tragedies all over the country? Weakness on the part of man who is not strong enough to shoulder his responsibilities. What is the matter with our homes? Why so many divorces? Weakness. What is the matter with society? Weakness. What is the matter with democracy? Weakness.

"Where can we get this strength we need? How can we get it? I don't know where we can get it, unless it is from religion. Jesus impressed all men by his look of power. Jesus was a man of strength. If America is going to be saved, we've got to have a strength greater than we have now. Science cannot give us moral strength. We must turn to religion.

"Religion can give us comfort. There are times when we want nothing but comfort. Religion is the great comforter. Religion will live forever."

PECK LIBRARY OBSERVING NATIONAL BOOK WEEK

This year marks the 11th observance of national book week, which is to be celebrated all over the country from Nov. 16 to 22. Everywhere an increasing interest is being shown in the exhibits that are made in libraries, schools and book shops.

At the Peck library a display of books has been arranged to which the public is invited. Later these books are to go on the shelves but, for this week, they are grouped within easy reach, together with some most attractive maps. It is hoped by the library officials that many visitors will visit the library during the week.

TAFTVILLE

Mr. and Mrs. George Brown of New Orleans, La., are sending out announcements of the birth of a son, John Bernard. Mrs. Brown is the former Abbietta Hasler of Taftville.

WEDDING

Maynard—Aberg

In the presence of the immediate families and close friends, Miss Dorothy Marie Aberg, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Albert J. Aberg, and Ernest A. Maynard, son of Mr. and Mrs. George R. Maynard of Gales Ferry, were married at the home of the bride's parents, by Rev. William Penner, pastor of the Taftville Congregational church. The bride was attractively gowned in blue crepe, and carried white chrysanthemums. The maid of honor was Miss Dorothy Packer, who wore brown chiffon and carried yellow chrysanthemums. The best man was John McNeil. A reception and supper followed the ceremony. After a short wedding trip the newly married couple will reside in a newly furnished home at Poquonoc Bridge, where the groom is proprietor of a fishing business.

STATE'S FARMERS AIDING FAMILIES IN DISTRESS

S. McLean Buckingham, state commissioner of agriculture, is urging Connecticut farmers to do all they can to relieve suffering and help their less fortunate neighbors in the city who are in need of food.

"Some of our farmers are having difficulty in making both ends meet but others are in better financial circumstances, generously inclined and willing to lend all possible assistance," the commissioner stated. Commissioner Buckingham believes that the conditions during the next few months will be materially relieved if those in a position to do so, will make direct donations of food products to the needy or through the community chest or some similar charitable organization.

In making contributions the commissioner suggests that the products be packed in units which lend themselves to convenient handling and at the same time insuring against loss from spoiling. The Connecticut valley potato growers have set an example of packing their potatoes a bushel in each bag. Carrots, turnips and beets may be packed a half bushel in a bag as these products are not used in large quantities. The size of package for cabbage will necessarily have to be determined by the number in the family and it is advisable to let the distributing agency allot the product.

Vegetables are not the only farm products that can be used to alleviate conditions. Contributions of fruit can be used to advantage by charity dispensing organizations and institutions as fruit is recognized not only as a valuable food but also as an essential to good health. Apples are the most plentiful of Connecticut's fruit crops and the commissioner believes that all donations would be gratefully received and fill a definite need among those who cannot afford to buy under present business conditions.

CONNECTICUT FARM WOMEN TO ATTEND N. L. MEETING

President S. McLean Buckingham of the Connecticut Farm Bureau federation believes that the development of adequate social and educational facilities in the rural communities of the state rests largely upon the shoulders of the women. He urges all Connecticut farm women to accept their civic responsibilities and gain a profit, not only for themselves, but for their communities, by attending the women's programme of the American Farm Bureau federation to be held in Boston, Dec. 5 and 6. It is expected that more than 100 farm bureau members from Connecticut will attend the annual meeting, the first one to be held in the east.

The place of women in the agricultural future of America will be presented in its larger aspects at the session for women held in connection with the annual meeting of the federation in Boston, Dec. 8, 9, 10. The women's programme will precede the general farm bureau meetings by a few days, opening on Dec. 5 and culminating with a great gathering in historic Faneuil hall on the 6th. All women interested in the business of home making in the country will find much of pleasure and profit in these sessions.

HAD 10,865 CHILDREN BEFORE JUVENILE COURTS

The juvenile courts of the state, from July 1, 1928, to June 30, 1930, handled a total of 10,865 children, according to the statistics furnished by Richard K. Godwin, deputy chief juvenile court probation officer of the state of Connecticut.

Throughout the state 2,784 children, or about 40 per cent of those formally before the courts were placed in probation. Of these 273 were later committed to institutions. Probation officers reported making 5,815 preliminary investigations and a total of 17,713 visits to probationers. They also collected $3,779.64 for restitution or reparation.

Of the total of 10,865 children, 4,007 were treated by the courts in an informal manner.

The children before the town courts totaled 6,616, of whom 4,837 were boys and 919 were girls. Children under 10 were, boys 652, girls 256; between 10 and 14, boys 2,352, girls 286; between 14 and 16, 1,687 boys, 377 girls. The presence of so many children under 10 is accounted for by the fact that the great majority of these children were before the court as dependent, uncared for or neglected children.

With regard to religious affiliations there were before the town courts ninety-seven Jewish children, 1,237 Protestant children, 4,248 Roman Catholic children and 121 children of other religions.

In a total of 6,616 children before sixty-one town, city and borough juvenile courts, the offenses listed were: Stealing or attempted stealing, 1,354; automobile stealing, 134; burglary or unlawful entry, 653; robbery, 53; other stealing, 357; truancy, 347; running away, 159; ungovernable or beyond parental control, 299; sex offense, 321; injury or attempted injury to the person, 207; act of carelessness or mischief, 735; violating liquor or drug law or intoxication, 9; other complaints, 587; dependent children, 97; neglected or uncared for children, 618. Twenty-two per cent of these children were repeaters, having previously been before the court.

SPEAKERS AND SOCIAL FOR GIRLS' CITY CLUB

Miss Mary Bundy, secretary of the chamber of commerce, addressed the Girls' City club at the meeting Friday evening which had a very good attendance. Three girls applied for membership. Miss Bundy spoke on "The Girl in the Business World," and her remarks and suggestions as to desirable qualifications which will insure success had a great appeal to the girls who listened with keen interest and attention. At the conclusion of her talk the girls sang their club song of appreciation to her.

A short business meeting was presided over by the club president, Miss Irene Combies. Mrs. Charles B. Gilbert, president of the Woman's City club, spoke to the girls briefly, and Miss Constance Raymond, chairman of the girls' work committee, was also present. A social time followed the address of the evening with refreshments prepared and served under the direction of the club director, assisted by some of the club members.

The Tuesday night sewing class met as usual last week, concluding the evening with a period of playing games and singing.

THROWING OF CONFETTI ABOUT CHURCH FORBIDDEN

A rule which has been repeatedly violated of late was recalled to the people of St. Patrick's church Sunday, when from the pulpit at the four masses the congregations were reminded not to show too great exuberance of joy following weddings.

They were asked not to throw confetti in the vestibule or on the entrance steps, nor to litter the lawn, walks and grounds with paper or the like. Such attentions to the bride and groom, if they must be bombarded with them, should be kept for their own home.

Since the Roman Catholic church considers marriage a sacrament, to be invested with the greatest solemnity, any such modern horseplay is frowned on by the church authorities and it is expressly forbidden in the local parish.

MAKING EASIER TURN AT LINCOLN AVENUE CORNER

An easier entrance in Lincoln avenue for automobiles approaching from the north on Washington street is to be attained by improvements which the street department is carrying out at the corner of the two streets. About five or six feet is being cut off the northerly corner which makes a much easier angle for cars to negotiate when turning in from Washington street to Lincoln avenue.

The proposal to make this improvement met with ready cooperation on the part of Henry H. Vignot, owner of adjacent property, and adds another to the changes that have been made under the present administration to correct and improve congested conditions at various points in the city streets.

Dismissals At Backus Hospital

Patients dismissed Sunday at the Backus hospital were the following: Mrs. Edward Robitaille and infant son, 261 Norwich avenue, Taftville; Mrs. Ralph Hurlbutt and infant son, Gales Ferry; Mrs. Thomas Howarth and infant daughter, 157 Chapin street, Southbridge, Mass.; David Shermanski, Jewett City road, Jewett City.

MONSIGNOR MAY SHOWS MISTAKES OF IGNORANCE

The blind man who would judge a painting, the deaf man who would pose as critic of a musical composition, were denominated by Rt. Rev. Msgr. M. H. May no more anomalous than are those who, in arrogance and ignorance, attempt to misprize Christ and His church. Monsignor May was giving his customary brief sermon to the large congregation Sunday morning assembled in St. Patrick's church for the first mass at 7:30, always read by the rector. His theme was suggested by a phrase fro mthe gospel for the day which he had just read—the 23rd Sunday after Pentecost, Matt. 9. 18-26, "And they laughed Him to scorn," the attitude of the multitude toward the Saviour when He was about to restore life to the daughter of Jairus.

This derision through misunderstanding and limited vision meets the Redeemer and His church today as then. The smilers, scoffers, sneerers are the same. The graybeard and the callow college youth, professional men and so-called advanced thinkers inflated by the sense of their own "learning," pass the same rash, shallow and faulty judgment, he said. Christ's divinity, His sacred personality, His vice-regent on earth, His church, the priesthood, all are laughed to scorn by the pedagogue, the so-called liberal Catholic, the men learned in the law or the sciences, who fail to understand the first principles of our religiou. The preacher pointed out the duty of each Catholic to read and to study, that he may be able to explain when questioned on points which those honestly inquiring would have cleared up; and he expressed the conviction that every Catholic would benefit by a review and re-study of the little catechism, which probably some have not read since their preparation for confirmation. The uninformed Roman Catholic may prove the very worst type of a stumbling block to those honestly seeking the truth, hindering their entrance to the church.

Monsignor May gave holy communion to a very large number of penitents, precedence in going to the altar being given the members of the Rosary society, Miss Annie G. Stanton president. Rev. James E. Dargan assisted in administering the eucharist.

THRONG IN ATTENDANCE AT R. W. OLIVER FUNERAL

At the recent funeral in Providence of Richard W. Oliver, dean of the evening school of the Providence Bible institute and organist and radio director of the Dudley Radio Carollers, 1,800 persons crowded the Providence Gospel Center and 800 others were turned away. Mr. Oliver was killed when an automobile in which he was riding was in collision with another machine in Providence.

The services started at 2 o'clock and lasted for three hours. Singing Mr. Oliver's own Gospel music compositions at the services was F. Carlton Booth, tenor soloist of the Carollers, and driver of the machine in which Mr. Oliver met his death. Seventy-five telegrams of sympathy were received from all parts of the world and the floral offerings, which numbered 60, came from many cities of this country. The bearers were Delwyn Martin, Earl Mathewson, Herbert Cole, Arthur Holbrook, Gilbert Maine and Carl Frederickson, and there was a cortege of 50 automobiles to go to the North Burial Ground for the commital services at which there was an attendance of 250.

OREGON TRAIL PICTURES SHOWN AT C. A. R. MEETING

The November meeting of Gen. Ebenezer Huntington society, Children of the American Revolution, was held at 4 o'clock on Friday afternoon at Mrs. Arnaud LaPierre's, 14 Elm avenue, Norwich Town, the junior president, Agnes Greenman, presiding.

The usual opening exercises were followed by reports of the officers and committees.

As this is the "Year of Remembrance" when the opening of the Oregon Trail is being celebrated, from April 10th when the first covered wagon started over the trail, to December 29th, Ezra Meeker's birthday, maps and pictures connected with this Oregon Trail were shown, and pictures of some of the markers already erected. A picture of the memorial half dollar, with the covered wagon on one side, was among the material exhibited.

In contrast with this trail now celebrating its one hundredth year, a short talk on a much older road was given, that of the Old Boston Post road, which was first used as a post road in 1673. The post rider started from New York for Boston, and returned to New York in a month.

Beginning at Boston, pictures were shown of the many interesting places which may still be seen along this Lower Post road, as it was at first called, these all having an historical interest. A side trip to Newport showed pictures of the house, now marked with a tablet, where Gen. Rochambeau stayed at the time when he led the French troops first to Providence, then over through Plainfield and Canterbury, where the society made their pilgrimage in October, and then on to Yorktown.

The post card machine was operated by Mrs. La Pierre, and after the Post Road cards were shown, she delighted the members by showing the motion pictures of the society which she took at the Flag day meeting at Gardner lake, in 1929. The members had an opportunity of seeing how they looked when they saluted the flag.

Refreshments were served by Mrs. LaPierre and her committee. The next meeting of the society will be held on December 5, with Nancie B. Greenman, the topic to be "Old Doorways in Norwich."

Looking for Book Crook

According to a warning issued by the Educators association of New York, that organization is anxious to get its hands on an alleged imposter by the name of William Kaufman, but who changes his name in every town where he visits and is defrauding the public in Connecticut and Rhode Island by collecting deposits ostensibly on "The Volume Library," but without any authorization from the association. Kaufman's method, according to the association is to offer the books for about one-tenth of their real price, collect a deposit and give a receipt. The police of about seven states want this man, it is claimed, but the association has been unable to catch up with him for three years.

Kauffman is about 35 years of age, rather stout, inclined toward baldness, and has a very pleasing manner.

New York has opened a clinic for preventive medicine among children.

FOUR CONNECTICUT WOMEN ON SUFFRAGE HONOR ROLL

Walton H. Hamilton, professor of constitutional law at the Yale Law school, will give the dinner address at the convention of the Connecticut League of Women Voters in Bridgeport Wednesday evening. Speaking on "The Place of the Supreme Court in American Life," Mr. Hamilton will show the increasingly close relationship between business and the law in this country.

Another feature at the convention dinner will be the presentation of the honor roll of Connecticut's woman suffrage workers. Mrs. William P. Couch of Cromwell, chairman of the anniversary and memorial plan committee, will present the names of 32 women, living and dead, who are being honored ten years after the suffrage victory for their gallant and inspired work in the suffrage battle.

The names of four Connecticut women are to be inscribed on a national roll of honor at the headquarters of the National League of Women Voters in Washington. They are Isabella Beecher Hooker of Hartford, Katharine Ludington of Lyme, Caroline Ruutz-Rees of Greenwich, and Charlotte Perkins Gilman of Norwich. All living members on the honor roll have been invited to attend the convention dinner. It is planned to have brief addresses by Miss Ludington, Miss Ruutz-Rees, Mrs. Gilman and Mrs. Katharine Houghton Hepburn, former president of the Connecticut Woman Suffrage association.

The first event on the afternoon program is the annual football game between Westminster school and Hopkins grammer school. Headmasters will dine at Mr. McOrmond's residence and remain for the evening. Some will stay over night.

Headmasters expected to attend the meeting include: Rev. Frank H. Bigelow of Rectory school, Pomfret; Eugene W. Ellis of Woodstock academy, Woodstock; Rev. Dr. Brownell Gage of Suffield school, Suffield.

C. V. ROAD TO PLACE REFLECTOR CROSSING SIGNS

Reflector type warning signs are to be installed at 13 crossings of the Central Vermont railway along its line in Connecticut to the Massachusetts state line in compliance with orders of the state public utilities commission. Beams from automobile headlights approaching the crossings will be reflected from the signals.

The orders of the public utilities commission have just been issued. A previous order pertaining to a flagman at South Windham was amended to permit the railroad to maintain a flagman at South Windham grade crossing from 6:30 o'clock in the morning to 5:40 o'clock in the afternoon instead of until 7 o'clock, p. m., as heretofore.

$87,476.60 UNEXPLAINED DEFICIENCY IN TOWN ACCOUNTS OF WINDHAM

Fact Disclosed in Report Presented by W. A. Musgraves, Certified Public Accountant, Who Has Audited the Books For a Period Covering Eleven Years—Report Shows a Town Indebtedness of $1,308,450

Special to The Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, Nov. 17.— An unexplained deficiency of $87,476.68 and a total town indebtedness of $1,308,450 is shown in the audit of the town books as presented in the report late this afternoon by W. A. Musgraves, certified public accountant, to First Selectman Albert L. French. The report, which shows an audit covering a period of 11 years from Sept. 15, 1919, to Sept. 15, 1930, is a voluminous one and brings out in considerable detail transactions, mainly in the office of town treasurer, which position had been held for the past 30 years by Frank P. Fenton, who is now succeeded by Harold C. Lincoln, elected in the October elections.

Gleanings from the opening statement as gained by a representative of this paper indicate that the auditors who have been at work since September had considerable difficulty in arriving at balances. In the opening statement is included the following sentence: "Not one ledger account showing the make-up of the assets, liabilities, revenue and expenditures of the town of Windham during any part of the period from Sept. 1, 1919, to Sept. 15, 1930, was presented to or seen by us." There is no controlling balance of aggregated back taxes. Cash disbursements pertaining to borrowed money, bonds redeemed, bond interest and borrowed money interest were recorded for only part of the years in any available record and the liabilities are nowhere exhibited, according to the opening statement. Cash receipts for the period from Sept. 16, 1925, to Sept. 15, 1329, have the appearance of being recently prepared prior to and during the examination, the statement continues. There was no detail record of deposits available to the auditors, it is claimed, until after the analysis was made when a statement covering a two and a half year period was presented. Financial reports were entirely lacking and represented as nonexistant.

Consolidated Statement

In the consolidated statement of assets and liabilities an outstanding bonded indebtedness of $644,000 and a current indebtedness of $664,450 shown, making a total town indebtedness of $1,308,450. This amount is $35,300 higher than the indebtedness shown in the last town report, which was given as $1,273,150. The current indebtedness is made up of orders on banks, $335,000 and individuals, $329,450. On the matter of the town deposit fund and school fund liabilities a decrepancy is shown. In the town deposit fund established with a principle, $6,115.70 the fund of $823.30 is shown as left intact, while in the school fund of $947 the whole amount has been utilized, indicating a total of $6,239.40 to be replaced to these two accounts. On these two items the report states: "We understand that the liability to replace the above fund is represented by borrowed money orders. These orders were not presented."

Unexplained Deficiency

Under the general heading of unexplained deficiency shown as amounting to $87,476.68 the reports state about this deficiency that "it comprises cash receipts unaccounted for and disbursements unexplained in the respective amounts of $68,540.58 and $18,936.10.

"The cash receipts unaccounted for apparently include transactions representing liberty bonds in the sinking fund recorded as and presumed to have been liquidated April 1, 1925, to retire bonds outstanding of the town of Windham."

The report shows total proceeds from libery bonds deposited to Frank P. Fenton's personal account of $18,541.07.

On this matter of liberty bonds the auditors report: "We were unable to find any deposits to the credit of the town of Windham for the proceeds from the sale of liberty bonds during the period or for interest from Sept. 16, 1920, to Sept. 15, 1930."

Statement No. 15

Statement Number 15 in the report is of the transactions or handling of funds in which cash receipts unaccounted for amounting to $68,540.58 are shown. The statement in brief covering the audit period follows: Accountable cash receipts, $5,472,538.91; total cash accounted for $5,379,276.51; receipts unaccounted for $93,262.40; deduct cash, stamps, $70.88; old check collected (Sept. 22, 1930, Nov. 6, 1930), $21,377.50; old checks outstanding never presented for collection, $3,283.94; total deductions, $24,721.82; balance representing cash receipts unaccounted for, $68,540.58. It is noted that old checks collected amount to over $21,000, which had been received by the town treasurer but never presented for deposit.

$1,500,000 SUIT AGAINST ENGINEERS' BROTHERHOOD

CLEVELAND, Nov. 17—(AP)—A $1,500,000 suit against the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, the Brotherhood Holding company, and officers of the two organizations, asking judgment and an accounting as a result of some of the financial operations of the organizations, was filed in federal court today by stockholders of the company.

It was alleged by Annette Myers and Peter C. Myers of Willmar, Minn., plaintiffs, that the company, during the operation of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers National bank here, took over a large number of doubtful loans. The paper was paid for by money realized on stock sales, it was alleged.

It was charged that the action was "in violation of the trust reposed in the management of the holding company."

STUDENTS ON STRIKE AT MONTANA STATE COLLEGE

BOZEMAN MONT., Nov. 17—(AP)—Montana State college students on strike against faculty social regulations absented themselves from classes again today, and refused a plea of President Alfred Atkinson to return to work.

President Atkinson, now in Washington, D. C., telegraphed his request. The faculty at a meeting also failed to arrive at any solution of the impasse. The strike began Friday.

Having acceded to demands of the students regarding hours in residence, the faculty said it had no power to go further. The students demand an equal voice with the faculty in arranging social regulations and full power over rally arrangements.

SCHUYLER MERRITT CAMPAIGN FUND $3,607

HARTFORD, Nov. 17—(AP)—The campaign fund of Schuyler Merritt, of Stamford, republican candidate for representative in congress from the fourth district, which totaled $3,607, is the largest yet disclosed by the statements of political agents filed with the secretary of the state at the close of business today. Other large sums accounted for included those of Edward E. Goss, who secured election as representative in congress from the fifth district at an expense of $1,845, and Ernest E. Rogers, republican nominee for governor, who spent $2,405.

35 OF CREW ON STRANDED SHIP OFF MONTAUK POINT

NEW YORK, Nov. 17—(AP)—Stranded on the grounded freighter Harry Bowen in a thick fog tonight, 35 members of the crew prepared to spend several more hours on the vessel, perched on a rocky reef off Montauk Point.

Although the fog made it impossible for coast guardsmen on the shore to see the Harry Bowen, the men on board signalled they intended to man the pumps all night and trust in the prospects for a quiet sea. There was little sea running tonight and coast guardsmen believed the injuries to the freighter were so slight that she probably would weather the night.

Meanwhile two coast guard cutters and a destroyer prepared to tow the freighter off the reef when high water came at 11 p. m.

The crew of 22 on the fishing trawler Petrel were taken from the vessel, aground off Cat Rock cove, Block Island, just before noon by coast guardsmen in surf boats.

Both vessels had run aground in the fog that has enveloped the Atlantic seaboard from the Canadian border to Florida and as far inland as Pittsburgh, and which has tangled shipping along the coast and land and air traffic for the past three days. No relief for the next 24 hours was forecast by the weather bureau.

ELECTIONS IN POLLAND A VICTORY FOR PILSUSKI

WARSAW, Poland, Nov. 17—(AP)—Marshall Pilsudski, the iron man of Poland, who had only 118 votes in the parliament last August came out of the elections with 247 out of the 444 seats and today was in control of the house.

But big as his gain was he did not get the two-thirds majority he wanted to insure amendment of the constitution. His supporters were confident however, that he would get enough votes from the other camps to make up the majority he needs.

The racial minorities—the Ukrainians, White Russians, Germans and Jews—took a beating in the elections. When the parliament was dissolved last August they had a total of 83 seats, now they have only 35.

The Polish opposition also suffered, they used to have 216 deputies, the elections left them with only 157, not including five communists.

Levine himself ridiculed the accusations, as did his attorney, but would not divulge their nature. The attorney said the affair merely was a matter of police suspicion.

Critical Week For British Industries

Railway Workers and Min[illegible] Will Contest Propose[illegible] [illegible]ductions in Wages

LONDON, Nov. 17—(AP)—Britain's railway and mining industries entered a critical week today as conferences opened between employers and union officials over proposed wage cuts.

Railway operators seek to cut a million and a half pounds a year from their shop payrolls in addition to reductions of nine and a half millions previously demanded in traffic personnel pay.

They propose to reduce the shopman's "war wage"—a bonus established during the World war—which provides for payment of six shillings sixpence (about $1.60) for piece workers, and brings the "war wage" to ten shillings (about $2.50 a week.

The union spokesmen said they would think that over, but some of them said privately that any attempt at wage cuts would be bitterly opposed.

Mine owners conferred with union officials at Cardiff regarding a new wage and time agreement to replace one which expires on November 30, but the meeting adjourned without accomplishing anything.

The situation in the mining industry, while not likely to come to a head as quickly as the railways dispute, may result in even more serious consequences. It is much more complicated than the railways problem because of different influences which apply to the situation in the several mine fields.

An agreement now in force gives the miner a working day of seven and a half hours instead of the eight he worked before the pact was signed. Owners in some fields have insisted that the shorter day shall involve a wage reduction. The miners have asserted they never will accept a wage cut.

At the conclusion of today's meeting one union spokesman described the situation as exceedingly grave.

Both sides, however, indicated they would exert every effort to avert a possible strike in the country's two leading industries. Should their efforts be unsuccessful hundreds of thousands of men would be added to the already enormous list of unemployed which continues to be Britain's most serious domestic problem.

EXCEPTIONS TO STATEMENT MADE BY BISHOP MANNING

Manning on Oct. 28 that the Episcopal church is "fundamentally and definitely Catholic" was made today in a statement issued to the congregations of eleven Manhattan churches and signed by their rectors.

The statement, seven thousand copies of which were printed, said the Episcopal church was Protestant. It was signed by eleven rectors and two former rectors. It did not mention Bishop Manning by name but churchmen generally understood it to be the answer of the part of the church opposed to the bishop's opinion.

39 Arkansas Banks [illegible]pend Payments

[illegible]ction Due to Public Hysteria and Taken As a Precautionary Measure

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., Nov. 17—(AP)—Thirty-nine banks in Arkansas today suspended business and four closed for liquidation or reorganization.

The suspensions followed announcement last night by the American-Exchange Trust company of Little Rock, largest bank in the state, that it was suspending payments for five days.

Most of the banks, including American-Exchange, are affiliated through A. B. Banks and Company, Little Rock.

The combined deposits were given as approximately $26,000,000 on the date of the last bank call in September.

All but two of the institutions affected are state banks.

Suspension of payments for five days is allowed by law. Forty-six banks affiliated with the American-Exchange Trust company were notified of its action.

Thirty-four of these failed to open today as a precautionary measure for protection of depositors, officials announced, or closed during the day when withdrawals began to jeopardize their condition.

The American-Exchange board said it was forced to take the action because of public hysteria resulting from the receivership of Caldwell and Company, Nashville, Tenn., investment bankers.

A. B. Banks, the president, announced last Friday local capitalists had purchased all of Caldwell and Company's interest in the bank.

The largest banks in the group are the American-Exchange, the Merchants and Planters Trust company, Pine Bluff, and the Merchants and Planters bank, Helena. The three had combined deposits of close to $18,000,000 at the last bank call.

Withdrawals from the American-Exchange, however, amounted to about $4,000,000 during the last few days, the board said.

Most of the nine independent banks which closed, six of them under a five day suspension, were in the immediate territories of the group institutions affected.

Officials of A. B. Banks and Company expressed the belief that more than half the banks would reopen.

PALESTINE MANDATE DEBATED IN COMMONS

LONDON, Nov. 17—(AP)—Administration of the British mandate in Palestine was vigorously attacked in the house of commons today by David Lloyd George, liberal leader, and as vigorously defended by the laborite government.

At the conclusion of the debate between the former premier and Drummond Shiels, under-secretary of state for the colonies, Prime Minister MacDonald reaffirmed the government's intention to carry out the mandate terms in full.

Lloyd George, in an attack on the government's recent white paper on its policy in Palestine, declared he could only understand it on the supposition it was written by anti-semitic officials.

Mr. Shiels, replying for the government, insisted the mandate would be carried out and disclosed a new government development scheme by which it is proposed to settle approximately 10,000 families on the land at an expenditure of $12,500,000. The scheme would be supported by the government assisted by a loan.

He contended there was an Arab as well as a Jewish viewpoint and that the former had not been reflected in parliament as much as the Jewish.

CHICAGO, Nov. 17—(AP)—Michael Jakubiak, 44, confessed he walked out to meet his wife as she returned from work and stabbed her to death as he kissed her, was sentenced to prison for 50 years today. He pleaded guilty. Judge Joseph B. David refused to impose the death penalty. He stipulated that each anniversary of the murder Jakubiak must spend in solitary confinement.

SHORTS IN GRAIN FUTURES DRIVEN TO COVER BY STABILIZATION MOVE

CHICAGO, Nov. 17—(AP)—In a session that held special significance because of the reentry into the wheat pit of government sponsored agencies, grain prices advanced materially in all principal markets today. Net gains of wheat futures in Chicago were 1-4 to 3 3-8 cents a bushel.

It was the first session since Chairman Alexander Legge of the federal farm board had confirmed officially the rumors that the stabilization corporation was buying wheat. Hence the blackboards and tickers were watched closely to see what effect the government's atempt to "prevent unwarranted price declines" would have.

The story, at the end of a day in which the news was principally of the farm board, was told in the closing figures for Chicago wheat futures, old contract: December 73 1-2-3-4 (up 1-4 to 3-4 cent); March 75-75 1-8 (up 2 to 2 1-4 cents); May 76 3-8-1-2 (up 2 1-4 to 2 3-4 cents): July (new contract) 76 5-8-1-2 (up 2 7-8 to 3 3-8 cents).

Other markets in this country reported similar increases and a still greater gain was made in the Winnipeg wheat pit, after the report that Canadian bankers had agreed not to force the sale of the wheat pool holdings. Whereas the Winnipeg futures had been abnormally under Chicago figures, as much as 15 cents. Today's closing prices showed a spread of only 11 1-4-1-3 cents in the December column and 9 1-8-1-4 in the May.

The Chicago advances were made soon after an inauspicious opening. Within 15 minutes, short traders, apparently apprehensive concerning the governments' plans, had hurriedly bought in to fulfill their contracts and had sent the market rapidly into higher ground, most futures gaining from one to two cents.

After an early flurry the market showed some uneasiness but held fairly steady, despite new statements by farm board executives to the effect that the government was buying cash wheat as well as futures and was buying in all principal markets.

Although Chairman Legee was quoted in Washington as saying the stabilization board's recent purchases of wheat futures would probably total about 10,000,000 bushels, estimates circulated among grain traders here were that the figure was nearer 20,000,000.

Representatives of five of the leading American grain exchanges—Chicago, Kansas City, St. Louis, Omaha and Minneapolis—met today but refused to reveal the subject up for discussion. It was announced, however, that the meeting was called before the government's recent stabilization efforts became known.

PREMIERS TO PROTECT CANADIAN GRAIN MARKET

TORONTO, Nov. 17—(AP)—Assurance that dumping of wheat on the Canadian grain market would not be permitted was given today by the premiers of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta at the conclusion of a conference with officials of several Canadian banks.

This assurance was in line with denials by western banking officials that the banks were pressing the wheat pools for payments, thus forcing the pools to unload on the weakened market.

The results of the conference were described as "satisfactory" in a statement by the three premiers.

"The general improved tone at the opening of the market today is believed to be the result of action already taken," they said.

GENERAL STRIKE SPREADS TO LARGE CITIES OF SPAIN

In Barcelona 200,000 Factory Workers Walked-Out and Fought With Police in the Streets—One Workman Was Killed and Several Others Wounded—Red Flag of Revolution Was Raised—Disorders Reported in Valencia and Other Cities

BARCELONA, Spain, [illegible] —(AP)—The red flag of revolution was raised in the streets of this busiest industrial city in Spain today as thousands of workers walked out in a general strike and fought with police in the streets, cheering "the republic."

Bread lines were forming tonight, for stores had been closed all day. Bakeries had ceased to function for the bakers had joined the strike. Police were ready to man the ovens as was done in Madrid last week and the menace of a food shortage appeared.

What had begun as a strike for more pay and shorter hours tonight had assumed the aspect of a major political—possibly revolutionary—movement, and the authorities were reaching out for communist agitators whom they saddled with the blame for the disturbance.

Meanwhile, the strike had spread to other large cities in virtually every section of the country.

Two hundred thousand factory workers walked out in Barcelona; rioting disrupted the transportation services and closed most of the stores, theatres and cafes.

There appeared to be no immediate danger of a food famine such as frightened Madrid for a time, but troops were brought in to reinforce the police and machine guns were kept ready as a precaution.

The disorders, blamed on communist agitators, spread to Valencia and other cities. Twenty thousand coal miners who struck last week at Asturias were reported returning to work; at Oviedo, on the northwestern [illegible], another strike was subsiding, and Madrid's general strike had ended this morning.

The police had no time today to discuss the number of casualties, but it appeared certain that a score or more persons had been injured in the rioting.

Authorities tonight raided a mass meeting of the printers union, arresting about 200. All except 80 were released later but those held were charged with fomenting strike disorders and giving revolutionary utterances.

The police also dispersed a large crowd which gathered in front of a hotel to cheer Primo Carnera, the Italian boxer, who was inside.

The streets thinned out by midnight but police still maintained a close watch.

It was learned that the strikers sent agitators to nearby towns in an effort to spread the movement, while other agitators attempted to halt the work of the electric light and power employes. The latter movement did not succeed.

Among those gravely wounded today was Luis Pena Castelvi, a newspaper employe.

ONE WORKMAN KILLED; SEVERAL OTHERS WOUNDED

BARCELONA, Spain, Nov. 17—(AP)—One workman was killed and several others were seriously wounded tonight in a gun-fight between police and rioting strikers.

CONFESSES SHOOTING OF DARIEN POLICEMAN

BRIDGEPORT, Nov. 17—(AP)—After a five hour grilling tonight in the office of State's Attorney William H. Comley, Jerome Melville, 38, New York city, confessed that he shot down Sergeant Amos R. Anderson in Darien early today, the state's attorney said.

Authorities said they had established that Melville, who early today was thought by Norwalk police to be Fred Burke, notorious midwest gangster, was the proprietor of a battery station at his home address.

Melville, who was arrested in Norwalk earlier in the day on a charge of assault with intent to kill, was brought here by County Detective William Kearns and State Officer William Visokay, of the Westport barracks, to be questioned by State's Attorney Comley. Previously, he had been identified by Anderson, known as the "lone wolf" of the Darien police department, and Carl Alexander, taxicab driver, as the man who had fired at the police officer.

Officials said that in his confession, Melville admitted he had been arrested on two occasions for burglary, but was discharged because of lack of evidence. He told police that he did not know the identity of the two companions who were in the car at the time of the shooting and said he had picked them up in the Bronx after they had requested a ride to New London.

The belief that Melville might be Burke, wanted in the mid-west for the killing of a policeman, arose when he told Norwalk police that his wife's name was Conley. One of Burke's aliases was Bob Conley.

Photographs and fingerprints of Melville were sent to New York for comparison with those of Burke.

AGUINALDO TO FORM NEW FILIPINO POLITICAL PARTY

MANILA, Nov. 17—(AP)—General Emilio Aguinaldo, who led a Philippine insurrection against the United States and has been friendly to the American government ever since, announced tonight he would form a new political party in the islands.

Aguinaldo denounced present parties and charged Manuel Roxas, speaker of the Philippine house, with double dealing at Washington, where he went as member of an independence mission.

Aguinaldo's adherents plan to meet next week and draw up a platform in what is regarded as the most significant political movement here in fifteen years.

Aguinaldo has consistently cooperated with American administrators in the Philippines and has said he favors ultimate freedom for the archipelago after gradual preparation. In 1923 in his address as president of the Veterans of the Philippine Revolution, he said:

"When the time comes, the United States will grant you freedom."

TRIAL TRANSFERRED FROM DALLAS TO AUSTIN

DALLAS, Texas, Nov. 17—(AP)—Sentiment against punishment of persons accused of burning the courthouse at Sherman, Texas, in a riot which resulted in the death of George Hughes, Negro charged with attacking a white woman, balked prosecution of the fourteen defendants here today.

Man after man called for prospective jury service declared he would not vote to send the accused to the penitentiary.

Judge C. A. Pippen than transferred the cases to Austin, Texas, saying it was evident the state could not obtain a fair trial in Dallas, to which the cases had been sent from Sherman.

He denounced the attitude of the prospective jurors.

"If you won't enforce one law you can't criticize another man for not enforcing another law," he said.

Ewald for their support of his nomination to the city magistracy, was selected late today in supreme court. The twelfth juror was accepted at 5:25 p. m.

CLOUDBURST IN DARIEN WITH ELECTRICAL STORM

DARIEN, Nov. 17—(AP)—The worst cloudburst in the memory of Darien residents struck the town tonight, inundating streets, raising havoc with all electrical lines including those of the New Haven railroad, and injuring Police Sergeant Frank Standing, on desk duty in police headquarters, knocked unconscious by a flash of lightning which blew out the telephone switch board in police headquarters. He required medical treatment by Dr. Walter R. Van Tassel.

Transformers on the street lighting system and the New Haven road power lines blew out with spectacular illumination. The street and house lighting systems, all traffic lights, the town fire alarm system and the Darien bank alarm, were all disabled.

The downpour continued for half an hour, marked by blinding flashes of lightning and terrific claps of thunder.

ENDURING FATIGUE IN MID-AFTERNOON IS NOT ADVISABLE

Fagged System Invites Sickness, Inefficiency — Renew Vigor by Eating a Sweet

Medical investigations show that daily fatigue not only makes the system susceptible to illness and organic troubles, but also lessens one's efficiency. Tired people, especially those engaged in offices and stores, have difficulty in concentrating or "keeping awake" on the job.

Most business people find that four o'clock is their zero hour as far as vitality is concerned. To renew vigor at this time, many men and women take a moment to eat or drink something sweet. The results are surprising—almost instantly fatigue is overcome.

Medical men and food scientists who have experimented along these lines say that the renewed vigor is caused by the refined sugar in the food or beverage. Sugar nourishes the body very quickly and when this occurs fatigue disappears.

Americans, it is said, are more subject to business fatigue than any other nationality. However, American workers can quickly get candy, ice cream, cakes and beverages everywhere. A glass of water sweetened with sugar—the "athlete's cocktail" — is reviving. Most foods are more delicious and nourishing with refined sugar. The Sugar Institute.

Forecast

This will be the way of it.
You shall have the say of it.
There will be a garden green
And a kitchen white and clean.
There will be some rooms with chintz
And a few well chosen prints.
There will be some chairs as kind
As are verses to the mind.
There will be whole shelves of books,
And a tree for wrens and rooks.
And for leaves to wink their warning
Through our window in the morning.
And the sea somewhere below
Whispering soft and sad and slow,
And a road for tinkers' carts
Traveling from foreign parts
I shall have a pipe to smoke
As I sit beneath our oak,
And your fingers will be busy
With the stitch that makes me dizzy,
And the children will be chubby,
Just as thin—and just as grubby;
For it's hard to keep them tubby
If you wish them as they are.
And at night we'll see our star—
Yes, our own peculiar star—
Burning silver in the Heavens
On a world released from war.
Yes, I know that's far, so far;
But that will be the way of it.
And you shall have the say of it!

The Heart's Summer

The cold blast at the casement beats;
The window-panes are white;
The snow whirls through the empty streets;
It is a dreary night!
Sit down, old friend, the wine-cups wait;
Fill to o'erflowing, fill!
Though winter howleth at the gate,
In our hearts 't is summer still

For we-full many summer joys
And greenwood sports have shared,
When, free and ever-roving boys,
The rocks, the streams, we dared;
And, as I looked upon thy face,
Back, back o'er years of ill,
My heart flies to that happy place,
Where it is summer still.

Yes, though like sere leaves on the ground,
Our early hopes are strewn,
And cherished flowers lie dead around,
And singing birds are flown,
The verdure is not faded quite,
Not mute all tones that thrill;
And seeing, hearing thee tonight,
In my heart 'tis summer still.

Fill up! The olden times come back
With light and life once more;
We scan the Future's sunny track
From Youth's enchanted shore;
The lost return; through fields of bloom
We wander at our will;
Gone is the winter's angry gloom—
In our hearts 'tis summer still.

—Epes Sargent.

MANY ATTEND LEGION MINSTREL AND DANCE

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, Nov. 17—A large audience enjoyed the minstrel show and dance—an annual event—presented in the town hall this evening under the auspices of Leo J. L'Homme post, American Legion. There were upwards of 60 in the cast, recruited from the ranks of the younger amateur talent in town. Joseph A. Charbonneau was the director and Mrs. Richard Martin the pianist.

The show was given a typical minstrel opening. Andrew Haveles was interlocutor. On the ends were Peter Berris, Philip Clarke, George Kesaris, David Heiman, Paul Legace and James Fisher.

The opening number was sung by a chorus of sixty voices. Specialties and solos later introduced: Nobody Cares If I Am Blue, sung by Miss Alma Frechette; banjo duet, Charles King and son; buck and wing dance, Samuel Lucidi; When the Organ Plays at Twilight, sung By Aldor Meunier; My Baby Just Cares for Me; song by the end men; If I Could Be With You, sung by Miss Estelle Boucher; guitar duet, John Huntington and Earl Chandler; the Three Diamonds, comedy dance act featuring three eccentric dancers; the masked singer, a mysterious baritone; Until We Meet Again, Sweetheart, sung by Andreas Haveles; Barnacle Bill, the Sailor, sung by Philip Clarke and Peter Berris; Baby, Won't You Please Come Home to Me?, sung by Scott Page; finale.

The proceeds from the affair will be added to the building fund that the post is accumulating.

OBITUARY

H. Edward Lillibridge

Announcement was made here this morning of the death of H. Edward Lillibridge in a Waterbury hospital late Sunday. Mr. Lillibridge had been dangerously ill with septic poisoning the past week. He was born here in Danielson and obtained his education in local schools. His parents were Henry C. and Minnie Wetherell Lillibridge. He was 47 years of age.

Twenty-six years ago Mr. Lillibridge became an assistant to A. F. Wood in the undertaking business and remained with him for a term of years. Later he was engaged in the same line of work with L. E. Smith at Putnam. He left that city to enter the employ of an undertaking concern in Waterbury and ever since has been engaged with the work there and in Naugatuck. He left Danielson 18 years ago.

Mr. and Mrs. A. F. Wood, Mrs. Jennie Humphrey and Miss Lillian E. Bailey are to go to Naugatuck, where he made his home, to attend the funeral services at St. Michael's Episcopal church, of which he was a member. The body will be taken to Springfield for cremation, and within a few days the ashes will be brought here for burial.

Mr. Lillibridge leaves his wife, who prior to their marriage was Miss Clara White of Danielson, a son, Clayton, and his mother, who is a resident here. Vernon H. Wetherell of Danielson is his uncle.

Danielson Banks Release $100,000

A fortune in Christmas club money will be released by Danielson's banks in early December to an army of people who have saved regularly each week since last December. Definite figures as to the amount are not available, but it likely will be close to $100,000, if figures for other recent years are a good basis of comparison. Hundreds of club members will receive checks. These people are representative of all the communities that do business with Danielson's banks, so there will be a wide distribution of the money. Club members have made deposits weekly from 25 cents up to $5 and, in some instances, $10.

Exact dates for release have not been made by the banks as yet. Among business men there is some difference of opinion as to whether local business benefits most by having the money come into circulation in the early days of December or only a week to ten days before Christmas. This year, however, the idea of an early release appears to be getting the most support, and this largely due to the impression that holiday business will quickly pick up volume once the Christmas club money is available for spending. The banks have given no indication as yet as to when they will send out the checks.

Two Released From Custody

Blanche LaFlamme of Pawtucket and George LeTendre of Central Falls have been released from custody by local state officers after a checkup on them and a conference between the officers and Prosecuting Attorney Arthur G. Bill. They were asked, however, to sign a waiver, and did, on the gallon of hootch and the case of beer that was found in the machine in which they were riding yesterday when State Officer Martin stopped them for investigation of the machine. It appears that the Rhode Island couple had ventured into Danielson to join in a little party with some friends resident in the northern section of this community and had brought along some refreshments with which to pep it up.

Big Drive on Rats Friday

Next Friday night brings the great drive to exterminate the rats of Windham county. The Windham County Farmers' association, co-operating with a representative of a bureau of the Federal government has undertaken the arrangement of the "big banquet", that it is anticipated will send thousands of the county's rats to whatever may be the equivalent of their happy hunting ground.

Orders for the bait that will be used should be placed at once with the office of the County Farmers' association in Putnam. All orders must be in not later than Wednesday evening.

Here in Danielson this distribution of orders will be made at Meech's store, the only bait station that will be established in Killingly. In Brooklyn the bait will be at Stetson's store and in Hampton at A. R. Saunders'. Two distribution stations will be established in the town of Plainfield—in Moosup and in Plainfield village at the Salisbury stores. The bait is to be taken away Friday afternoon and put out for rats that evening. The greater the number of those who order bait and following the instructions that will be furnished for setting it out, the greater the benefit that will accrue in ridding the area of rats. The Farmer's association hopes that a great many persons will co-operate.

Dedication of Temple Tuesday

Announcement was made today that Tuesday evening of next week has been selected as the time for the dedication of the enlarged and improved Masonic temple on Broad street. Officers of the Grand lodge of Connecticut, of which Attorney E. L. Darbie of Danielson is grand master and a past master of Moriah lodge, will officiate. A feature of the occasion will be the banquet, to be served at 7 o'clock in the new banquet hall. Following the banquet the dedicatory exercises are to be held. Alterations and extensions have been underway at the temple since last summer.

There was another accident this afternoon at the intersection of the two state highways at Brooklyn Center, a point that has come to be considered a dangerous one.

Riding with her husband, both being vaudeville artists, Mrs. William P. Murphy of 4947 Claxton avenue, St. Louis, Mo., was driving toward Danielson on the Hartford-Providence route. Coming south on the Pomfret-Canterbury route was Miss Mabel Dyer, operating another car. The cars met at the intersection. Mrs Murphy's car was damaged on the left side and Miss Dyer's car on the right side. The damage was estimated at about $50 to each machine. There were no arrests. The murky weather conditions and the wet highways were held to have been largely responsible for the accident. There were no personal injuries.

Because of the accidents and near accidents that have happened at this intersection since the Pomfret- Canterbury route was completed there has been considerable agitation for overhead warning lights to caution car operators of the danger at that point.

The clatter or broken tire chains against fenders was heard here today for the first time this season—careful drivers guarding against the danger of wet and slippery roads.

On Dec. 1, furnished bungalow, 5 rooms and bath to rent. Inquire at 241 Main St., or Tel. 144-4.—Adv,

Kid Brouillard, local boxer, received a gash across the bridge of the nose in the opening round of a bout in which he took part at Worcester the past week, and though bleeding profusely gamely continued and knocked out his man in the fourth round.

Young men who will be charged with having held up a truck at South Killingly a few weeks ago and robbed it of a quantity of silver bullion will be in the town court Saturday morning for a hearing.

On this fourth consecutive day of rain reports began to come in of increased water supply where there has been a shortage since last summer. Some wells that have been dry now have two feet of water or more.

A month ahead of the time that the real demand for them comes, carloads of Christmas trees are being sent, destined for the New York market and other large eastern cities.

Men of the Methodist Episcopal church are looking forward to an gather to hold a mock trial Tuesday especially pleasant evening when they evening.

"LONE WOLF" BURGLAR OPERATING AGAIN IN PUTNAM BUSINESS SECTION

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, Nov. 17—Police today were investigating details concerning a series of five attempted burglaries and two successful ones, which were committed Saturday evening, presumably by Putnam's lone wolf burglar who it appears has returned to his familiar haunts after an absence of two months. The breaks were reported Sunday morning and after an investigation was started, Captain Dubreuil and Sergt. Sponcey of the local police discovered freshly made jimmy marks in doors and windows of other business houses in the Main, Pomfret and Front street sections. Until late this afternoon no arrests had been made although suspects have been rounded up and will be questioned as to their whereabouts during the period of time the breaks are believed to have been committed.

First inkling that a burglary had been committed was Sunday morning, when a tire iron and hammer were found at the door to the rear entrance of the new Seder building in Bugbee square. The double doors had been forced, and entrance to the cellar of the W. T. Grant company had been made. Inventory made of stock in the basement indicated that nothing had been taken.

The second break was made at the hardware store of A. Gilman company on Main street. The doors opening off Canal street into the basement were pried open, but plans for an entrance to the store quarters were exploded when thieves were unsuccessful in forcing locks securing the doors leading to the cellar. Nothing of value was reported as having been taken, according to the Gilman company's report filed with tho police.

A cellar window in the Labby block on Canal street, leading to the apartment of Mr. and Mrs. A. Garceau was forced and an entrance to the building was secured through this channel, but plans for a robbery here were futile, when the perpetrators of the break found themselves in the Garceau cellar instead of in the basement of the building that ultimately would have led to the Observer company's offices on the second floor. Contents of the Garceau cellar were undisturbed, police were told today.

The next subject of the unsuccessful rampage is believed to have been the fruit store of A. Giraca and Sons, located in the court house block on Main street. Police base their conclusions that a break was attempted here on the strength of jimmy marks which were found in the casement of the door on Main street. The lock did not yield to the burglar's efforts however.

Continuing their investigation, the officers discovered marks made by blows from a jimmy in the lock fittings on the door of the drug store of J. A. P. Gagne, in the Seder building on lower Main street. The situation here was the same as in the Giraca store attempt, no entrance being made. Similar marks of a jimmy having been used, were found on the Union street doors of the Chandler and Morse hardware store in Union square, but no evidence of an entrance having been secured was found.

In what is believed to have been a final attempt to secure some recompense for his thus far unsuccessful nocturnal round, the burglar tried the door of the lower Main street fruit store of D. Luchessi, but was frightened away by the sudden appearance of occupants of a nearby tenement who happened upon the "lone wolf." Details of this are being guarded by the police in anticipation that the information obtained will eventually lead to the arrest of the man.

PUTNAM

POLICE WATCH FOR CAR CONTAINING FIREARM BANDITS

(Special to the Bulletin)

PUTNAM, Nov. 17—State and local police posted all routes along the Hartford-Providence highway, between Putnam and Sherman's corners in Chaplin, this afternoon in search of New York bandits alleged to have raided a large firearms supply house in Lawrence, Mass., at an early hour today and who late this afternoon were "seen" in Chaplin speeding in the general direction of Putnam. The bandit cars were laden with a cargo of various types of firearms and several thousand rounds of ammunition according to police. Heavily armed and prepared for an encounter with the supposed gangsters, the police squadron arrived in this city from the barracks at Danielson, and established a strategic point at the intersection of Pomfret and Church streets. A heavy moving van was arranged in position to be rolled from Church street onto Pomfret street, in case the desperados put in an appearance. This trap was manned by Putnam police, while the state officers under the personal command of Lieut. R. V. Urquhart, patrolled every stretch of highway and byway between this city and the point in Chaplin where the gunmen were reported to have passed.

Details concerning the Lawrence robbery were few, only numbers of the automobiles, being obtained. One car it was said, carried New York registration plates and a second, a Willys-Knight sedan bore Massachusetts numbers. The efforts of the police to bring about an apprehension met no success, for at a late hour tonight the cars had not been seen, although the search for them continued in belief that the gang had taken cover in the woodlands to await nightfall when they would proceed.

First information that the firearms supply house raiders had chosen Connecticut for an escape was received on the tel-type printer at the police barracks in Danielson, at three o'clock this afternoon. The message advised that the men were heavily armed and were believed to be desperate characters.

Rev. and Mrs. Frank H. Bigelow, of Pomfret, who conduct the Rectory school there are planning for an extension to the school athletic field which will be made this season. The layout is an excellent one and calls for a large expenditure. When completed the campus will be one of the finest possessed by any academy in the state and will include three tennis courts, two football gridirons of regulation size and a quarter mile running track. A local contractor has received the contract for the work and will start operations Tuesday morning, it was understood today.

Now is the time for owners of poultry and turkeys to guard against thieves according to a warning issued by state and local police. Past experiences point out that chicken thieves are particularly active during the week prior to Thanksgiving and the Christmas holidays. If simple precautionary measures are taken by poultrymen thefts can easily be prevented. In the country districts, it is recommended that the watch dog be stationed close to the henneries and in the urban sections the adoption of foolproof locks being used to secure hen coop doors are suggested.

Service inspectors of the S. N. E. Telephone company made a thorough inspection of their lines and instruments in the section east of Grove street, today in an effort to locate the cause of reported radio interference said to be marring broadcast reception. The work of the telephone trouble shooters is voluntary, since apparatus maintained by that company is so designed that the creation of an interference center by telephone outlets is impossible. During inspections made about several homes on Farrows street, where the broadcast disturbance is said to have been noted, the inspector made small replacements of telephone parts that have aided greatly in clearing up the distortion.

Michael L. White of Elen street was in Hartford Sunday.

Mrs. Annie E. Brown of this city left yesterday for Little Rock, Ark., where she will spend the winter with her son who is a resident there.

JEWETT CITY

MT. VERNON LODGE MEMBERS INVITED TO DEDICATION

Mt. Vernon lodge No. 75, F. and A. M., Walter A. Field, master, has received the invitation to attend the dedication ceremonies of the new Masonic Temple in Norwich, Friday evening. A considerable number will make up the local delegation.

J. C. Stafford, personal tax collector will be at Carey's Drug store daily till 9 p. m., except Tuesday's, for the purpose of collecting personal tax, due not later than Dec. 15th, 1930. Due to typographical error notices read 60 days after Nov. 15th.—Adv.

This week's attractive calendar of the First Congregational church of Griswold, Harold L. Arnold, minister, carries the following item:

"We are pleased to greet Priscilla May Norman and bid her welcome. May she delight her parents and household, and find life worth while because of her efforts to make it so."

Rat Bait Available

It appears that the item in this column last week in reference to borough people not being able to procure the doctured rat bait in connection with the extermination drive which is to take place Nov. 25, has had good effect. The Big Y Grain store is to give out the bait for those within the borough who are willing to do their part in cooperation with the state in its attempt to rid the county of these costly pests. The state department notified this correspondent, whose story the officials had read, of the local provision.

Christmas Accounts $20,000

The Jewett City Savings bank and the Jewett City Trust Co., will release approximately $20,000 as the result of their Christmas Savings clubs. This year interest will be paid on all accounts which have been kept up to date. The officials of both these borough institutions said Monday, that it was little less than wonderful how this form of saving grows in popularity.

Mrs. Jane Lester's Birthday

A few of the host of people, happy to be listed as friends of Mrs. Jane Lester of Pachaug, called at her home Monday afternoon to assist in the fitting celebration of her birthday. The genial hostess isn't telling the exact year when she arrived on this planet, but it is a safe bet that Mrs. Lester is all of twenty years younger than she is. Every one of Tuesday's visitors carried a little friendly gift, which, if values are to be measured by the sentiment that accompanied them, the tokens she received are priceless.

There was a great cake, with candles and all that, and as one circle of guests sat around the table, and partook of the bounteous lunch, with cake, candy, stuffed dates and ice cream for the "top off", they watched the candles burn low as the early twilight came. There were many stories told, with a pleasant list of reminiscences on the order of "When You and I Were Young." When the visitors had departed, and the spare room door was closed, Mrs. Lester said she had plenty in life to remind her of the goodness in this world, and of the kindness of many faithful friends.

ELECTRIC LAMPS AND FIXTURES FOR BRIDGE

The electric lamps and fixtures for the new bridge have been received and are ready to be put in place in the cement standards which are already erected on the cement balustrades.

The borough linemen will have charge of the installation, which includes the wiring of the whole structure as far as the Quinebaug cut-off where the lighting will end. When the floor and balustrades were poured the conduits were placed inside the cement so that the entire wiring system will be invisible. This lighting plan, which is to be a model of excellence, was made possible because of the votes of the town and borough to defray the expense in the town of Griswold.

Following three wet days in a string, during which over 2 inches of rain has fallen, the Quinebaug looks more like a river than at any time since early last spring. During last summer this river ran at lower levels than at any time during the periods of recent record.

The board of borough government, also as the electric light commission are very appreciative of the complimentary mention of the new white way, which appeared in the Putnam column of Monday's Bulletin, and say that if the correspondent will come down and look them over, that they are liable to get 'em up to something bordering on the Volstead percentage limit.

Rev. and Mrs. E. E. Scates were in Gardner, Mass., Friday and Saturday to attend the centennial celebration of the First Baptist church, being present at the roll call. Mr. Scates was pastor of this church for nine years, Mrs. Scates going there as his bride.

Mrs. W. A. Broadfoot entertains the Ladies' society of the Congregational church at her home Thursday afternoon.

Mrs. Henry E. Holden entertained the Pachaug Ladies' Aid society last week, twenty-one members being present, Mrs. F. D. Browning and Mrs William Edmonds were the committee who assisted the hostess.

No More Piles

How to End Terrible Agony Without Salves or Cutting

External treatments cannot permanently end Piles. Nor does cutting remove the cause.

The cause is internal—bad circulation of the blood in the lower bowel. The veins are flabby—the bowel walls weak—the parts almost dead. To quickly and safely rid yourself of piles an internal medicine must be used to heal and strengthen the affected parts.

Dr. J. S. Leonhardt, a specialist, after years of study discovered a real internal Pile remedy. He named his prescription HEM-ROID, and prescribed it for 1,000 patients, with the marvelous record of success in 960 cases, and then decided every Pile sufferer should be able to get HEM-ROID from their own druggist.

Don't waste time on external remedies or think of the pain and expense of an operation until you have tried HEM-ROID. Lee and Osgood will supply you and guarantee money-back if it does not end all Pile misery.

FEDERAL TAXES

During the last session of congress, and at the time when it was apparent that there was need for federal action in order to relieve the unemployment situation, the president recommended the cutting of the income tax by 1 per cent. It was figured that this would leave funds for other uses and reduce the burden upon the taxpayers. The plan was put into effect with the understanding that it should prevail only for one year. It was recognized that such a reduction would be continued if conditions warranted it, that is if the disbursements and revenue were such that it could be maintained without involving a deficit.

In the meantime business has not experienced the revival that was hoped, conditions in other countries have not been helpful, the effort to curtail expenditures has had to be checked in order not to have such curtailment adversely affect employment, revenue has not offset expenditures, and there are intimations that it will not be possible to continue the federal taxes for the next fiscal year.

It may be a bit too early to say definitely what can and what cannot be done but fears that it cannot be continued may be legitimately based upon conditions that prevail and the probability that considerable in the way of additional expenditures will be voted during the coming session of congress in order to provide for more federal projects as a means of reducing unemployment.

Naturally if expenditures are likely to be increased, money provided for projects which have been authorized and for which no appropriations have been made and new work undertaken, also for which no money has been voted, the difficulty of meeting this situation and yet keeping expenditures down where the tax cut can be continued is apparent.

What may develop between now and the time when it must be determined whether the tax cut can be continued is uncertain. Better conditions may change the whole complexion of things but there is but a short time in which it can manifest itself and influence action. It is a time, of course, when the desirability of continuing the tax cut is beyond question provided it can be done safely.

CHRISTMAS CLUBS

Conditions such as exist today emphasize the importance of putting something aside against just such a rainy day, for rainy days may be quite as much outside the control of the individual as within.

There are great numbers who have recognized and given heed to such possibilities and just now the members of Christmas clubs are in a position to congratulate themselves upon their foresight in systematic saving against the demands which they knew would come with the passing of time.

In Norwich many thousands of dollars are to be distributed among the Christmas club members within a short time. That it will be welcomed goes without saying. That there will be plenty of use for it in many ways is equally apparent. In Connecticut the disbursement will reach $13,00,000 and throughout the country it is estimated that 11,000,000 members of the clubs will receive $632,000,000. This represents a sizeable sum of money to be put into circulation at this season and its stimulation to trade is bound to be considerable.

When the money is received there is no restriction as to its use. It rests with the owner to decide. It may go for Christmas gifts, it may go for necessities, it may go to pay up loans, it may be kept for future use. In other years it has been found that Christmas purchases have taken about 38 per cent of it. Then about 30 per cent has gone into permanent saving and investment, 13 per cent into commitments, 6 per cent into insurance premiums while smaller percentages have gone for mortgage payments and interest, taxes, education, travel and charity.

It is very evident from the large number who have become interested that there is appreciation of systematic saving. It means the formation of a good habit and the abandonment of the practice of squandering. It means an independence and the elimination of worry as to where the means of meeting certain needs is going to come from. The practice of systematic saving was not started by the Christmas club but it has been one agency that has effectively demonstrated the value of it.

PROHIBITION

Whatever may be the direct result of the election upon prohibition it has had the immediate effect of stimulating the demand for action by the incoming session of congress. How far those demands will get remains to be seen.

There has been some increase in strength by the wets but the drys profess to being secure in their ability to control the situation. Particular interest is being centered upon the report that will be made by the commission that has been investigating enforcement. The findings and the reasons for making them will be certain to get careful study. Probably the commission doesn't expect that its report will satisfy everyone. It probably would be worth little if that were its purpose. What is wanted is as clear a setting forth of the facts as the commission can give following the study which it has been making. Interest is whetted of course because of the setiment that was expressed November 4. Even though prohibition has been made to loom as the issue for the next presidential campaign much water will go over the dam before that time.

While the drys are trying to make the best of the situation and endeavoring to believe that prohibition played no part in the recent contest, the very opposite attitude is being displayed by the wets. They are undisguisedly elated and they are making the most of the results in their demands for early action for the repeal of the 18th amendment. They point to the results of the state referendums that were held and to the election of wet democratic candidates in republican strongholds. They see in those revelations a growing public sentiment and they are doing no more than might be expected when they call for further action in keeping therewith.

If each of the parties endeavors to outstrip the other in demanding repeal it is a natural development of this year's election result. Drys in both parties are giving serious consideration to it. Wets are not trying to restrain them. Efforts are even being directed to getting a showdown in the present congress without waiting for the recently elected congress to take office. In the existing situation it is inevitable that the enforcement commission's report is eagerly awaited.

SAFER FLYING

With Massachusetts reporting 25 persons killed by automobiles during the past week and other states contributing their fatalities to a deplorably large total, attention is halted by the report from the department of commerce which shows that during the first half of the year there was a marked decrease in the number of accidents per mile flown in airplanes over the same period last year.

Ordinarily we thing it much safer to remain on the ground than go up in flying machines. That is the conservative person so regards it, but when it comes to contrasting the use of the highways with the use of the air there seems to be much to be said for the safety in flying. With more miles covered by flying. With and less accidents there is an example set for motoring that should be followed.

In connection with automobile accidents it is frequently pointed out, while there is a yearly increase in the number of fatalities and accidents, that the percentage experiences a decrease. However that may be the end sought is a reduction in the number of persons killed annually regardless of the increase in the number of machines. With greater numbers there should be greater care and a corresponding decrease in accidents.

If it can be done where such hazards exist as are attached to flying it certainly ought to be possible for it to be accomplished on the ground where control is for the most part entirely in the hands of the motor vehicle driver.

There has been a long advocated demand for insuring greater safety in navigating the air through better machines, better engines and better operation. That this has been heard and heeded is indicated by the figures given out by the department of commerce and its beneficial effect upon aviation is not likely to be small. It doesn't mean, however, that there isn't yet plenty of opportunity for still more safety.

REARRANGING HOUSES

Times change and with them customs which have prevailed for a long period. There were the days when children played in the streets. It was the common playground. Some defy conditions today but for the most part there is a recognition of the danger from motor vehicle traffic. Playing must be done elsewhere.

Recently Executive Secretary Nelson of the National Association of Real Estate boards advocated the reversing of household arrangements so that the kitchen would be on the street side and the living quarters and the porch should face the garden at the rear in order to insure more attractive outlooks and quieter conditions. Such an opinion was based upon the use that is made of the streets today and the passing of that time when there was any comfort or satisfaction is watching traffic with its dirt, noise and irritating conditions.

Some have already adopted such an idea and general approval of the suggestion with doubtless rest with the locality and the position of the house as to the street. There are certain parts of the county where it would be more popular than others. With the front porch still regarded as belonging to the horse and buggy age it is evident that there are certain localities where that has not entirely passed and if one should go into Canada there would be found much opposition to doing away with that vantage point of the front porch for getting out to take the air and watching the traffic go by. The noise and the dizzy rush has neither driven out the horse and wagon nor decreased the desire to see the travelers go by.

When it comes to abandoning the front porch or rearranging the layout of the house the designs of some houses these days indicate that most anything is possible, and there is no telling what will come next.

EDITORIAL NOTES

"Increase in coal shipments noted," says a headline. That will be a warning to the weatherman to get busy.

Trade is going to get a boost when the Christmas clubs let go, but that is a lift that has been awaited throughout the year.

That Lynn man, who left home 34 years ago and has just returned to say he is sorry, isn't the kind that can be hurried.

The man on the corner says: At least part of the campaign orators are now helping to swell the unemployment lists.

That Boston fireman who escaped by inches from a grade crossing wreck and two days' later was caught and killed at the same spot didn't profit from personal experience.

WASHINGTON AFFAIRS

(Special to The Bulletin)

WASHINGTON, Nov. 17—Funny how the wheel of fate grinds out its grist. Here we find Ruth Hanna McCormick blowed out by the man whom her late husband McDill McCormick defeated a dozen or so years ago. Then Senator Deneen turned the tables on the McCormicks and defeated the senator in the primaries. So when Deneen became a candidate for reelection at the recent primary McCormick's widow ran against him and won the nomination. Now her husband's former adversary, Senator Lewis, stages a comeback, and defeats Mrs. McCormick by a vote so huge that it is unprecendeted; 900,000 is a pretty big figure. That's what Lewis got as his majority, with perhaps more to come when the out of the way places are counted and returned.

It was a merry-go-round in political life.

The return of Senator James Hamilton Lewis to congress is hailed with delight by all who sit up in the press gallery and write "colorful" stories of the day's doings on the floor of the senate.

No man ever in the United States senate held a candle to Senator Lewis in picturesque politeness, remarkable attire and brilliant, quaint quips. Lewis is a positive genius for bringing himself into the spot light without pushing himself to the front. He just can't help it; it's a part of his temperament and general makeup, just the same as his carefully cultivated mannerisms, which from long usage are now inseparable from him. Lewis never wears a vest; it's always a "weskit" in the Lewis everyday vocabulary. One hot summer when congress was still in session, during war time, Lewis wore a white full dress suit, swallow tail and all, at formal evening functions; with it were white shoes and white spats, and all other white fixin's for full evening dress. And with his then radiant "pink" whiskers, Senator Lewis was a sight at which the god of fashion rejoiced.

Senator Lewis is always well poised and is supplied with never failing courtesy. He never shows annoyance or chagrin; he is witty, keen and with a formality unequalled in congress. In fact the famous bow, and the military click of his heels when acknowledging a greeting, would be hard to duplicate at a foreign court. On the stump he invariably referred to Mrs. McCormick as "the lady," and it would be well worth a Sabbath day's journey to see them meet in Washington. Lewis was sent to Europe during the war as an unofficial observer. He is a brilliant debater and quick at talking back. Lewis has the habit of rising on tip-toe in bringing a sentence to a climax, and swaying softly and deftly back and forth on his toes, when he clinches it. It's a pity he and Mrs. McCormick can't have a joint debate on the result of the election, for she, like Lewis, has many mannerisms, one of which is resting her hands on the desk in front of her, spreading out her fingers wide, then, she too, sways back and forth as she talks.

It is doubtful if Senator Lewis feels any more gratified at his victory, then does Senator Deneen, to whom the downfall of the lady candidate, who defeated him at the primary, is like balm to a troubled soul.

The election in Connecticut whereby Augustine Lonergan, a former member of congress from that state won renomination on the democratic ticket, recalls to many who were there in the Wilson administration, a number of anecdotes one of which stands out clear to me, for I was right there when it happened.

It was at one of the large downtown hotels, where 20 or 30 senators, and a still bigger group of members of the house lived with their families. There was also quite an unmarried contingent from congress, mostly bachelors, but with a few widowers mixed in. So the management of the hotel placed a table right in the middle of the big dining room. It seated a dozen or more and here were the bachelors and widowers wont to forgather at dinner. It was generally called "the bachelor's table" so when Mr. Lonergan came to the hotel after the election, and took a seat at the table he was classed as "eligible" by match-making mammas. Moreover his name in the Congressional Directory was not marked with the star that designated he has a wife to be put on the official invitation list of the administration.

Time went on, then one night another long table seating something more than 12, was laid in a conspicuous portion of the great brilliantly lighted room. It was decked with roses, candles and the layout for a formal dinner. "Who is giving the party?" we asked the head waiter. "Congressman Lonergan" was his reply. At that moment the congressman came in, and trailing behind him were a round dozen rosy children, ranging from knickerbocker to college age, boys and girls in the little procession. It looked like a school or an orphan asylum. Then bringing up the rear was a very attractive lady. Then our very black and very wide-eyed darkie waiter hastened to explain to us that "Them is Congressman Lonergan and his wife and his children."

The joy many folks here experienced in the sound drubbing and defeat administered to Senator Tom Heflin of Alabama at the election, is somewhat mitigated by the thought of the hours he will spend daily for three months, in vicious harangues, tires me explanations and ridiculous accusations as to how it happened.

Heflin has never forgiven the New England senators for not embracing the opportunity he offered them a couple of years ago to pass a resolution of censure at the entire state of Massachusetts for having an inhabitant, who ventured to throw a bottle in a crowd down at Taunton, that didn't hit the senator, when he was haranging an audience one night. "Tom" was the only man who voted to support the resolution, and he has never forgotten or forgiven it. Probably he will take a parting shot at the Bay state before his term ends March 4th.

It will also be the last winter Senator Blease of South Carolina will have the chance to exhort and condemn the senate and the nation at large, and the republican party and the north in particular, which will likewise be a relief to the overstrained ears of the senate.

But there will be genuine regard and sorrow over the retirement of that splendid southern gentleman, Senator Simmons of North Carolina. He lost through factional controversies in his state, after a 20 year term of loyal, patriotic service in the senate. His term began in 1901 and he served on high committee chairmanships, with ability and honor to himself, his state, the senate and the nation.

The defeat of Simmons, regardless of partisanship, is a loss to the nation.

But the come-back of Gore of Oklahoma; the election of Hull of Tennessee and several other men of note and ability, will greatly increase the power and judgment of the democratic side of the senate, whether or not it controls it numerically.

They may use the insurgent republicans to help win their way in legislation, but they will not be blind followers. They are staunch democrats and will be pretty likely to fight their own battles and stand on their own solid democratic legs.

The victory of Charles Bryan of Nebraska for the governorship is another tribute to the family of the "Commoner," the late William J. Bryan. The governor of Nebraska was always known throughout campaigns for William, Jr., as "Brother Charles." It is the irony of fate that Brother Charles has won; that Bryan's daughter, Mrs. Ruth Bryan Owens has won, while Col. Bryan was never permitted to reap the harvest of his political laurels and party devotion. We read that a nephew of William for William J. as "Brother Charles." ning as a "wet," but haven't seen the returns to know whether or not he won. But one thing seems sure, if Uncle William J. could rise from his last sleep long enough to smite his wet nephew, he would not spare J., was a candidate for congress run-

THE OFFICE SYSTEM

"I simply must write some letters tonight," said Dorothy to Ralph at dinner. "I've owed letters for months and, honestly, I haven't written to Aunt Kate in ages."

"Why don't you set aside a special time to attend to your mail, as a business man does?" he asked. "Honestly, I don't see how you women get all your work done without any system. Now, I have a time set aside for answering al my office mail and I permit nothing to interrupt."

"Do you mean that you wouldn't even stop if I called at your office and asked you to take me out to lunch?"

"Yep. A system's no good at all if it isn't rigid."

"Perhaps you're right," said Dorothy, thoughtfully. "I think I'll try it. I'll get those old letters written tonight, then start on a real schedule next week." But after she had washed the dishes Dorothy read the evening paper.

"There's an awfully good performance at the Luna tonight," she said to Ralph, as she scanned the ads.

"Yes? Want to go?"

"Well, I have those letters to write, but I can do them tomorrow. Yes, let's go."

On the following evening Dorothy spent an hour with a pencil in her hand and a frown on her forehead, after which she announced that she had made a schedule.

She read it to him: A day for ironing, one for baking, one for mending, and so on. Finishing, she said proudly: "And I've set aside every Thursday afternoon, and the evening if necessary, for answering my mail. You always stay down at the club to dinner on Thursday, so that will be a good time."

"It's a fine schedule," Ralph complimented. "Now stick to it."

Dorothy did very well until Thursday, and the system worked beautifully. Of course, Ralph was a bit provoked when he ripped a button from his shirt on Tuesday and asked his wife to sew it on, only to discover that it was not mending day. And on Wednesday he wanted his blue suit pressed, but pressing suits was not on the schedule for that day. As she kissed him goodby on Thursday morning Dorothy said: "I suppose you'll be having dinner at the club tonight, as usual?"

"Yes," he answered.

"That's good, because I'm writing my letters today, and am not planning on cooking." But in Ralph's morning mail there was an announcement. The weekly dinner would not be held. He immediately called Dorothy.

"Hello, Dot," said he. "I'll be home for dinner tonight, after all."

It was 6.15 when he entered the apartment that night. Usually he was greeted at the door by the sound of meat sizzling in a pan, and a host of agreeable odors. Tonight he heard only the scratching of a pen. His spirits suffered a sudden drop as he closed the door behind him. Dorothy greeted him from the secretary, where she was writing busily.

"Haven't you started dinner?" he inquired. His tone was injured.

"Why, Ralph, you know this is letter day," said Dorothy in surprise.

"But I called and told you I'd be home," protested Ralph.

"I know, but I couldn't break up my schedule just for that," she replied with a lonsoling smile.

"Well, it seems to me that getting dinner for your husband is more important than writing a lot of letters," he said grumpily.

"Oh, but dear, that's not the point," she explained. "I know that taking me to lunch would be more important to you than your correspondence, but you said you wouldn't interrupt your schedule, even for me."

"Oh, awright! But I call it a mean trick. Going to a restaurant." Dorothy's merry laugh stopped him.

"Maybe we'd better look in the refrigerator first," she said soothingly. "There might be something to eat there." There was. He saw freshly made potato salad, and delicious-looking sandwiches in dainty rolls, and iced coffee, and home-made maple parfait. His expression became one of amazed delight.

"It's just a sort of picnic luncheon," said Dorothy, "in honor of my husband's anticipated admission that an office system won't always work for the housework."—Exchange.

A Washington Bystander

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, Nov. 17—What is that old jingle of childhood about:

"Sweet is the donkey
"When he goes to grass—?"

Well, look now at that donkey which is the accepted symbol of the democratic party. There is grass ahead for him. Prospects of the pastures of politics have been opened to him after many lean and hungry years of looking over the fence to watch his elephantine republican rival browse.

And if you don't believe that the sons of the donkey—not of the wild jackass—will sing sweetly about it, just wait until 71st congress reassembles.

Some said it was bound to happen regardless of whether either house passed from republican to democratic control at the November nose-counting. Signs and portents made it clear to some forecasters long beforehand that Miss Democracy was going to recoup many of her 1928 losses.

And those alone would have been sufficient to set off party orators like Pat Harrison.

Wisecracker

The great thing about Senator Harrison's style of riding the republicans on the floor in the humor he can put into the job. He's a political wisecracker of note. Even the republican victims of his verbal darts enjoy 'em.

You will see them come trooping out of the cloakroom to their seats whenever Pat begins one of these onslaughts. That speaks well for their sense of humor.

Now and then young fellows on the republican side like Robinson of Indiana or Allen of Kansas would slap back at the Mississippian. Allen, however, will not be in evidence when Pat opens up to discuss the results of the 1930 balloting.

For he enjoys the unique political distinction of having been beaten by different men twice on the same day for the same job.

He got licked for both the rest of Vice President Charlie Curtis's senatorial tenure, surrendered when he climbed to the restrum, and for the six-year term to follow. The Kansan lost seven years of senating on that little deal and already is former Senator Allen.

The Curtis Smile

Incidentally, Curtis was described as commenting on election results the day after with a "wry smile."

Had he then known that the senate seat he held down so long for the G. O. P. had also been washed away in the democratic vote tide to give Kansas a democratic senator for only the second time in her history, the Curtis smile probably would have been wryer.

BURGESS BEDTIME STORY

Peter Sees The Singer Sing

Who doubts his eyes must doubt indeed!
You'll find most folks on this agreed.
—Old Mother Nature.

This is quite true. Few people doubt the evidence of their own eyes. If they see a thing that is enough for them. What they have seen they have seen and so must be so. It seldom occurs to them that they may see what they expect to see instead of what actually is, or that it is a comparatively easy matter to deceive the eye, much easier than it is to fool the ear or the nose, though both of these may be fooled.

Peter Rabbit sat staring up at Whitefoot the Wood Mouse on the top of an old stump in the Green Forest and on Peter's face was the funniest look, a look of mingled suspicion and unbelief. Peter was beginning to suspect that he was the victim of a joke, yet he couldn't believe it. He actually doubted his own eyes. Yes, sir, he did so. He doubted if he really saw what he seemed to see.

What was it Peter saw? It was little Whitefoot the Wood Mouse sitting up above him on the edge of the top of the old stump and singing. Yes, sir, Whitefoot was singing. He was singing the very song that had so long puzzled Peter. Yet, because Peter had been so sure that the mysterious singer must be one of the feathered folk, he was having hard work to believe his eyes and ears now. Both told him that that song was coming from the pretty little throat of Whitefoot, but it just couldn't be so. It couldn't. He would as soon expect to sing himself as to hear a member of the Mouse family sing.

"Whitefoot," said Peter, "are you singing?"

"Whitefoot," said Peter, "are you singing?"

"Of course," replied Whitefoot with a soft chuckle.

"I don't believe it," declared Peter. "You can't sing."

"That's queer," replied Whitefoot. "I don't see how I could have fooled myself so. You see, Peter, I have always supposed I could sing. Perhaps it isn't much of a song, but if you don't call it a song, what do you call it?

Peter didn't reply to come down from the top of the old stump and sit on a log close by. Whitefoot chuckled good-naturedly and came down from the old stump and sat on the end of the old log close to Peter.

"Now sing," commanded Peter.

"But you said I can't sing," replied Whitefoot mischievously.

"Never mind what I said; you sing the way you did up on that stump," commanded Peter.

So Whitefoot sang. It was the same little warbling song Peter had heard so many times before and had been so mystified because he couldn't find the singer.

"It really is you," declared Peter gravely, as if making a great discovery.

"Yes," said Whitefoot, "it really is me."

"And you really are singing," continued Peter.

"And I really am singing," replied Whitefoot, and suited the action to the word.

"I've known you a long time, Whitefoot," said Peter.

"Quite a long time," replied Whitefoot, nodding his pretty little head.

"Then how comes it I haven't known you can sing?" demanded Peter.

"Perhaps because I don't sing very often," replied Whitefoot. "Perhaps because in the past you have fooled yourself just as you have been fooling yourself lately."

"What do you mean by fooling myself?" demanded Peter.

"Thinking that you heard a bird singing," retorted Whitefoot. "You may have heard my song in the past and thought it the song of a bird. Anyway, I cannot remember when I couldn't sing. Don't look so upset, Peter. You are not the only one; there are very few who know I can sing."

"Anyway, I can prove now that I didn't dream I heard that song," declared Peter.

"So you can. So you can, and I'll help you, replied Whitefoot.

The next story: Peter Arouses Curiosity."

"How are you getting on now you are married?"

"Oh, life is very different."

"How is that?"

"Before marriage she listened whilst I talked, during the honeymoon she talked and I listened and now we both talk and the neighbors listen."—Hummel.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Drifting Back.

Mr. Editor: Just as sure as the snows of winter or the tides of the ocean drift, so certain it is that our thoughts will drift back on the sea of memory to certain things that are dear to every one of us. It is said that scientists have at times taken a note, placed it in a sealed bottle and thrown it overboard from the side of a vessel into the ocean the object being to discover which way the currents or tides of the ocean run. And it is on record that one of these notes that had been started off the coast of Virginia had long after been found on a beach in Africa. This is only inducted into this theme to best bring out the thought that the laws of man are not much different from the laws of nature's world. Thus our very thoughts carry us back to what perhaps I have told before, to that dearest time in all our lives—our school days.

Today, what superior advantages the students have to what we had. Understand I am talking now to you older ones. And even as you read this I can see you put the paper down and sit in a day dream and wonder where your old schoolmates are. I do not care where you are today, nor what your condition in life may be. Fortune may have smiled upon you and perhaps you have been a force in the world as a leader among the people but sometime in the quietness of your room all this comes back to you and you gaze into the mirror of life, and in imagination you can see Bill or Joe and the many others you have known. Memory tugs at your heartstrings and you wonder as to where they are. In that self same picture you see another one. Must I tell you of your little school-day sweetheart? You remember how you waited at a spot that you had mutually agreed on. And when you saw her coming, didn't you think she was just the sweetest girl that you ever saw? Well you didn't have a monopoly on that for the other fellows thought the same about their girls. I wonder if the boys of yesterday were not a little different from the boys of today. They certainly were not so self conscious and they were not such glib talkers. The few swear words they used were limited. And so far as the girls were concerned, God bless them, I think perhaps they only at times did a little "wooden swearing." Maybe when they got angry they would go out and slam the door.

In a mental picture that hangs on memory's wall I can see an old red school house that was almost directly opposite the town hall in Long Society, just a little old one story building. Beyond this in the rear was just a tangled wilderness of underbrush and beside all this was a running brook, and here the boys would lay flat on their tummies and drink.

Well it's an easy thing to trace
All the wrinkles in our face
How the years have run their race
Rather strange how you seem
To see things as in a dream.
When you are all alone, you know,
down
And it's quiet all around,
And you see the firelight glow,
When yo uare all alone, you know,
Then you doze and dream.

Isn't this true? Years have passed and gone since I went to school. Somewey I cannot get my thoughts to run in any other direction at this moment except to wonder where those boys and girls have drifted. I do know that they may have moved to other places just as I have. Here perhaps I have started a line of thought that may have lain dormant and only required just a word to revive it. Would you old boys and you girls who will never grow old, like to wander back once again to yesterday, drift back on the incoming tide of memory and once again see your pals who perhaps have gone on ahead, to live over again those other days? It may be that the others have similar thoughts even as you and I. This will be realized later on For, like the wandering peri, as we slowly move down the hill of life we will look with enraptured vision through the open gates of Paradise and here we shall see them, and know them as we did before. Perhaps just a rose colored dream, just drifting back to the end of the rainbow.

One other thought. Have you ordered your Thanksgiving turkey yet? After all, life is but a thought. Herbert Spencer has said "A man's thoughts are as children born to him, which he may not carelessly let diet."

What Cauces The Depression?

Mr. Editor: I took much pleasure in reading The Farmer's Talk to Farmers, which appeared in your paper several weeks ago. I always take much interest in that particular part of your Friday's Bulletin, but that one especially commented on the spending of one's money to again start this country to flourish.

In today's paper the mayor's proclamation was all right, but what causes this state of affairs? Will some one not say? Please don't say—machinery, or the election. Does not the situation seem to be world-wide and has it not happened rather suddenly? There's a lot of "whys and wherefores" I could ask about, and some one would say, "Why don't you go to the library?" I'm thinking there's a lot doesn't get into books

YOUR HEALTH

Avoiding Tooth Decay By Prophylaxis

By J. C. Bryant, D. D. S., Minneapolis.
(From Gorgas Memorial Institute)

The term prophylaxis may not be familiar to everyone. It simply means prevention. Dental prophylaxis then means scientific effort which tends to prevent diseased conditions of the teeth and their surrounding flesh or tissues. The whole program of dental prophylaxis as advocated today embraces both the practical application to the mouth by the individual himself as well as the education of the public at large in its employment.

The greatest single factor in the prevention of tooth decay is the slow and painstaking education of the public in the proper and constant use of the tooth brush. Dental prophylaxis is chiefly concerned with the exposed surfaces of the teeth and gums. Proper cleaning of the teeth prevents the formation of lime or tartar deposits on the exposed portions of the teeth. Contrary to the belief of a few it is impossible to wear through the flint like enamel of the teeth by cleaning with a brush and tooth pastes. The enamel is over a sixteenth of an inch in thickness on the tops of the teeth. It is very thin, however, near the gums. It is near the gums where considerable decay occurs. This is because the teeth are not kept clean and the thin enamel is soon eaten through by the acid formed by the fermented food material.

Deposits of tartar are formed on the surfaces of the teeth by precipitation from the secretions of saliva of the mouth. Excessive deposits are due in a large measure to faulty diet and improper elimination from the body of accumulated waste products. This deposition of tartar or lime salts on the teeth, of course, would not occur if the enamel was kept perfectly clean and smooth. But once the surface of the enamel is neglected and a roughened film conflects on the surface, a deposit of tartar can readily find a place to attach itself and when this becomes firmly established it takes more than ordinary brushing to dislodge it.

The daily routine care of the mouth has for its object the preservation of the teeth by prevention of dental decay, and the preservation of the health of the tissue of flesh which supports and holds the teeth in their position in the jaw, preventing the occurence of pyorrhea.

A HISTORY OF CONNECTICUT INDUSTRY

Released by Manufacturers Association of Connecticut

Powdrell & Alexander, Inc., Danielson

It's a romance of modern business—the story of Powdrell & Alexander, incorporated.

J. W. Powdrell and J. Studley Alexander have spent their entire business lives in the curtain industry. They became acquainted in 1913 when they were both connected with a small manufacturer in the same line. In 1919 they severed their connections with this concern and started manufacturing on their own account, with no customers and no large amount of capital. Their first factory was at 55 Elm street, Boston. They incorporated in 1920 under their present corporate name. Business increased each year, and at the beginning of 1923 the incorporated company removed to its present quarters on the ninth floor of the loft building at 251 Causeway street, Boston.

In order not to put any strain on the enviable credit of Powdrell & Alexander, Inc., a subsidiary called the Paco Manufacturing company was formed in 1920 to take over the vacant mill property on Furnace street, Danielson. This is now known as Danielson plant, No. 1. At the beginning of the year 1924, the Paco Manufacturing company took over the Danielson Cotton company's fine Main street plant, now called Danielson plant, No. 2.

There is a bit of business romance connected with the purchase of this latter plant. At the Danielson Cotton company's mill, in 1919 Messrs. Powdrell and Alexander made their original purchase of 100,000 yards of marquisette, in the gray. Just five years later that very mill belonged to them!

Messrs. Powdrell and Alexander are the only novelty curtain manufacturers who carry through all the operations from the raw cotton to the finished curtain, thereby eliminating several middlemen's profits. Those profits are passed on to the buyer of P. & A. curtains. As Mr. Powdrell expresses it: "It's not how much we can get for our curtains, but how low we can sell them for."

There has never been any labor trouble in any of the P. & A. plants, nor is any anticipated. There's a reason, a very good reason, for it's not only preached from the pulpits but it's actually practiced in the plants by Messrs. Powdrell and Alexander. It's this: "Do unto others as you would have others do unto you."

Every buyer knows that of all tha problems confronting him today, that of merchandising is the most vital.

How often can I turn my stock? How can I increase my volume of business and not increase my investment? How many months ahead must I make my purchases in order to insure prompt deliveries when goods are needed?

These questions, and their answers, are of paramount importance to each and every buyer. And buyer confronted with them can "buy from hand to mouth" and keep his stock constantly turning. For the P. & A. mills are equipped and manned to make shipment of orders, regardless of quantities, in from ten days to two weeks from the time those orders are received.

Deliveries—style—prices are what buyers want. P. & A. have them all.

The present officers of the company are: J. W. Powdrell, president; J. S. Alexander, vice president; H. E. Scripture, vice president; F. A. Powdrell, treasurer; H. A. Rapp, secretary.

DETROIT MAN PROPOSES WESTERLY ROAD CUT-OFF

Two highway cut-off suggestions around the town of Westerly have been received by the state highway authorities of Connecticut. The proposal comes from Harrison S. Taft, a construction engineer of Detroit, who knows the conditions in that section of southern Rhode Island.

Some time ago it was he who proposed the layout of the state road from Alton and Carolina along by the railroad up towards Kingston, which is now being contemplated by the state of Rhode Island and will probably be in actual existence within a year or two.

Mr. Taft proposes that the road from New London to Old Mystic be extended easterly to Westerly. Apparently from his drawings, he would pass around Hinckley hill, go to the north of that and cross the Pawcatuck river not far from White Rock running due east to the Nooseneck Hill road where it connects with the old Providence road at the top of Carr's mountain.

The other cut-off would be a cut-off from the borough of Stonington helping the traffic there, running east through the Stonington Manor property from the Stonington road and running across the marsh land directly east to the Pawcatuck river at Avondale where he would have a bridge constructed. Here the road would run east along the Shore road.

An alternate to this route is one that would go south from Wequetequock, turn slightly as it aproaches the river and cross near Pawcatuck rock, making a turn and following up the valley of the Mistuxet brook to the Red brook section where it would come out on the Post road near Red brook.

As part of the plans for the state roads running east he would also have rebuilt that short strip of Shore road from Haversham to Langworthy's corners.

JUDGMENT FOR INJURIES TO MONTVILLE GIRL

Judgment of $2,428.50 was given in favor of Rita Dutrumble, a minor of the town of Montville, against The Richmond Radiator Co. of Norwich, and Randolph Birch of Hartford, according to a decision handed down by Judge Christopher L. Avery of the superior court and filed with Clerk John H. Walker. Judgment was in accordance with a stipulation on file and is without costs.

Rita Dutrumble, a minor, eight years of age, was struck and seriously injured Feb. 28, 1930, while walking along the New London-Norwich highway in the town of Montville, by an auto owned by The Richmond Radiator Co. and operated by Randolph W. Birch.

The Dutrumble child received a leg fracture and other injuries. She sued, through her father, Alexander Dutrumble, of the town of Montville

CURRENT EVENTS REVIEWED FOR WOMAN'S CITY CLUB

A large group of men and women were taken on an interesting tour of the world by Prof. Henry W. Lawrence, Ph. D., of the department of history, Connecticut College for Women at New London, in the second in the series of lectures delivered by him Monday evening at the Wauregan hotel under the auspices of the current events committee of the Woman's City club. Previous to his lecture Prof. Lawrence extended a cordial invitation to the gathering to listen to the address to be given by Charles Seymour this (Tuesday) afternoon at the convocation exercises at Connecticut college. He is to address the assemblage upon Armistice Negotiations.

In commenting upon the results of the election in the United States Prof. Lawrence declared that there is a certain group who claim that they will not be obstructionists, while some members, such as Brookhart and Borah, have indicated that compromise and harmony are not foremost in their thoughts, and that if measures that they are to present are not favored by the majority there will be discord.

With reference to Australia the speaker said that it was tottering on the edge of bankruptcy, resulting from Australia engaging in many experiments largely for the interests of the common people, organized labor, and conducted without regard to costs. This has much to do with the precarious financial situation of the country, he said.

In Asia the Indian problem seems largely to be marking time, said Prof. Lawrence, with Gandhi and over 25,000 supporters in jail. Gandhi refuses to accept the terms of the conference, which is underway and from first pronouncements has made no headway toward settlement. Referring briefly to the attempt of a partiot to assassinate the premier of Japan the speaker took his listeners to China, which, he said, seems to be one of the quietest places in the world. The nationalist party apparently has triumphed over the major enemies and is engaged in mopping up communistic opposition, he said.

One of the strangest things that has happened in Europe, continued Prof. Lawrence, is the visit of the grand old man of Greece to the Turkish authorities, which is indicative that Greece is making peace with its agelong enemy. Claiming that the wedding of the king of Bulgaria and the Italian princess was a political move Prof. Lawrence went on to review the situation existing between France and Italy in regards to the naval arrangement, in which the United States is somewhat directly interested.

In his remarks upon the victory of Marshal Pilsudski, the "Iron Man" of Poland, the professor termed him as a "good manager of political campaigns." He said that the marshal previous to the election had his antagonists either put in jail or had them join the army, where they were out of harm's way.

In conclusion Prof. Lawrence considered the spread and purposes of fascism, comparing the three different types of governments that are in competition for the control of the world, and read abstracts from the textbooks used by the children in the schools in Russia.

DR. JEFFERSON HEARD IN SECOND OF SERIES

Speaking from the text, He that hath an ear let him hear what the Spirit is saying to the churches, Rev. Dr. Charles A. Jefferson of New York, addressed a congregation of good numbers Monday evening at the United Congregational church in the second of a series of special meetings under the auspices of the Young Men's Christian association.

Dr. Jefferson called the attention of his hearers to the fact that we are willing to believe that God spoke to Jeremiah, Isaiah, Peter, Paul and John, but it is difficult to believe that He is speaking to New York city or Norwich now. But if He doesn't speak in the present there is no reason to believe that He ever spoke. You can't imagine God suddenly becoming a deaf mute after a certain time. If He ever spoke He is speaking now when the world certainly is in need of guidance. If He remains silent when we are in need He is no God at all. We are driven to that conclusion.

Where are we going to go to find out what He is saying, the speaker continued. Not to nature, nor to the stars, the telescope or the microscope. They can not tell us how we ought to live. You must listen to God's voice through human experience, the visions and dreams in the hearts of the best people. What is the Spirit telling us there? It is telling us to go on in our humanitarian work, and carry it still farther in the care of the poor, the sick, the aged, the children and the outcast; to keep on in our search for knowledge, to keep on with the spirit of Christian unity, to keep on with the peace movement. We are created for God and our hearts are restless until we find peace with Him, a great aspiration in the hearts of the American people.

Rev. Joseph Cooper of Trinity Methodist Episcopal church conducted the opening devotional part of the meeting and it was announced that Rev. Dr. Jefferson would speak at the United church at 3 o'clock this (Tuesday) afternoon, as well as again in the evening.

At 6.30 Monday evening Dr. Jefferson spoke at a supper meeting at the Central Baptist church, which was attended by over 200 officers and teachers of the church schools of the city.

DESCRIBES APPLICATION OF OLD AGE PENSION

A talk on the Old Age Pension was given Monday noon by Attorney Charles V. James at the weekly meeting of the Contact club at the Wauregan hotel. The club president, Ernest O. Rodier, presented Mr. James. The speaker said that the poor will always be with us. He spoke of many reasons for poverty, such as defective education, defective character, laziness, dissipation, accident, sickness, etc.

In part he continued:

This obligation to care for the poor and dependent is met in our own state by means of the poor houses and by what is known as aid to the outside poor, those who are poor and outside the poorhouses. Self-respecting men and women detest the blight of poverty and will turn to these means only as a last resort. It is the self-respecting man and woman in whom we are interested just now. They feel that after having spent their lives in industry, in developing its physical resources and in adding to its spiritual well-being by the example of their well ordered lives, they are entitled, in their old age, to a share of the product of their industry to enable them to live in frugal comfort during their declining years.

The method by which it is proposed to them with the necessaries of life and some of its comforts, is the Old Age Pension.

A pension is defined to be "a regular allowance paid to a person in consideration of past services." The theory of the Old Age Pension is this: The prosperity of the state is the product of the toil of its workers. Without manpower our natural resources would remain undeveloped. Those who have worked through their years claim to be entitled to pensions as much as soldiers, sailors, teachers, firemen, policemen, judges, etc.

It is said that there are more than 5,000,000 persons in the United States 65 years of age and over. Nearly half of these, it is estimated, have no other means of support in their old age than what they can earn themselves. It is said that about half of the workmen over 65 years of age have been "scrapped" because they could not meet the requirements of modern industry.

In the industrial establishments of the present day, where men must work often ceaselessly and at capacity to supply the demands of modern society, the swift moving, power driven machinery permits very few to play any part after the age of 60. The constant strain from working with delicate, swift or powerful machinery tends to enfeeble these necessary factulties permanently. The consequence is that with the progress of civilization, the number of unemployed beyond a certain age is constantly increasing. The investigations of the different state commissioners warrant the conclusion that one in every five persons past the age of 65 is classed as a pauper. Two out of every five passing their 50th year have no property or income other than their daily earnings. By the age of 60 their earning power disappears, and they must, if without relatives and friends, fall back upon public charity.

An old age pension bill has been prepared for introduction in the legislature which convenes in January. This bill provides that every person, man or woman, married or single, shall, while residing in the state of Connecticut be entitled to a pension, in old age, subject to these restructions and qualifications:

He must be a citizen of the U. S. He must have attained the age of 65. He must have resided in the state for a period of 15 years immediately preceding the date of his application for a pension. He must not for a period of 10 years preceding the date of such application have been imprisoned for any offense punishable by imprisonment in the state prison. He must not at the date of such application be an inmate of any prison, jail, insane asylum or other public reformatory or correctional institution. The amount of the pension proposed is an amount which, when added to the income of the applicant, will make his total income equal to $9 per week.

The act further provides that the applicant must have no child, or any other person legally responsible for and fully able to support the applicant.

In conclusion, Attorney James added that he did not think the bill went far enough, mentioning examples of men incapacitated totally or partially while under the age of 65. Under the bill they would not share in any kind of a pension. Attorney James said that this should be provided for.

Attorney James, alluding to the talk given along similar lines at Lisbon last week, stated that his criticisms against the bill were made only in debate and were directed against the principles of the bill.

RED PINE HARDIEST FOR RESERVOIR REFORESTATION

Extensive reforestation operations conducted by the water supply utilities in Connecticut for many years past have revealed the fact that the most hardy type of tree in this particular part of the country is red pine, since it resists to a far greater degree the various tree diseases to which coniferous growths are subject. Thus, although the white pine produces a superior grade of lumber which can be marketed at higher prices, the growing tendency of water companies in this state is to plant their watershed land with more and more red pine and to reduce the white pine acreage.

Watershed reforestation, however, is not limited to these two kinds of trees. In several places, the natural growth of hemlock is forested, fruit trees are cultivated on certain suitable sites and not an inconsiderable amount of acreage is given over to experimenting with other types of trees.

There are two diseases which make the planting of the hardy red pine more feasible than any of the other growths and which annually causes a large loss of timber in the white pine forests. The first and most deadly of these is the so-called blister rust, the spores of which after germinating on black currant plants are carried by the wind to the uppermost branches of the trees where they begin a downward feast until the entire tree has been destroyed. Because it harbors the blister rust, the black currant plant is banned in Connecticut by an act of the 1929 general assembly. The second disease which attacks native trees is the pine weevil. The weevil originates in cocoons on the trees and if these are not carefully sought out and removed the pest is likely to become as destructive as the blister rust.

BOBBY JONES STEPS DOWN FROM GOLF THRONE TO MAKE MOTION PICTURES

(By Alan Gould, Associated Press Sports Editor)

NEW YORK, Nov. 17—(AP)—With a gesture of sportsmanship as dramatic as anything he ever achieved on the links, Robert T. Jones, Jr., today walked from the throne room of golf.

King of all he surveys in his royal realm at the age of only 28, the one and only world conqueror of golfdom has decided to retire from all championship competition, renouncing his amateur standing at the same time to fulfill a contract to make twelve one-reel motion pictures on educational golfing subjects.

Jones signed a contract four days ago, with Warner Brothers' pictures, after considerable negotiation, and in a statement of sweeping frankness today made known his intention to retire from all "golfing competition of a serious nature," after fourteen years of intense tournament play in this country and abroad.

In short, business has taken the place of pleasure and recreation, so far as the Jones' golf is concerned. King Bobby, after a year in which he made a record-breaking clean sweep of all the championships of Great Britain and the United States, has decided the opportunity to repair the family fortunes is not to be overlooked.

Intended to Drop Out Quietly

He intended to retire from title tournaments, anyway, he revealed, but had intended to "drop out quietly by neglecting to send in my entry to the open championship next spring." Now, however, and in view of the business venture he has undertaken, he felt it necessary that a "clear understanding" be had by the golfing public that has made the great Georgian its idol since as a youth of 14 he first crashed the barriers of national championship attention in 1916 at Philadelphia.

"Of course, the matter of monetary compensation enters into the discussion," his statement said. "And it is for numerous reasons that I wish to be perfectly understood on this score. The amateur status problem is one of the most serious with which the United States Golf association has to deal for the good of the game as a whole.

"I am not certain that the step I am taking is in a strict sense a violation of the amateur rule. I think a lot might be said on either side, but I am so far convinced that it is contrary to the spirit of amateurism that I am prepared to accept and even endorse a ruling that it is an infringement.

"I have chosen to play as an amateur not because I have regarded an honest professionalism as discreditable but simply because I have had other ambitions in life. So long as I played as an amateur, there could be no question of subterfuge or concealment. The rules of the game, whatever they were, I have respected, sometimes even beyond the letter. I certainly shall never become a professional golfer. But since I am no longer a competitor, I feel free to act entirely outside the amateur rule, as my judgment and conscience may decide.

"When these pictures have been made, I expect to return to the practice of my profession unhampered by the necessity of keeping my golf up to championship requirements."

Picture Salary Not Mentioned

The financial side of the motion picture contract was not disclosed, either by Jones or Warner Brothers. It was understood the champion will receive a flat guarantee as well as a percentage of the profits. The estimates of what the return may mean to the Georgian range as high as $250,000.

The twelve "one-reelers" will be talking pictures entitled "How I Play Golf." They will demonstrate all the shots in the famous Jones repertoire, from his powerful driving swing to the delicately accurate putting touch that has been so conspicuous in the Georgian's march to a grand total of 13 national championships over a period of eight years. This will perpetuate the ability of "Calamity Jane," the champion's internationally famous putter.

Bobby will discuss the shots as he makes them for the screen. Slow motion will be used to accentuate features of his shot-making ability. The champion will be the only character in the films, unless his caddy figures in the back ground, in which event he may take with him to Hollywood, Cal., his favorite club-carrier at his home course of Eastlake, Atlanta.

To Begin Work in March

Jones is expected to go to California in March to begin the motion picture work. Warner Brothers announced the films will be released at two week intervals after April 15, 1931.

"These pictures," Jones explained in his statement, "are to be purely educational in character and it is the ardent hope of both parties that they will be of some value, first by improving the play and thereby increasing the enjoyment of the vast number of people already interested in the game and, second, by creating an interest where none exists now among the many who may find enjoyment and beneficial exercise on the golf course."

Jones, who for years has been known as "interview shy," was not on hand personally when his detailed statement of retirement was made public by Herbert H. Ramsay, president-elect of the United States Golf association and a long-time friend of the world's champion. The Georgian, after witnessing the Georgia Tech-Pennsylvania football game Saturday at Philadelphia, left for his home in Atlanta.

Mr. Ramsay, however, paid him this tribute:

"He has unquestionably during his career made the greatest competitive record in the history of the game. Aside from that, though, his character and personality are such that he has become a popular world figure. His withdrawal from competition will be greatly regretted by everyone."

The golfing world at large, abroad and at home, was not altogether unprepared. It has been known for months that Jones contemplated retirement, partially at least, following his unprecedented clean sweep of all the available national championships this year. Nevertheless, the actual news of his retirement, at the very height of his astonishing career, came as a sensation to sportsmen everywhere.

Not since Gene Tunney renounced the world's heavyweight boxing championship in 1928 has the action of any titleholder aroused such widespread interest.

Completely Dominated the Game

Seldom, if ever in the history of any sport and never before in all the annals of golf has any one man, such as Jones, held so completely dominating a position. In a game conspicuous for its lack, rather than any abundance of consistency, Bobby has been the one "sure thing," the one outstanding favorite to weather the rigors of the galloping galleries and repeatedly justify the confidence placed in his prowess.

A "child progidy" from the time he was first able to swing a club under the tutelage of the Scotch Pro, Stewart Maiden, in Atlanta, Jones passed successfully through the stages of hot-headed youth, disappointment, then swift success and, finally world recognition as the greatest of all golfers.

From the time he first won national open championship honors in 1923 at the Inwood club, Long Island, Jones has never been without the possession of at least one of the four major crowns of golf—the American Amateur and Open, the British Amateur and Open. This year he won all four, besides leading to victory the American Walker Cup team in the matches with the British.

Thirteen Titles in Eight Years

His achievement in winning 13 national titles in eight years, his scoring records, his coolness under the fiercest competitive fire, stand alone.

He won the British Open three times, the British Amateur once. He captured the American Open four times and the American Amateur five times, more than any other man.

Against a background of marvelous mechanical achievement, earning him classification as a "golfing machine," Jones has erected a reputation for modesty and good sportsmanship such as few of America's athletic demigods ever have enjoyed. His competitive fame has been comparable to that of such glamorous figures as Jack Dempsey and Babe Ruth, his position unequalled as an American ambassador of sporting good will on fields of international rivalry.

Great Britain has hailed his accomplishments with as much fervor as his life-long friends in Georgia.

Millionaires have fought their way through the galleries to see him drive, pitch or putt. Princes have sought his companionship on the links. New York has welcomed him with an enthusiasm of popular acclaim, following triumps abroad, such as no other figure in sports has ever enjoyed nor perhaps any other youthful hero, except Colonel Lindbergh, been accorded.

The life-story and achievements of this young man of 28 still will be bright on the pages of sport history when the youth of today is grayheaded. They may never be equalled.

KEELER TELLS OF TALKS WITH JONES ON RETIRING

ATLANTA, Ga., Nov. 17—(AP)—O. B. Keeler, Atlanta Journal golf writer and close friend of Bobby Jones, said in his column today that Bobby decided to retire from competition after he had won the United States Open at Interlachen last July.

"Bobby told me as we were riding home after Merion," Keeler wrote. "I asked him if the decision was made after his victory in the amateur.

"Bobby grinned, reflectively.

"'Before that,' he replied. 'It was when I won the open at Interlachen.'"

Keeler wrote of the trying times after the open, as Bobby waited to find whether his score was safe from the late onslaught of MacDonald Smith. "Bobby told me then," Keeler said, "that he wouldn't go through another three days like those for anything. He was sick of it.

"Back in 1927, after he had won three titles, Bobby told me his hope of winning six consecutive national golf championships in succession, before retiring.

"Today, five years later, as Bobby announces his retirement at 28, he has not only six, but nine national championships, in addition to four British titles.

"Bobby doesn't enjoy competition any more. When he was younger it was different. He had lots of fun battling with the boys. If he didn't win or make a showing, it made no difference. Competitive golf became a strain as far back as 1925, at the time he told me of his wish to win six championships. It seemed so improbable that any man could accomplish this that neither Bobby nor I ever mentioned it."

Keeler wrote of a recent talk with Bobby. Speaking of his retirement Bobby said "Looking at it in somewhat of a selfish way, I can't see where I could arrange anything except something of an anti-climax after this year. I don't mind being licked. I got enough lickings in those first seven years to get used to them."

"Bobby told me," Keeler continued, "he would attend many of the championships and would enjoy playing with his old friends. He remarked that he wouldn't have to go into training for these games and might write something about the tournaments."

"Jolly Five" at the "Rec" Tonight

The "Recreation Five" pocket billiard team will be out for revenge tonight when they play the "Jolly Five" of Jewett City for the second time. Last week at Jewett City these two teams staged one of the closest and most interesting match games seen in a long time, Jewett City finally winning by the score 453 to 447.

Tonight at the Recreation parlors another keenly contested match is expected with the spot-light on the Benson-Baker game. As there is no love lost between these two players another tense struggle may be expected. Benson has yet to defeat the Jewett City lad.

A large following will accompany the Jewett City boys to Norwich with some of the "long green" which originally "came from Norwich."

JOE SAVOLDI IS LOST TO NOTRE DAME TEAM

SOUTH BEND, Ind., Nov. 17—(AP)—Matrimony has accomplished what a score of good football teams attempted and failed to do. It has forever halted "Galloping Joe" Savoldi from ripping off touchdowns for Notre Dame.

The big Italian from Three Oaks, Mich., hailed as one of the greatest of Knute Rockne's football great, today was forced to withdraw from Notre Dame because he married and then started divorce proceedings. The withdrawal ended his college football career, which had but three more games ahead of it, and removed him from the great Rambler backfield.

Savoldi secretly married Miss Audrey Koehler of South Bend in May, 1929, before he had gained the football fame that now goes with his name. The secret held until November 1 when his attorney, the same justice of the peace who had married him, filed suit on Savoldi's behalf for a divorce. The football star's friends immediately urged him to reconsider his suit, fearing his expulsion from Notre Dame, and he withdrew the suit. Some of them told friends and the friends gradually spread the "secret" until it came to the attention of university authorities.

Savoldi admitted his marriage but insisted he had never lived with his wife and that he would seek an annulment. The university officials investigated the entire case, ordered Savoldi out of the Drake-Notre Dame game Saturday, and today announced that the big star had withdrawn. They refused to comment on the case further except to admit his withdrawal was the result of disciplinary action prompted by his suit for divorce.

Savoldi received the expected news he 'had withdrawn" sadly and said he had no future plans. It was expected that he would play professional football, although the ranks of the National Professional Football league cannot accept his services until his class is graduated in June.

Coach Rockne refused to comment tonight except to say that he regretted it and that Savoldi was a fine young man.

Savoldi, because of his big hulk of steel and tremendous speed, leaped into prominence in the football world in 1929, when he defeated Wisconsin almost single-handed at Soldier field, Chicago, with his great runs and line smashes. Since that game, he has improved and developed into one of Notre Dame's greatest stars. He has been one of the main offensive cogs in the romp of the Rockne machine, which hasn't been defeated in two seasons. His forte was sweeps around the ends, although from his fullback post, he averaged between four and five yards a thrust this season.

Notre Dame undoubtedly will miss him in the remaining 1930 games with Northwestern, the Army and Southern California, although football stars can be found in profusion on the Rockne football roster.

TROJANS WILLING TO PLAY L. H. A. C. SUNDAY

The Trojans resent the piece published in Monday morning's paper by the Laurel Hill Athletics. We have not purposely avoided playing the L. H. A. C. In baseball the Trojans tried to get a game with them but were refused and later in the season when our schedule was complete they tried to get a game with us but we refused them. The Trojans have played two games this year winning the first 12-0 and tieing the second 6-6.

What kind of teams has the L. H. A. C. been playing? Did they ever play the Belding Bulldogs of Putnam or the New London Boys club as we did? Let them play some of these teams and see how they make out.

The Trojans are willing to play the L. H. A. C. next Sunday. If the L. H. A. C. wishes to accept this offer let them answer through this paper.

REBMAN ELECTED CAPTAIN OF AGGIE FOOTBALL TEAM

STORRS, Nov. 17—(AP)—Although he failed to make his letter this year because of injuries, Robert Rebman, of West Hartford, tonight was elected captain of the Connecticut Aggies football team for next year.

Rebman, a tackle, has played on the varsity team two years and before then played on the freshman team. He prepared at Staten Island preparatory school where he captained the football team in 1927. Because of a broken rib and finger, he played in only two games this year.

THIRD ROUND IN S. N. E. LEAGUE TONIGHT

(Special to The Bulletin)

PLAINFIELD, Nov. 16.—The third round of the Southern New England basketball league's schedule will be played Tuesday evening at the Community house. Four games are again scheduled, the first going on at 7:30 o'clock. Pop Williams and Paul Bitgood will again officiate:

The schedule follows:

7:30 Game

Jewett City vs. Stafford Springs

8 Game

Plainfield vs. Putnam

9:30 Game

New London Tel. vs. Willimantic

10 Game

New London Boys' club vs. Westerly

The first game will find Jewett City strengthened by the addition of Big Ed Walsh, a six-foot-one center, who is expected to add much power to the attack. Plainfield, in the next game, will also be carrying high hopes because of the presence in the line-up of former stars in Bromley and Peterson. Both of these boys made their first appearance last week and made the play of the team a great improvement over the first showing. Putnam expects to have a lot to say about this game however, as Capt. Murphy has reported that several of his stars who did not play last week because of football injuries are again in shape.

The New London Telephone team will be making its first appearance when it starts against the fast-stepping Willimantic outfit at 9:30. This team, which may be the darkhorse of the race, drew byes on the two previous nights. The other New London team, the Boys' club, will face a surprising Westerly team, in the final attraction. Danielson is not scheduled this week.

COLCHESTER, Nov. 17—The Bacon Academy track team outpointed the fast Norwich Free Academy harriers in a close, exciting race on the local course Monday afternoon 30-25. Krupnic the Bacon star, crossed the line first with an easy lead over the N. F. A. star, Wood who came in second. Krupnic with a time of 13:22 minutes and Wood with a time of 13:32 minutes both broke the previous local course record while Zenowitz, another Bacon runner with a time of 13:45 minutes tied the course record, he coming in third. The order in which each team finished: Bacon Academy, Krupnic first; Zenowitz third; Gregory fourth; Falk seventh; Goldberg tenth. N. F. A.—Wood second; Lambert fifth; Wlodarczck sixth; Richardson eighth. A large crowd of students and townspeople were in attendance to cheer the boys on at the finish line. This was the final meet of the season for the Bacon Academy team. Out of five meets this year, the local outfit has won four, Krupnic the Bacon star coming in first in all four contests. The only defeat for Bacon was in the race with N. F. A. at Norwich November 6 when Krupnic came in second and Wood, the N. F. A. star came in first. The four Bacon victories were won when the local outfit outpointed a team from Bulkeley high school of New London, twice outpointed the Lyman Memorial high school harriers of Lebanon and today defeated the fast N. F. A. outfit in a return meet on the local course.

WYKOFF RECOGNIZED BY A. A. U. AS "FASTEST HUMAN"

WASHINGTON, Nov. 17—(AP)— A new "fastest human" was hailed today at the National Amateur Athletic union convention when Mercury-Footed Frank Wykoff of the University of Southern California was officially accredited as the first sprinter in history to cover 100 yards in 9 2-5 seconds without starting blocks or a favoring wind.

"Flying Frank" covered the classic century in the fabulous figures of 9 2-5 twice in the last year but through an oversight only one of these performances was mentioned in the formal application for a record.

After going over the details submitted concerning Wykoff's remarkable dash in the Southern Pacific Association A. A. U., championships at Los Angeles last May 10 with a figurative fine-toothed comb the record committee and then the convention as a whole pronounced the unanimous opinion that the Pacific coast speedboy actually had achieved the feat which once was looked upon as impossible.

FORMER A. A. U. HEAD DIES SUDDENLY AT CONVENTION

WASHINGTON, Nov. 17—(AP)—Joseph B. McCabe, of Boston, a former president of the National Amateur Athletic union, died tonight a few minutes after being stricken with apoplexy while attending this year's A. A. U. convention.

He was stricken while attending a caucus to discuss nominations for the next A. A. U. president. Two physicians were summoned and after a brief consultation pronounced him dead.

CHAMBERLAIN WINS CROSS COUNTRY TITLE IN ALMOST RECORD TIME

(By Orlo Robertson)

NEW YORK, Nov. 17—(AP)—Striding over the rain drenched hills and dales in near record time, Clark Chamberlain, 20-year-old Michigan State harrier, today won the thirty-first intercollegiate varsity cross-country championship run over the Van Cortland park course.

Chamberlain, lone representative of the Michigan college, bounded over the soggy six-mile course in time only 13 seconds short of the record of 30:06.

Penn State's well balanced quintet regained the team championship. Finishing second, third, fifth, ninth and fifteenth, the Nittany Lion harriers easily conquered the best of 19 other college teams to win their fourth intercollegiate title in five years with a total of 29 points.

Chamberlain won by 40 yards, or six seconds, from Richard J. Detwiler of Penn State but the hills, a new experience to the 127-pound midwesterner, came close to doing what the east's foremost runners failed to accomplish in the first four miles.

Going into the rolling hills, an inch deep in mud, on the last lap of the journey, Chamberlain held what appeared to be a safe lead. Thirty yards back trailed Detwiler and Joe McCluskey of Fordham, the favorite, battling for second place. Then came first of the breaks against the eventual winner.

He circled a post wrong and was called back, losing 20 yards of his now precious lead. McCluskey and Detwiler, experienced in the art of running up and down hills, then sprinted. When the first three showed on the flat again, the Fordham flash and his Penn State rival were leading the pack, 30 yards ahead of Chamberlain.

"Right then I thought I was through and came close to giving up," Chamberlain said after the race. "Then I realized that the boys out front probably were as tired as I was, so I started to sprint."

With that sprint, a half-mile from home, the diminutive Michigan runner pulled up on even terms with Detwiler and McCluckey. Maintaining his marvelous burst of speed, Chamberlain swung out in front as McCluskey's leg muscles tightened, forcing him practically to walk in. Detwiler tried to keep the pace but it was too fast, although he finished 14 seconds ahead of C. A. Meisinger, a team mate. McCluskey, completing the course on sheer nerve, walked across the line seventeenth.

Syracuse, which finished second in the team standings, sent its first runner, L. J. Belanger, across the line in fourth place in a great sprint finish with Meisinger. Paul Rekers, of Penn State, staging one of his famous comebacks after a mediocre season, finished fifth. Then came George Barker of New York university, N. P. Hallowell of Harvard and E. A. Gunning of Maine.

Honors in the freshmen race were divided between Syracuse, which placed first as a team, and Frank McKenna and Frederick Knepper of Manhattan, who finished in a dead heat for first place. Their time for the three miles was 14:55.

As the two Manhattan runners came out of the hills, McKenna developed a stitch in his side but Knepper held back to allow his teammate to finish in a tie. And then it was McKenna and not Knepper which brought the dead beat, the former going back 5 yards after Knepper had stopped, thinking he had crossed the finish line.

Although finishing in the first two places, Manhattan was forced to take second place in the team scorings, counting 103 points against Syracuse's 70.

PUTNAM SURPRISES RANGERS BY BEATING THEM 3-2

The much strengthened Putnam eleven defeated New London Sunday afternoon by the score of 3-2. It was a fast and exciting game. End to end play continued the first half and about 15 minutes had passed when Fenton followed up one of his own shots and slipped one past the New London goalie. This ended the scoring for the half. On resuming play Putnam carried the ball into New London territory and Lang who attempted to clear a shot on his goal line miskicked through his own goal. A few minutes later C. Corriea sent a long curling shot that beat the goal-tender all ends up.

With the score 3-0 against them New London staged a last 10 minute rally and succeeded in converting two corner kicks into goals.
